These vols. contain copies and duplicates of despatches and some original letters from General Conway and Maurice Morgann. The latter are very interesting.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Earl Cornwallis, dated Whitehall, 9th Nov. 1780. Sends His Majesty's thanks for his Lordship's victory over the rebels near Camden. Approves of his determination to punish those traitors who had repeated the violation of their oaths of allegiance, broken their parole, and taken arms against the King. His civil regulations in South Carolina are approved of, and it being the King's desire to convince the people of America that no abridgment of their former liberties is intended, he is, therefore, to throw the conduct of civil matters into their former channels, as far as he shall judge expedient. Understanding that Congress evades an exchange of the Convention troops with the garrison of Charlestown, suggests ways of getting rid of the prisoners of war, for the purpose of saving the public the expense of maintaining them.

General Clinton to General Grey, dated New York, 3rd July 1779. Complains of the reinforcements due in May not having arrived there, and of his having no camp equipage to enable him to continue his move. Was lucky in his first attempt to seize Varpland and Stoney. S. W. Howe's army at Brandywine amounts to 13,000 men, Mr. W[ashington] can meet him (Genl. Clinton) with 14,000 men besides militia. The eastern provinces are starving. Has not heard from Europe for three months, and has no money. Would not see another campaign so neglected for all the world.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 3rd Jan. 1781. Gives his reasons for regretting that Col. Ferguson's misfortune compelled Lord Cornwallis to require Gen. Leslie to quit the Chesapeake and proceed to Cape Fear river. Fears the second abandonment of Portsmouth, after taking possession of it, will be productive of the worst effects to the King's service. Thinks the French will send part of their force into the Chesapeake when they hear that they (the English) have abandoned it. The King desires him to send a detachment from New York on an expedition to the Chesapeake. British recruits are embarking at Gravesend for Charlestown.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 17th Feb. 1781. Approves of his orders for establishing a permanent post at Elizabeth river. Trusts that the troops he is preparing for embarkation are to be employed in reducing Maryland and Pennsylvania to the King's obedience, while Lord Cornwallis and Brigadier-General Arnold subdues Virginia, for such is the low condition of the authority and finances of the Congress, and the weakness of Washington's army, that little opposition is to be expected from that quarter. Accounts from France of M. de Ternay having sailed from Rhode Island on the 25th Dec.

Abstract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 7th March 1781. As the revolt of the Pennsylvania line and Jersey brigade will affect Washington's present force, and prevent its being reunited by new levies, thinks Sir Henry will avail himself of that General's weakness by sending a considerable force to the head of the Chesapeake. The effect of General Arnold's successful enterprise up James river. The American levies in the King's service are more than the whole of the enlisted troops in the service of the Congress. Measures to be adopted for enlisting American prisoners for the service in the West Indies. The westerly winds for the last two months have prevented the Warwick and Solebay, with their convoy, getting further than Plymouth.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 4th April 1781. Lord Cornwallis, after gaining two advantages over the rebels, passed beyond Salem, in North Carolina. The King approves of the behaviour of Brigadier-General Arnold and others mentioned. Has received private news of the inhabitants soliciting arms, to use in conjunction with the King's forces. He has a favourable opportunity of assisting them, as Washington's army is in a low condition. It is said that 26 sail of the line, under Count de Grasse, and seven transports, with 7 to 12,000 land forces, sailed from France on the 22nd of last month. Six of these ships are to go to the East Indies, and the rest to the West Indies. The fleet under Admiral Darby was waiting off Cape Clear on the 25th of last month. The associated refugees are sensible of Sir Henry's kind attention to them, for whom he is to find rations.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 2nd May 1781. Vice-Admiral Arbuthnot overtook the French fleet before they entered the Chesapeake, and defeated the French Admiral's project of carrying his squadron and a detachment of French troops to attack Gen. Arnold in concert with the rebel forces. Major-General Phillips arrived in James river with reinforcements, and it is hoped that Lord Cornwallis will affect a junction with him. Informs him, by command of the King, that the recovery of the southern provinces, and the prosecution of the war from north to south, is to be considered the principal object for the employment of all troops under his command.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Earl Cornwallis, dated Whitehall, 4th June 1781. The French fleet, defeated from Rhode Island, by Admiral Arbuthnot. Lord Cornwallis's victory at Guildford. Instructions for carrying on the war.

Copy of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton. Whitehall, 6th June 1781. Is pleased that Lord Cornwallis sees the importance of pushing the war on the side of Virginia. Hopes that the troops from Ireland will arrive in time to join his Lordship, or form another army under Lord Rawdon, to drive the enemy out of the upper country, while Lord Cornwallis and Gen. Phillips are employed in reducing the lower parts.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 4th July 1780. Measures to be taken for obtaining the submission of the inhabitants of Charlestown, &c. Trusts he will find an opportunity of prosecuting his plan of operations in the Chesapeake, from the success of which, added to the reduction of Carolina, he expects the recovery of the whole of the southern provinces in the course of this campaign. The Hessian and Anspach are about to embark.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 7th July 1781. The King approves of his pushing the war southward, with all the force he can spare from New York. Three regiments, 3,000 British recruits and 2,000 Germans, have been sent home. The French fleet will proceed to North America, and Sir Geo. Rodney will follow them, to prevent their interrupting him in his operations, and the better to effect this, Admiral Digby will reinforce Rodney with three ships of the line.

Extract of a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated Whitehall, 17th July 1781, relating to the causes which have increased the prospect of bringing the southern colonies to obedience.

Rear-Admiral Digby to Mr. Secretary Townshend, dated New York, 15th Dec. 1782. Hopes that the trade of privateers will be knocked up this winter. Fears that the convoy at Philadelphia will escape. The defence of New York must depend upon Admiral Pigot next spring.

Rear-Admiral Digby to Mr. Secretary Townshend, dated New York, 19th Nov. 1782, about the Loyalists, &c.

Maurice Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 10th May 1782, about the state of America.

Maurice Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 12th June 1782. Reasons on the present state of America, the temper of the people, and the prospect which now offers of peace.

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 17th June 1782, desires to leave America.

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 17th Aug. 1782, relating to the effect produced by the publication there of the proposal of independence.

M. Morgann to the Earl of Shelburne, dated New York, 11th Sept. 1782. The publication of the offer made by Mr. Grenville at Paris has produced a stillness among the mass of the people in America. Encloses a paper by order of Sir Guy Carleton.

A paper headed "Mr. Williams about 10th Aug.," relating to the committee of the General Assembly of Massachusetts, and the feeling of the people of Hampshire, &c. towards their leaders and Great Britain. In Mr. Morgann's of 11th Sept. 1782.

M. Morgann to the Earl of Shelburne, dated New York, 4th Oct. 1782, about the state of the provinces, the proceedings of the American leaders to enlarge their power, &c.

Copy of information from the county of Albany, dated 29th Sept. 1782, relating to the desire of the people for peace, and the feeling towards the French and American armies.

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 4th Oct. 1782, about himself and his situation.

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 9th Oct. 1782, relating to the mode of paying the provincial corps (in America).

Maurice Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 11th Oct. 1782. Encloses for the Earl of Shelburne a printed extract from a newspaper, dated Philadelphia, 5th Oct. (1782), containing the resolution of Congress not to treat for a separate peace.

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 29th Oct. 1782. Thanks his Lordship for the pension granted him by the Treasury. Gives his opinion as to the fate of the American provinces as soon as the external compressions of England are taken off them. Complains of Mr. Edmund Burke, &c., who may be very anxious "to represent himself as the friend and "champion of the people, but is really only the trumpeter of a particular connection."

M. Morgann to Lord Shelburne, dated New York, 16th Dec. 1782. Gives an account of the state of the country. Desires to return home.

Vol. 69.

M. Morgann to Lord, dated New York, 16th Jan. 1783. Encloses copy of a report (to Sir Guy Carleton) and papers relative to American money.

DOWN.

Report of Messrs. William Smith, M. Morgann, and others (to Sir Guy Carleton), dated New York, 30th Dec. 1782, relative to compelling the money contractors' agents to draw Bills of Exchange for the use of the military chest below par, to which is annexed, Sir Guy Carleton's commission of 1st Dec. 1782, appointing them to enquire into that matter; minutes of their proceedings therein, Harley and Drummond's account, and an account of cash deposited with Messrs. Gordon, Bid-dulph, and Gordon, and by them appropriated to the public. In Mr. Morgann's of 16th January 1783.

Considerations on the nature of American money on the issuing the dollar by authority at 4s. 8d. sterling, for the pay and subsistence of the army on the nature of the contract for the remitting of money for the use of the military chest, and of the rate of exchange between New York and London, the causes of its falling, and the probable means of prevention.

Considerations on the compelling the army to receive its pay in dollars valued at 4s. 8d. sterling. In Mr. M. Morgann's of 16th Jan. 1783.

Mr. M. Morgann to . . . , dated New York, 19th Jan. 1783. Encloses provincial newspapers for Lord Shelburne.

Remarkable contents of American newspapers from 11th Dec. 1782 to 11th Jan. 1783. In Mr. Morgann's of the 19th Jan. 1783.

Brook Watson, Commissary General, to Richard Burke, Esq., dated New York, 17th Aug. 1782. Gives an account of the state of his department, from 14th June to the present time.

Brook Watson to the Marquis of Rockingham, dated New York, 18th Aug. 1782. Has spared no pains to reduce the contingent expense of the army. Thinks that 15,000 men might have been added to it without additional expense. This letter is marked private.

Brook Watson to the Earl of Shelburne, dated New York, 12th Sept. 1782. Encloses duplicate of his private letter of the 18th Aug. to the Marquis of Rockingham, whose death compels him to solicit the Earl's attention to it.

Joshua Upham to General Carleton, dated New York, 12th Nov. 1782. States that the common people of America desire to be at peace with Great Britain, and gives the terms for peace which they are willing to accept.

A note to the Earl of Shelburne, dated New York, 26th July 1782, enclosing an extract of a letter from a gentleman of New York, dated New York, 15th July 1782, relating to the intended messages of peace from Great Britain being accepted by America; the feeling of the Americans towards their leaders; Washington's position, and his expectation of help from France, the arrival of 30 odd vessels at Cape Hatteras; the feeling towards Rochambeau's army, and the doings of Rodney and Hood.

Extract of instructions from the Minister of Finance of the United States of America and the Secretary of the Board of War, dated Philadelphia, 11th July 1782, containing propositions to be made to the German prisoners of war at Reading, to which is annexed Captain Bowen's address at Reading on the 30th July 1782, in which he laid those propositions before the prisoners there.

Walter Patterson to Lord Shelburne (duplicate), dated Island Saint John, 22nd June 1782. Congratulates him on being appointed Secretary of State.

Major General J. Patterson to the Earl of Shelburne, Halifax, 29th Oct. 1782, relating to Nova Scotia and measures taken for the protection of its inhabitants.

A sketch of the province of Nova Scotia, and chiefly of such parts as are settled. In Major-General Patterson's of 29th Oct. 1782.

Governor Parr to General Grey, Halifax, Nova Scotia, 23rd Oct. 1782, mentions his arrival at Halifax in Oct., and describes his home there; his quietness disturbed by providing for families from New York who have come to settle in Nova Scotia. Complains of the fortifications at Halifax which cost 180,000*l*.

Governor Parr to Lord Shelburne, Halifax, Nova Scotia, 14th Nov. 1782, relating to the German recruits, and the benefit it would be to the service where he is if he were restored to his rank in the army.

Governor Parr to the Earl of Shelburne, Halifax, Nova Scotia, 29th Nov. 1782. The people of this province appear to be much attached to Government, except in that part, called Cobi-quid at the head of the basin of Minas, where dissenters from the North of Ireland are settled; 300 refugees have arrived at Annapolis from New York and more are expected.

Report of the state of the fortifications at St. John's, Newfoundland, 1782. Signed Robert Pringle.

General scheme of the Newfoundland fishery for the year 1782. Signed by Vice-Admiral John Campbell, Governor, 28th Oct. 1782.

Captain Twiss, commanding engineer in Canada, to the Earl of Shelburne, dated Quebec, 24th Oct., but endorsed 21st Oct. 1782. Thinks no European power could long support Canada by force against America independent.

Thomas Carleton to Lord Shelburne, Quebec, 16th Sept. 1782. Presents Captain Twiss to his Lordship. Intends going to England if he does not find anything going on at New York. (In Captain Twiss' letter of 21st Oct. 1782.)

General abstract of expenses incurred in Canada under the instruction of the Controller of Works between 1st July 1776 and 30th June 1778. In Captain Twiss' letter of 21st Oct. 1782.

Abstracts of expenses incurred under the commanding engineer in Canada, between 1st July 1778 and 31st Dec. 1781. In Captain Twiss' letter of 21st Oct. 1782.

Lieut.-General Leslie to General Sir Guy Carleton, Charlestown, 18th Nov. 1782. His intentions of assisting the Loyalists in returning the enemy; their negroes have proved abortive by the behaviour of Mr. Matthew, the rebel governor, and General Green. The Loyalists going to the East Florida and Jamaica will, he apprehends, complain to Sir Guy about their allowance of provisions.

The embarkation return of His Majesty's troops under the command of Lieut.-General Alexander Leslie from Charlestown, 30th Oct. 1782.

List of transports appointed to receive the garrison of Charlestown.

List of ships gone to Halifax under convoy of His Majesty's ships "Perseverance" and "Ceres."

List of ships left at St. Augustine to be sent to New York in the spring.

List of ships bound to St. Lucie under convoy of His Majesty's ship "Hornet."

List of ships bound to Jamaica under the direction of Lieut. Curling, &c.

List of ships to England under the direction of Lieut. Arnold, and under convoy of His Majesty's ship "Adamant."

Abstract of the list of transports appointed to receive the garrison of Charlestown, 19th Nov. 1782.

Mr. Fr. Baring's remarks on the article of logwood, 3rd Dec. 1872.

— to Lord Shelburne, 18th Sept. 1782. Importance of the gum trade from Africa, Senegal the grave for Europeans. The benefits derived from its trade cannot compensate for the numbers that perish. Goree of still less value than Senegal. Senegal when in the hands of France did not produce one fourth of the gum that has been imported by the English. No place on the coast of Africa can be ceded to France of so little importance to England as Senegal and Goree. Besides this there are various particulars relative to the principal articles of the African trade (slaves, gum, ivory) and the settlements where they are to be had.

Mr. F. Baring to Lord Shelburne, 24th Sept. 1782, on the African trade, Cape of Good Hope, &c.

The contents of this volume are printed in Division II, and not in Division I, to which they would seem more naturally to belong, for the reasons given at p. 140 of the Appendix to the Third Report of the Commissioners.

1. Keith, Sir Robert Murray. Extract of a letter from, to the Right Hon. Ch. J. Fox, dated Vienna, 4th May 1782.

Prince Kaunitz's remark on the English mode of negotiating at Paris. "I am told," said he (somewhat deridingly), "there is again a flock of English at Paris. Is it possible that your ministry can hope to reap any advantage from such a mode of negotiating with the French Court."

2. Trevor, the Hon. Jo., to Mr. Secretary Fox, dated Ratisbon, 16th April 1782. Account of a conversation with a son of M. de Brentano, one of the Elector Palatine's ministers at the Diet, Aide-de-camp to the Comte de Rochambeau. He very incautiously mentioned when, where, and with whom the latter was to embark on his return to America (the Duc de Lauzun, the Marquis de la Fayette, the Marquis de Laval, and the Baron de Viomenil). He says that the French have but a bad opinion of their affairs in that country, they consider the present Congress as much degenerated from that which governed America two years ago. Congress not very fond of the French. Public virtue on the decline in that country. Cabal and intrigue prevail in their public elections. The French consider them as a steady persevering people, without activity, virtue, or spirit of union to preserve an independence; that they have neither the vices nor the virtues of the English; some of their greatest admirers at a distance are disappointed in their national character upon a nearer view, and surprised at the long exertions they have made in support of their union and independence. Nothing was clearer than that the people might be conquered by well disciplined European troops, but that the country was unconquerable. The paper money (now worth little), amounted to between 200 and 300 millions of livres. France rather doubtful but that America may return to the mother country, and prefer some honourable and easy connection with Great Britain, short of independence, to a dangerous and precarious independence of its own.

3. Sir James Harris to Mr. Fox, dated Petersburg, 24th May 1782 (extract). Has not received any ministerial answer from the Vice-Chancellor, but believes that the Empress is pleased with his letter, and that he shall receive in his first conference with Count Osterman strong assurances of her friendship. She dreads nothing so much as being drawn into a war.

4. Lord Shelburne to Sir James Harris, at Petersburg, 27th July 1782. (Extract.) On the Russian mediation.

5. Sir James Harris to Lord Grantham, dated Petersburg, 20th Dec. 1782. Report of what passed between him and the Russian minister, Count Goertz, on the subject of a triple alliance between Russia, Sweden, and France, to form which were the first instructions of the latter.

6. Sir James Harris to Lord Grantham, dated Petersburg, 31 Jan. 1783 (secret and confidential). Conversation with Prince Potemkin on the neutral flag. He speaks very unguardedly of the Empress. "Here," said he, "we never look backwards or forward, and are governed solely by the impulse of the hour. A good and faithful subject can never know how to regulate his conduct. If I was sure of being approved when I did good, or being blamed when I did wrong, I should know on what I was to depend, but these discerning qualities are wanting, and if the passions are flattered, the judgment is never consulted."

7. Sir Jo. Stepney to Lord Grantham, dated Berlin, 22nd Oct. 1782. Account of his first audience, and of the long conversation he held with his Prussian Majesty on the general politics of Europe, the British possessions in the East Indies, the American war, the state of Gibraltar, &c. The letter continues, "His appearance was in all respects exceedingly good, considering his years and known infirmities."

8. Sir Jo. Stepney to Lord Grantham. Berlin, 8th Feb. 1783. (Extract.) Anecdote of Prince Henry of Prussia.

9. Sir Thomas Wroughton to Fox. Stockholm, 3rd May 1782 (in cypher). Account of the French subsidy of 3,000,000 livres to Sweden, for naval uses, in four quarterly payments. The King has represented the services he has rendered to France, by being the first promoter of the armed neutrality, procuring her naval stores, carrying on her commerce under neutral flags, &c. Has laid a plan before the French ministry for building three line of battle ships a year. The King's partiality to the French is well known; of late the ridiculous distinctions he has shown to some French travellers has given offence. The French Charged'Affaires is treated with peculiar favour.

10. Extract of a letter from Mr. Eden, dated 22nd June 1782. Russian frigates arrived from Cadiz, bring advice of the combined fleet consisting of 36 sail of the line. The attack of Gibraltar has been laid aside till September preparatory to which boats are building, eight to carry 20 guns each, and to be covered over in the manner of cassemates. The constructions enormous and unweildy, such is the report of the Russian officers; which is scarcely credible.

11. Mr. Eden to Lord Grantham. Copenhagen, 26th Oct. 1782. (Extract.) Containing curious particulars relative to the Danish trade companies. Paper currency. The Danish West Indian colonies, &c. Letters from the Isle of France contain an account of the defeat of General Munro by Hyder Ally. The foregoing French intelligence sent from Mr. Hanbury at Hamburgh to Mr. Fox. Rec. 29th April 1782.

12. Sir William Hamilton to Fox. Caserta, 30th April 1782. (Extract.) Great preparations making at Cadiz, Algesiras, and in the Camp of St. Roche for a more than ever vigorous attack of Gibraltar.

13. Sir William Hamilton to Fox. Caserta, 7th May 1782. (Extract.) Project for a general attack upon Gibraltar by sea and land. The French to act in concert with the Spaniards. This plan cannot be ripe for execution before the middle of July.

14. Lord Mountstuart to Lord Hillsborough. Turin, 13th April 1782. (Extract.) The Spaniards determined to press the siege of Gibraltar. Spanish navy in bad condition.

15. John Collet, Consul at Genoa, to Fox. Genoa, 22nd June 1782. The Spanish floating batteries against Gibraltar: the attack is said to be deferred until August; the combined fleet, five French and 25 Spanish ships of the line, sailed from Cadiz the 4th inst.

16. Sir Robert Ainslie to ———. Constantinople, 1st May 1782. (Extract.) Inclosing an extract of a letter from Bussora which follows.

17. William Digges La Touche, Esq., to Sir Robert Ainslie. Bassora, 17th March 1782. Military operations in India.

18. William Digges La Touche, Esq., to Sir Robert Ainslie. Bussora, 14th May 1782. (Extract.) Trincomalee taken by storm by Sir Edward Hughes, 8th Jan. Calicut surrendered to Major Abingdon, 13th Feb., after their grand magazines had been blown up. The former is in the principal bay of the island of Ceylon, the latter on the Malabar coast belonging to Hyder Ally; the conquest of great importance; the Governor and Council may be supplied from it with timber which there is much want of. The principal horde of Arabs of Bussora has since been pretty quiet. From Shiraz it is said that Ally Morul Cawn has put to death Acbar Cawn, his prime minister, and several of the principal Cawns for a conspiracy against him, &c.

19. The Hon. Edward Hay, Envoy Extraordinary at Lisbon, to the Duke of Richmond. Lisbon, 12th July 1766. (Extract.) Inclosing a decree of the King of Portugal, whereby shares in the several trading companies established in Portugal shall be deemed chattels personal to circulate in trade, and to answer all the purposes of ready cash. Mr. Hay's remarks thereon; judged to be very prejudicial to foreign trade.

An English translation of the foresaid decree. 21st June 1766.

20. Robert Walpole to Fox. Lisbon, 24th April 1782. (Extract.) Great preparations making for an attack on Gibraltar by land and sea.

21. Robert Walpole to Lord Grantham. Lisbon, 23rd Nov. 1782. Inclosing duplicates of the despatches sent by the Antelope "packet" which was taken by the French on her way from Lisbon to Falmouth. Several British subjects who had abandoned their royal allegiance to the King of Spain and retired into Portugal, have been given up to the Spanish Government. The Portuguese lending their ships to Spain and covering Spanish effects returning from America, &c.; is evidently assisting the enemies of Great Britain.

22. Robert Walpole to Lord Grantham. Lisbon, 23rd Nov. 1782. Orders from Madrid for preparing 24 ships of the line at Cadiz to sail with 14 French ships and 14,000 to 16,000 troops, and eight more French ships expected from Brest to go against Jamaica and the rest of the British settlements in America. Camp at St. Roc, there remain there from 15,000 to 20,000 men. Count D'Estaing is arrived at Madrid. It is said he is to command the expedition preparing at Cadiz.

23. Robert Walpole to Lord Grantham. Lisbon, 5th Oct. 1782. Success of the garrison of Gibraltar in destroying the Spanish floating batteries, in which was killed, 390; wounded, 641; drowned, 80; taken prisoners, 397. Spanish ships in bad condition, and indifferently manned; their crews, it is said, discouraged by our late successful fire on the floating batteries. At Cadiz there are only 2,000 men in garrison; the walls on the side of the bay with the ramparts have 42 pieces of artillery with some 12-inch mortars; the land gate is dismantled; the Castle of Sebastian has 18 pieces of 24. The King is resolved to continue the siege by sea and land. Approves of the Duc de Crillon's conduct.

24. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 10th Sept. 1776. Some account of Count Shulenberg, Count de la Lippe, and other German officers in the Portuguese service. Present policy respecting the wines of Portugal, prejudicial to the trade thereof. Their Brazil settlements well provided and in a good state of defence. The Portuguese have an utter hatred to the Spaniards, full as strong as at the Revolution in 1640; their present army of 18,000 effective troops may do something provided nine out of ten of the officers are foreigners, not else. Sir John's opinion touching the revolted colonies in America which he had communicated to Lord Rochfort. An Italian improvisatore has directed the people of Lisbon for some months, and is on the point of departing for London. Intends giving him a letter to Sir Sampson Gordon.

25. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 19th Sept. 1777. The military in Portugal not liable to prosecutions for debt. Sir John not at that time upon speaking terms with Mr. Walpole. Political state of Portugal. Sir John's opinion of the state of affairs in America somewhat different from that of his Lordship and Colonel Barre.

26. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 11th Jan. 1780. Inclosing a letter from Captain Blanket at the Cape of Good Hope, which had been kept up a fortnight by Mr. Walpole; it came in a Portuguese Indian ship. The Queen of Portugal given over by her physicians.

27. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 18th Sept. 1780. Count Nesselrod, the new Russian minister, speaks with extraordinary respect of his Lordship. Has invited the Court of Lisbon to join in the League of the armed neutrality, which has been refused. The Russian fleet.

28. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 22nd Feb. 1782. Affairs at Gibraltar. Account by Capt. Blankett. Affairs at Gibraltar, second letter.

29. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 19th Aug. 1781. Mr. de Crillon, 27th July, was then on his passage from Carthage to Minorca with nearly 50 transports, containing 10,000 Spanish troops, escorted by four ships of the line and two frigates. The combined fleet at their departure from Cadiz consisted of no less than 54 of the line. They carried with them a large store of fascines and 300,000 sacks for sand bags. The Plate fleet of 20 sail arrived safe at Cadiz the 28th ultimo. Report of a rebellion in Persia. The new Ynca's manifesto thereon.

30. W. Grenville, Esq. Lettre a Mr. Mitchell, St. James, 31 d'Aout, 1762 (Traduction) et lettre separee au même de la même date. Mémoire pour servir à réponse aux remarques contenues dans la lettre a Mons. Mitchell, en date de 18 de Sept. 1762. Replique au mémoire remis par Mons. le Comte Finkenstein, au Sieur Mitchell, Ministre Plenipotentiaire du Roy de la Grande Bretagne, auprès le Roy de Prusse, dans une lettre dattee a Berlin 1 Oct. 1762.

31. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 15th March 1782. Specifying the restrictions on British trade. The King of Morocco has declared his late treaty with Spain at an end, and the English restored to all privileges. Surrender of Morocco.

32. Sir Jo. Hort to Mr. Fox, Lisbon, 25th April, 1782. (Extract.) The new Book of Rates, very inimical to the British trade, from the extraordinary high duties. Of woollens alone among 52 British articles four only are kept within the stipulated bounds of 23 per cent. More than three fourths are from 30 to 50, and even above 70 per cent. Some relaxations, however, towards Irish importations.

33. Mr. Jos. Green to Sam. Corbett, Esq. Birmingham, 3 Aug. 1782. Respecting a petition of his brothers, which Sir John Hort has forwarded to the Queen of Portugal.

34. Mr. William Green to his brother Joseph at Birmingham. Lisbon, 21st Aug. 1782. On the hardships the hardware manufacturers are like to suffer by the new book of rates, with a copy of the new duties on sundry articles.

34. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 25th April 1782. Is not very clear about giving his Lordship joy on his promotion; considers it at a "fearful period." Bad state of the Portuguese military, officered by valets de chambre and men cashiered 20 years ago by Count la Lippe for crimes or incapacity. Great preparations at Cadiz for a general attack upon Gibraltar.

35. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 6th June 1782. Hardships of the British commerce, Taxgatherers, lawyers, and priests consume full three fourths of the substance of Portugal. The Brazilians discontented, and in the very capital whisper their right to free trade. Remonstrances against the new book of rates, and tumults threatened on its first coming into operation on the 14th inst. Gibraltar formidably attacked by land and sea; the garrison ready to receive them. Provisions there unsound but abundant. Mr. de Pombal protested when dying, "That of his King and country he had no pardon to ask for any of his counsels, alluding it was thought to the great executions of the nobility, whose families, all but the Aveiro branch, after 24 years have had an acquittal." Sir John is desirous of returning home.

36. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 23rd June 1782. Various intelligence. The book of rates was opened on the day appointed with general acquiescence. The King of Portugal, "though he hates a heretic worse than the devil," betrayed an extraordinary gladness on the late victory at Dominica.

37. Sir Jo. Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 1st Aug. 1782. Mr. Edmund Burke is delivered after suffering hard usage in the Castle of Santi Petri, near Cadiz, from misinterpreting the signal. Portugal is said to have acceded to the Neutral Alliance, and the acknowledgement of American Independency, both arising from apprehension and the impotent state of their army and navy. By advices from Buenos Ayres, through Rio de Janiero, the rebellion continues in Peru. 50,000 Spaniards are said to have been slain in and out of battle, including the miners; the engines destroyed and the mines filled up.

38. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 22nd Aug. 1782. Count St. Vincent, the only tolerable man in this country for the first naval place, is just made second.

Inclosing a Lisbon Almanack, or Court Calendar, the first ever composed here; the effect of the new Academy of Sciences, and some Rodney Ribbons, a present to Lady Shelburne. The fashion was led by Mrs. Walpole, the handsomest Englishwoman in Lisbon.

39. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 10th Nov. 1782. State of the combined fleet. The garrison of Gibraltar in perfect health and spirits. The enemies carcasses not displaced one stone. The asserted breach was an absolute lie.

40. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 23rd Nov. 1782. On some misrepresentations respecting the British and Irish trade; the Spaniards misreport the state of the combined and British fleets in the engagement. 20th Oct. 1782. Encloses a list of the combined fleets.

41. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 19th Jan. 1783. Further particulars of the Siege of Gibraltar. D'Estaing is to carry 19,000 troops with him in his intended expedition against Jamaica.

42. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 25th Jan. 1783. Advices is received of the embarkation of the troops at Cadiz.

43. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 9th Feb. 1783. On the accession of the Court of Portugal to the Neutral Alliance. Siege of Gibraltar.

44. Sir John Hort to Lord Shelburne. Lisbon, 2nd March 1783. Congratulations on the conclusions of the preliminaries. The Portuguese forward in their compliance to the North Americans. Mr. Howard has visited every prison and hospital at Lisbon, and approves their management. Proceeds in a few days for Spain. Encloses a decree of the Court of Portugal, 15th Feb. 1783, for re-admitting North American ships. (Printed.)

45. Alexander Graham, British Consul at Fayal, to —. 12th July 1782. (Extract.) Affairs in South America.

46. Letter to Monsieur Semolin, dated St. James's, 4th May 1782. On the Russian mediation for a separate peace with Holland.

47. Mr. Secretary Fox to Mr. de Semolin. St. James's, 28th June 1782. On the Russian mediation.

48. — to Count de Lusi. St. James's, 9th May 1782. About refusal of the Russian mediation.

49. — to Count de Lusi. St. James's, 6th May 1782. On the Russian and Prussian alliance.

Here follow a great number of statistical papers respecting the trade, &c. of Russia and other countries, of which a letter of Captain Blankett, 25th Dec. 1774, is the most interesting.

Corsica. A paper from General Paoli, describing of what advantage that Island would be to Great Britain. May 1782, grounding thereon the proposal of an offer to give up Gibraltar and Minorca to Spain in return for the sovereignty of Corsica.

Vol. 35.

The reasons for printing the contents of a portion of this volume in Division II. and not in Division I., to which it would naturally belong, have been stated at page 140 of the Appendix to the Third Report of the Commissioners.

16. A la Venerie, 8 Juin 1782.—Sardaigne (le Roi de) au Marq. de Cordon. Signed de Hauteville. Influence of Lord Rodney's victory over De Grasse. France will not treat separately from her allies. Conduct of Holland.

17. De Mirabel (le Comte) au Marq. de Cordon (Extrait). No date. Negotiations and conduct of Lord Rockingham's ministry.

25. 24 May 1782.—M. Simolin (M.) a Mr. Marcoff, on Mr. Fox's speech in Parliament about Mr. Grenville's mission. In Lord Shelburne's handwriting.

26. Londres, le 26 Novem. 1782.—The same, au Comte d'Osterman (decyphered). Arrival of M. de Raineval from Paris. His interview with Lord Shelburne. Cordiality of the latter, who is anxious for peace, but it must be recollected that the war party in England is still strong. Rumours as to the conditions proposed. Exchange of Gibraltar for Porto Rico.

31. Londr., 23 Avril 1782.—De Lusi (le Comte) (au Roi de Prusse. Mr. Fox offers Carte Blanche to the K. of Prussia, as Mediator for Peace, and mentions the terms he, Mr. Fox, would be ready to subscribe to. Projects for a Northern Alliance.

32. Londr., 26 Avril 1782.—The same subjects.

33. Londr., 11th Juin 1782.—(Extrait.) The same subject.

34. Potsdam, le 17 Juin 1782.—Prusse (le Roi de) au Comte de Lusi. Reply to the preceding letters.

35. Potsdam, 27 Juin 1782.—The peace and the projected Northern Alliance.

36. Breslau, 26 Aout 1782.—The same subjects.

*36. Berlin, 3 Sept. 1782.—(Extrait.) The same subjects.

37. No date. The same, au meme (Extrait). He is assured that Spain has offered Minorca, Oran, and Mazalquivir in exchange for Gibraltar, and he thinks England would be a gainer by the bargain, on account of the expense of maintaining Gibraltar, &c.

38. Potsdam, 27 Jan. 1783.—The same, au meme. Probability of England preserving a strict neutrality for at least ten years to come.

39. Montbrillant, 11 Juin 1768. Extract from a letter addressed to the same, au Baron Diède de Furstenstein (Extrait), marked under Baron Bernstorff's cover on a separate sheet, but not in his handwriting. Journey of the Prince Royal of Prussia to Hanover.

43. Passy, 31st March 1782.—Franklin (Dr. Benj.) to David Hartley, Esq. Congratulates him on the change in the disposition of the English towards America, hopes the change of the ministry will be attended with salutary effects; he is but one of five in the Commission (Messrs. Adams, Jay, Laurens, and Jefferson, and all the others), and has no knowledge of their sentiments; in case of the death or absence of any, the remainder have power to act.

44. Passy, 31st March 1782.—The same to Mr. Wm. Hodgson, Merchant, Coleman Street. Has just heard there are 200 American Prisoners in Ireland destitute, and dying in numbers. Kindness to captives on both sides may promote a reconciliation; he has no correspondent in Ireland, and wishes to be put in a way to sending them some relief; does he think the new Ministry better disposed than the last? if so, would wish him to lay before the former propositions for the exchange of prisoners slighted by the latter; he wishes to finish this devilish contest as soon as possible.

46. Londr., 12 April 1782.—Bourdieu (Monsr. James), à Mr. Vander Oudermonlen (Extrait-intercepté). Relates to the negotiations for peace with Holland.

47. Londr., 12 Avril 1782.—The same to Mons. Pache, l'ainé (Extrait intercepté). A commercial intrigue suggested as the first step towards a negotiation for a general peace.

48. Ostende, 17 Mai 1782.—Larcher (Mons. G.) a Valentine Thurne, at Mr. Mawley (or Mawby), No. 3, Southampton Row. A letter of caution. Relates apparently to the secret negotiations for peace with Holland.

49. Londres, 28 Mai 1782.—Bourdieu (Mons). Extracts of two of his letters to Mons. de la Sonde. The same subject.

50. Paris, 6 Juin 1782.—Pache l'ainé lettre a Mr. J. Bourdieu. Prospects of peace. Naval operations.

51. Paris, 6th June 1782.—Alexander (Mr. W.) to Wm. Adam, Esq., Adelphi.

52. Paris, 17th June 1782.—J. N. to Mr. Philip Wray (via Hennesy and Co., at Ostend). On the French politics of the time, and chiefly adverting to the expected peace. "On Sunday evening Mr. Grenville received his new powers, which are now extended so as to include America, to the exclusion of Mr. Oswald, who is however, it seems, ordered to remain here. . . . If peace should not be made a separate distinct treaty between England and America will probably be thought expedient."

53. St. James's, 7th Aug. 1782.—Fraser (Mr.) to Lord Shelburne. Inclosing a copy of a letter from Paris, written in white ink.

54. Paris, 21st July 1782.—Chalmers (Mr. G.) to Mr. Philip Wray. French politics of the day. This is the letter mentioned in the preceding number, enclosed in Mr. Fraser's to Lord Shelburne, 7th Aug.

55. Nantes, 10th Aug. 1782.—Laurens (Henry, Esq.) to James Bourdieu, Esq. (written partly in Cypher). He has been extremely ill; is about to return to America, as soon as he can provide proper means.

On various points in the negotiations for peace, especially the terms to be given to the American loyalists, the whole tone of the letter is very defiant of the English ideas on these subjects, and seems to have aroused the indignation of the maker of the index to this volume, who indulges in some severe observations.

57. Londres, 23 Aout. 1782.—French spy, name unknown, a Mademoiselle Ex, under cover, a Mademoiselle de Frances, Rue basse de Rampart, Paris, dated Londres, 23 Aout 1782. Fox is in Ireland, Grantham is on the continent, Flood is in Paris. The latter is come to watch the negotiations for peace with a view to their effects on Ireland.

58. Bruzelles, 11 Octor. 1782.—Tort (Monsr.) a Messrs. Bourdieu and Cholet. Ambiguous conduct of M. de Vergennes en Mons. Tort threatens to "mordre comme un chien enragé."

59. Paris, 28 Nov. 1782.—Pache l'ainé, M^r. a Monsr. Bourdieu. Negotiations for peace. Preparations for the continuance of war. French finance.

60. Londres, 10 Janv. 1783.—Bourdieu, Chollet, and Bourdieu, au Marq. de Castries. M. Pitôt has been captured on his way from Ireland, and has had to throw his despatches into the sea.

61. Victory, St. Hellens, 31 May 1778. — Blankett (Capt. J.) to Ld. Shelb.

62. Versails., 4 Sept. 1781.—De Vergennes (le Comte) a Chev^r de la Luzerne. Copy (decyphered). Attitude to be observed by France with regard to the American Congress, in the stability of which M. de Vergennes does not seem to have any great confidence. This letter has Lord Shelburne's penoil marks in the margin.

63. Versails., 22 Oct. 1780.—The same subject.

64. Sept. and Oct. 1780.—His opinion of certain leading characters among the Americans, to wit, Franklin, Silas Deane, Adams, Izard, and Arthur Lee. Extracted from the previous letters.

65. Versails, 9 Janv. 1781.—Letter on Chiffre. au Chev^r de la Luzerne. This dispatch was taken in America, and sent from thence to be decyphered. It relates to military and naval operations. An original.

66. Newport, 27th May 1781.—De Rochambeau (le Comte) au Chev^r de la Luzerne a Philadelphia (decyphered). The same subject.

67. Philadelphie, 10 Fevrier 1782.—De la Luzerne (le Chev^r) a . . . On French commerce with America. Original.

68. 21 Janv. 1782.—Baudoin (Mr. J.), Negociant a Boston, Traduction d'un Mémoire adressé a M^r. de la Luzerne. The same subjects. Original.

69. Boston, 21 Jan. 1782.—The same. The substance of the above in English.

DIVISION VI.

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS.

For the probable origin of this collection, which is of a very miscellaneous character, see page 126 of the Appendix to the Third Report of the Commissioners.

No. 169.—A fol. vol., in blue Turkey, labelled Sea Dominions. Lecture on Navigation. Pepys Index. It contains copies of miscellaneous papers relative to navigation, and of an Index to the Pepys MSS. There is an index.

No. 170.—A fol. vol. in vellum, containing a paper entitled Anne R. An establishment, with incidents for housekeeping. Also wages and board wages to the officers and servants of our house, chamber, and stables, with the expense of the chappells, and provisions for horses. Also, allowances, stipends, and pensions to old and supernumerary servants and widowers, to commence the first day of July 1702.

No. 171.—A fol. vol., in red morocco, being an account of the revenues of the Crown for one year, ending at Michaelmas, quinto Edwardi sexto, with the estiishment of His Majesty's household, and civil government, with the salaries then allowed. Also, remonstrances for increasing His Majesty's revenue.

It is a fine MSS., and in excellent preservation. There is a modern index to its contents. It seems an office book.

No. 172.—A fol. vol., bound in vellum, and containing a MS., entitled The generall state of receipts and issues of the publick Revenues between the Feast of St. Michael, 1693, and the Feast of St. Michael, 1694. It has a modern index to its contents.

No. 173.—A fol. vol., in vellum, labelled A General Index of Crown Lands. It contains an alphabetical account of the land revenues belonging to the Crown, as they appeared by the Parliament surveys and books of entry in the Surveyor-General's office since the year 1650.

It is a very choice MS. Its contents are divided into ten columns, viz. :—

1. County.
2. Names and situations of the estates.
3. To whom granted.
4. For what term.
5. Yearly rents.
6. Improvements.
7. Dates.
8. In what surveys and entries to be found.
9. Fines.
10. Occasional remarks and references.

No. 174.—A fol. vol., in vellum, labelled Exchequer Officers and Fees. Its title as it stands in the MS. is, A book of all y^e severall officers of y^e Court of Exchequer, together with the names of the present officers in whose gift and hon^r admitted. With a briefe collection of y^e chief heads of what every officer usually doth by virtue of his office, according to the state of y^e Excheq^r, anno Dini 1692. It has a modern index.

No. 175.—A fol. vol., in vellum, containing Revenues, &c., of the islands of Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, Arne, and Gethow. It is an authentic copy, with the green-wax seal appendant. Every page is signed by the examining jurats, with a certificate in French, subscribed, Eleazar le Marchant, Bailiffe; Law. Fiott, and Samuel Bonamy, Jurats. 16 August 1755.

No. 176.—A fol. vol., in vellum, containing "The accounts for the year ending the 29 September 1692, of receipts by loans and repayments in satisfaction thereof. Incomes and issues of the Exchequer, Customs House, Excise Office, Post Office." A fine MS.; the title is richly illuminated. There is a modern index.

No. 177.—A fol. vol., containing Names of Popish recusants, convicts, and Papists, who have registered their estates, together with most of their titles, additions, and places of abode, or the parishes or townships where their lands lie, and the names of the tenants in possession, and an abstract or total of each person's estate, as the same have been returned by the clerks of the peace for the several counties to the commissioners, trustees, &c. for the forfeited estates. Total of the estates in the several counties, 386,746l. 4s. 10½d. These returns were made on the project of Jo. Cosins that Papists should pay two thirds of their income.

No. 178.—A fol. vol., containing "A schedule of all the entry books, surveys, papers, writings, and muniments belonging to the office of Surveyer-General of His Majesty's lands, revenues, and now lying in the hands of Daniel Pulteney, Esq., as administrator of the personall estates and effects of John Pulteney, Esq., deceased, late Surveyer-General." An original MS., dated 1726, and signed Charles Gibbons, G. Cartwright. There is a modern index to it.

No. 179.—A fol. pamphlet, being an authentic copy of "An establishment or list containing all payments to be made for civil list affaires, from the 25th day of March 1709," in the 8th year of our reign for the kingdom of Ireland. It has a modern index.

No. 180.—A fol. pamphlet, containing "An account (no name nor date), of an expedition against Carthage, in South America." (Admiral Vernon.) Copies of letters on the state of Ireland, in 1756, in case of a French invasion. Copies of two letters of Count de Schaumbourg Lippe in 1757. An account of Gibraltar in 1751.

No. 181.—A fol. vol., in vellum, containing "A copie of His Majesty's Grant, anno 1671, to the Receivers-General and Farmers of the Duty on proceedings at Law." A fine MS. of the time.

No. 182.—A MS. fol. in vellum, having no general title. It is divided into two parts, with heads in Latin, though written in English.

A. (1.) Pars Prima.—De Jure Maris et Brachionum ejusdem. (2.) Pars Secunda.—De Portibus Maris. (3.) Appendix concerning the five ports, their names, privileges, and charges.

B. A MS. fol., marked "on the Customs," with other papers on the same subject.

This MS., though written in a different hand from A., I believe to be a continuation of it. It begins "Pars Tertia," and in cap. I. the author says, "Having in a former part, as preparatory to this, gone through the examination or history of the Ports, I now descend to the history or narrative of the King's Customs."

No. 183.—A fol. vol. labelled Revenues Opinions. It contains references from the Treasury Board to the Attorneys and Solicitors-General on various points relative to the revenues, from 1673 to 1707.

No. 184.—A fol. vol. labelled Court of Admiralty. It contains (1) Admiralli Angliæ ab anno 1307 ad annum 1670. (2) An account of patents, records, &c. to 1703, and some other papers. A curious MS.

No. 185.—A fol. vol. labelled Invasions Tempore Elizab. It contains extracts of papers referring to the invasion in 1588, and to various incidents subsequent to that period.

No. 186.—A fol. MSS. pamphlet being a schedule of the ancient surveys or rentals before the Rebellion. The surveys made in the time of the Rebellion and the surveys since the Restoration, &c., 1713.

An original MS., signed by S. Elphinstone and W. Munday.

No. 187.—A quarto vol. labelled Paper Office Catalogue. It is a catalogue of the treatise and other instruments, books, and papers in His Majesty's Paper Office. It contains also an index to the papers and MS. of Sir Leoline Jenkins.

No. 188 and 189.—Two 4to vols. labelled Extracts out of the Secretary of State's Books, from 1661 to 1725. They also contain a few extracts for the year 1757.

No. 190.—A 4to vol. in red morocco, labelled Council Book of Henry VIII., &c. It contains copies (1) of the Council Book of Henry VIII. in 1540 and 1541; (2) Of a book of the King's power of pardoning, by the Earl of Nottingham, Lord Chancellor; (3) Of some doubts on Poining's Acts in Ireland; (4) Of the King's warrants for beheading the Earl of Strafford, 1641.

No. 191.—A fol. pamphlet, being A brief collection concerning the manors of the Duchy of Cornwall, which are commonly called "Assessionable or Ancient Dutchy," from 7 Edw. III. to 44 Elizb. With a table wherein are set down the present rents, compared with those which were answered in the 7th year of King Edw. III. and all the casual profits, &c. compared.

A very neat MS. No date nor any name of the author.

No. 192.—A thin fol. vol. containing "A rental of His Majesty's land revenues within the several counties of North Wales, with the annual tithes." It has no date.

No. 193.—A 4to vol., in calf, containing copies of the manner of the most happy return into England of our gracious Sovereign Lord King Charles II., and his proceeding through London upon Tuesday, the 29th of May 1660. The preparation for His Majesty's coronation, &c. at Westminster, the 23rd of April 1661.

The proceeding to the coronation of King Charles on Thursday, the 2nd of February 1625.

It is a copy attested by St. George Clarenceux in 1695.

No. 194.—A quarto vol., in parchment, labelled A Discourse of the Parliament. It contains "A discourse of the High Courte of Parlyament and of the authoritie of the same, collected out of the common Lawes of this lande, and other good authors." It has no date nor name of the author.

No. 195.—A small 4to vol. containing schedules of fees and lists of officers; viz., a schedule of the usual fees taken at the Treasury by the secretary for himself and clerks, 24th April 1695.

Charges of the establishment, anno 1702, 297,549l. 1. 6d.

Fees for payment of money in the receipts of the Exchequer taken by the two deputy chamberlains called the Sally Court.

MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE.

Schedule of the fees payable to the auditor imposts.

List of officers of the Custom called the Patent Officers, with their salaries, &c. List of officers of the excise collections, collectors, supervisions, &c., with their salaries, &c.

No. 196.—A small 4to vol. in blue Turkey, containing particulars and date of the receipts and issues of the public revenues, taxes, and loans, during the reign of His late Majesty King William, from Ladyday 1688 to Michellmas 1710. An interesting volume.

No. 197.—A small 4to vol. containing Elementa Jurisprudentia. Are studies possibly by Lord Shelburne, when young.

No. 198.—A small 4to, in vellum, labelled Victualling Contract, 1677. The parties are,—Our Sovereign Lord the King, of the one part, and Richard Brett, Samuel Vincent, and J. Parsons, of London, on the other. Dated 19th Dec. 1677. By writ of privy seal signed Piggott.

No. 199.—A small 4to vol. labelled Court of Admiralty. It is a collection of several matters concerning the power and rights of the Lord High Admiral, and the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty.

No. 200.—An 8vo volume containing a catalogue of Mr. Secretary Pepys's library.

Vol. 201.

This set of volumes of a miscellaneous set of papers.

A. Account of ways and means and supplies from 1715–1760. They are perhaps contained in Sir Charles Whitworth's work.

B. A pocket-book, in vellum, lettered Various accounts from 1754 to 1760. Bounties from 1744. Civil list from 1728. It seems to be in the hand of James West, who was many years Secretary to the Treasury.

C. A short history of the Custome House Affairs of North Brittain since the Union, to the 5th of May, 1709.

D. List of incidental allowances to the officers in the Port of London and the Outports. Ladyday, 1748.

E. An abstract of the Civil List Act, 1782.

F. The Civil Establishment of Ireland on the 28th Jan. 1773.

G. The military establishment of Ireland as it stood the 1st Dec. 1772, including military pensions, half pay, barracks, etc.

H. A pocket-book, in vellum, labelled "Treasury," containing—"the Method of Business at the Treasury" "on coining Money." "Distribution of business among the several clerks." "Contents of Treasury books" and index."

I. A pocket-book, in vellum, containing Various public accounts, 1750–1759, with accounts of the Sinking Fund, 1722–1759. It seems like B., in the hand of James West.

K. A pocket-book, in vellum, containing Various public accounts, 1749–1751. In Jas. West's handwriting.

L. A small volume in morocco with silver clasps, containing a list of His Majesty's Royal Navy, 1st Aug. 1768.

Four vols. of Ryder's British Merlin, for 1767–1768, 1776, 1771, with some notes in pencil by Lord Shelburne.

I cannot conclude this Report without again expressing my sense of the courtesy and kindness experienced by me from the officials of the Public Record Office, and acknowledging the great assistance I have received from them.

A MANUSCRIPT BELONGING TO THE MARQUIS OF RIPON.MARQUIS OF RIPON.

Small thick folio, parchment, double columns, very early in the 14th century (and seemingly by an English hand).—Incipit Liliū Medicine editus a magistro B. de Gordonio.—It is in seven parts. The exordium begins:—"Interrogatus a quodam Socrates; and, ends Inchoatus "est liber iste cum auxilio magni dei in preclaro studio montispessulani post annum 20^m lecture nostre anno "domini 1303 mense Julii."

MARQUIS
OF RIPON.

At the end of the 24th and last chapter of the 7th part is the following colophon:—"Expletus est liber "benedictus deus in secla: bene possum igitur dicere "Hoc opus exegi quod nec Jovis ira neq ignes nec ferrum "nec edax poterit abolere vetustas."

At the end of the 3rd part are two pages of receipts. At the end of the 4th part are three columns headed: "Ars ad aquam vite faciendam;" at the end of which "Ista sunt rescripta de simplici aqua vite et de composita et de perfectissima ad exemplar originalis extracta "ex diversorum dictis philosophorum medico artis que "F. scripsit episcopus Ginnensis Romanole juxta Bononiam."

After the end (given above) of the 7th part is a heading (cut by the binder). Incipit liber brevis et . . . super regimine acutarum egritudinum traditus a magistro Bernardo de Gordonio.—Begins: regimen acutarum egritudinum consistit. Ends: (on the 5th page) diutissime in ore tenendo. Hæc omnia facta sunt post lecturam continuam xi. annorum, &c. Then comes "Ingenia curacionis morborum quantum est de presenti "sunt decem (5 pp.)." Ends: "Facta fuit hec ordinatio in "preclaro studio montis pessulani anno domini, 1299, "mense Junii die mercurii post festum beati marcal'. "Et quia aliqui ex sociis volunt scire quid est dandum, "intelligendum est quod longa sunt tempora valde "quod nos abbreviavimus regimenta acutorum, et "venit ad manus multorum; postea compilavimus "opus totum de crisi et criticis diebus breviter et cum "integritate sicut scitis. Explicit tabula ingeniorum; "benedictus deus salvator mundi, amen."—A fifteenth century hand here has added the words Explicit librum. After a blank leaf is a short tract of nearly two leaves beginning "De causis in quibus flebotomia debet "suspendi."—Then 18 leaves containing "Thesaurus "pauperum" beginning "In nomine sancte et individue "Trinitatis." The author says he wishes it to be so called, and gives certain cautions to the users of the remedies and receipts.

On a fly-leaf facing the first page is the following inscription showing that the volume was once the property of Fountains Abbey. "Liber sancte Marie de "fontibus ex dono domini Willelmi Pecke vicarii "Collegii Ripon, liberatus domino Marmaduco Abbati "per manus fratris Thome Rydde monachi ejusdem "anno domini m^o quingentesimo xvi (1516)." An owner's name above this has been erased. There is an erasure on the fly-leaf at the end.

Thomas Dempster claims Bernard de Gordon as a Scotchman; and in Dr. Mackenzie's Lives and Characters of the most eminent writers of the Scots nation (fol. Edinb. 1708) is a short account of Bernard de Gordon and his various writings. The Liliū Medicine was printed several times in the 15th century, and was also printed in the 16th century. It was translated into French and Spanish, and both of these versions were printed in the 15th century.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD
HATHERTON, AT TEDDESLEY, CO. STAFFORD.

These are not numerous, but they present points of interest. It is usually stated by historians and antiquaries that Richard I. was the earliest of our Kings who used the plural form (Nos) in charters and patents. The original charter by King Henry II., noticed below, shews that Madox had warrant for his statement that Henry the 2nd in the latter part of his reign wrote in the plural number. (See Madox's Epistolary Dissertation concerning the most ancient great roll of the Exchequer.)

A deed of settlement by Justice Littleton, author of the celebrated work on Tenures, temp. Edward IV. shews the large landed property then possessed by him.

There are autograph signatures (to letters) of Edward IV., Henry VIII., and of two of his wives, viz., Anne and Katherine (Parr), and of Queen Mary and Edward VI.; letters by Lord Stafford (on the eve of his trial), Churchill (afterwards Duke of Marlborough), Swift, Sacheverell, and Washington. A translation of one of Juvenal's satires by Geo. Stepney has an interesting note by Alexander Pope, showing his appreciation of Dryden's poetical excellence and of his generosity.

and all lands and all tenements which Brunus held, with the daughter of the said Brunus, hereditarily as fully as ever any of his ancestors in the time of Henry his (the King's) grandfather held; and acquits him from county, hundred, and all other suits. Witness, Ranulf de Glanville at Westminster. (N.B.—The King uses the plural form Nos.) Part of the Great Seal remains.*

23 Edw. I. Copy made in the last century of the boundaries of Teddesley Hay and Galey Hay, taken from the record. (In French.) It follows nearly the perambulation next mentioned.

26 Edw. I. (Copy made about the middle of the 16th century.) Perambulation of Cannock by the view of Malcolm de Harle, John of Crokesley, Sir W. de Stafford, Ralph Basset, and many others. Begins with the bounds according to a charter of Edward I., which commences at Faresley, in the Water of Thame. (About two feet long and one foot broad.)

6 Edward I., Sept. 10, Westminster. Grant by the King to Hugh le Blunt in fee of a fair at Penkridge, on the 28th and 29th of September, and three following days. The witnesses are R. Bishop of London, J. Bishop of Chichester, J. Bishop of Norwich, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, John de Warren, Earl of Surrey, Hugh de Despenser, W. le Latymer, and Edw. de Mauley, steward of the household. The great seal in green wax remains.

20 Hen. VI. Richard, Archbishop of Dublin, the canons, proctors, prebendaries, and chaplains of the King's Chapel of St. Michael the Archangel, of Penkridge, make a lease to Thomas Moore, of Moore Mill Pool.

36 Hen. VIII. Richard Hopkis, the elder, Mayor of Walsall, and Thomas Yardley, and Richard Dyingley, Masters of the Guild of St. John the Baptist, of Walsall, demise a pasture in Bradley, called St. John's ground. Seal of the guild: oval, about three inches by two inches; the Virgin under a canopy.

Some 15th century deeds show that one Adam Pynson had three sons, William (described as late of Sareden, co. Stafford), Nicholas, and Richard, and that Richard had two sons, William and John.

22 Edw. IV., April 27, Greenwich. To the keeper of our Hay, called Teddesley Hay. The King is informed that the game, by excessive hunting and otherwise, is greatly diminished.—He, intending by God's grace to take pleasure, orders the keeper to suffer none to hunt, shoot, or course; but to keep the game.—If any person break these commands he is to certify, that the King may provide punishment.—The King's autograph E. R. is at the top. (Seal is gone.)

12 Edw. IV., March 18th. Feoffment by Thomas Littleton, one of the justices of the Common Bench to Roger Wille, clerk, one of the canons of the Cathedral Church of Lichfield, W. Camberforde, one of the prothonotaries of the said bench, Humphrey Salway, Esq., Thomas Waldife, gent., John Campian of Worcester, mercer, W. Wyghts of Frankeley, and Robert Chilleton of Pollesworthe, of his manors of Specheley, co. Worcester, and all lands, &c. which he has in Specheley, Cuddeley, Bradicote, Whiteladiaston, Collesdone, Upton super Snoddesbury, Crowle, and in the vill of Worcester and the suburbs thereof, in Stone, near Kidderminster, and in Moreley, within the desmesne of Kyngesnorton, in the said county of Worcester; and a moiety of the manor of Boysterley, co. Worcester; also all lands, rents, &c. in Lichfield, co. Stafford, a messuage in Breredon, in the said county, which he lately bought to him and his heirs, and all lands, &c. in Halisowen, co. Salop;—to hold to them and their heirs and assigns.—Warranty.—He appoints Robert Oxclif, John Byshull, John Wyllys, John Pale, and John Meryng, attorneys to deliver seisin.—Also he demises to the trustees his manor of Areley, co. Stafford, for seven years, without rent and without impeachment of waste.—The premises and all the contents were for the performance of his last will.—Signature Thomas Littleton. (The seal is gone.)

A letter undated by George Washington to General Lincoln (said to be indorsed by Lincoln, as June 16th, 1779): "Sir, Major Campbell advises by letter just received that the enemy are advancing towards Venbecker's bridge; I wish you to send out fresh parties immediately, and to make the earliest report. If this report is confirmed by your scouts, you will order your tents to be struck, and put into the waggons, and have every thing in readiness to move.

addressed to Edward James, gentleman, co. Stafford, boro' Kynaston.—Subjects of England and Wales are bound to resist and suppress our subjects of Scotland who have entered or shall hereafter enter this kingdom.—Instead of personal service they may lend 20*l.*, or the value in plate; toucht plate at 5*s.*, untoucht plate at 4*s.* 4*d.* per oz.; and pay or deliver it within seven days to the high sheriff of the county, who is to pay the same at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, to the Earl of Bath, Lord Seymour, Mr. John Ashburnham, and Mr. John Fettiplace, or any of them, treasurers for receiving and using thereof by the said members (of both houses).

1647, Feb. 24th. "Fer (2nd Lord) Fairfax." Certificate that Col. Christopher Copley did in Feb. 1642 raise a troop of horse, as appears by the certificate of commissioners of musters, and was mustered in his (Fairfax's) presence on the 22nd of February aforesaid, and from that time was in actual service as captain of the said troop till the 6th of August 1643, upon which day Fairfax appointed him major of his regiment of horse by commission under his hand, and from that time he continued in actual service as major of that regiment till the 1st of April 1644, when by virtue of a commission from Fairfax he raised a regiment of horse, and was in actual service as colonel thereof till the 25th of June 1645; all which time he behaved diligently and faithfully.

16-, Aug. 5th, Clifton. The Earl of Holland to the Earl of Essex.—"The King hath altered nothing of his intention for the jornies of his progress; purposing to be at Sidbury upon the 11th of August; his remove is from Lesseiter thether, where I do not conceive it is so fitt for your lordship to attend him as in your own shire; your lordship can best advise your selfe in what manner, but in my opinion I would shunne any extreme either of to many or to bee to privat; your near friends it is proper should accompany you, for whom I will undertake they shall not want that usual respect given to gentlemen upon the like occasion; this I will not only promise, but all the expressions of respect and love that can possibly be given you by your lordships most humble and faithful servant, Hollande." n. y. Aug. 25th, Windsor. "Charles R." (at foot) to my Lord Broucker. "The Dutches of Cleaveland has satisfied me it is both for her advantage and those in the reversion that Nonsuch should be suddenly disparted, to avoid all sutes and contests between her and the Lord Berkeley, and that she intends to let it out at a rent which is to be reserved to her Grace for her life, and after to the Duke of Southampton and others in the reversion. Therefore I do agree and think it reasonable you, according to the power given, shall make a lease thereof for what number of years she shall require, not exceeding one and twenty years."

1665, Nov. 4th, Oxford. "James" (at foot), countersigned by W. Coventrye (wafer seal at the beginning). My service to my Lord Midelton and the rest of my friends.

1694, Aug. 26th, Oates. J. Locke to [Mr. Clarke?]. "Dear Sir, I am glad to hear of your safe arrival in town, and when you are a little settled in your gears there I hope to receive from you now and then a little account how the world wags. My long stay in town the last time made so lasting an impression on my lungs, that I have scarce yet got it off, tho' I find a very sensible advantage since I came hither; so that unless my own business or any service I can doe you call me to town, I shall not be very forward to come thither yet a while; I return my thanks to Madam for her kind remembrance, and shall be very glad of her recovery and health, wether from the Bath waters drank at Bath or at home, as from anything else. My service to her, my wife, and the rest of the young folks. I conclude you will now stay in town. I desire to know, intending to trouble you with a letter of attorney to receive my salary in the Excise. My service to all my friends that come in your way; particularly remember me kindly to J. F. if he be in town.

P.S.—Sir Francis, my lady, and all here give their service to you and Mrs. Clarke. I hope you found Master well."

1726, Nov. 23rd, Dublin. Jonathan Swift to Mrs. Greenvil, at her house in Abby Court, Chester.—"Madam, I have had a letter by me above six weeks, expecting every day to have sent it with the picture by a gentlewoman who was to go for England, but hath now put off her journey. This was the reason of your not hearing from me sooner. I have at last heard of a Chester owner, one Mr. Whittle, who hath undertaken to deliver it to you. It is the best of the several cuts that have been drawn for me, and is made up as well as our workmen here can do it. I hope Mr. Greenvil and you are in health, as well as your girl, if you have not spoiled her with fondness. When you see Mrs. Keach (or Kench) pray give her my thanks for the friendly care she took of my goods which came all safe."

23 pp., 4to. The eighth satire of Juvenal; headed, "This is in Mr. Stepney's hand." After the argument the poem begins—

What signifies high birth? What reall good
To trace from long descent our ancient blood?
To have our monumental grandsires known
By counterfeits of canvas or of stone?

Ends—

Nor ere confess your honours ancient source
Was some poor shepherd boy or something worse.

At the end of the poem is the following note, which, as well as the note at the head, are said by the indorser to be in the handwriting of Mr. Pope. "Who compares the original of Mr. Stepneys with that printed in Dryden's Juvenal, will see the vast advantage it received from passing under his hands. I question not the same would appear of the other translations there, if the originals were extant to make the same comparison. This was what that great man did for almost all his acquaintance."

32 Hen. VIII., Feb. 6th, Hampton Court. "Henry R." to the Bishop of Exeter and the Dean and Chapter there.—Whereas the King's servant, Thomas Winter, Archdeacon of Cornwall, has leased to the King's servant, William Bodye, his archdeaconry for three years to three years, for 32 years yet to come or thereabouts, and W. Bodye spent much money in getting the lease and since, and will lose if Winter die,—the King asks them to confirm Winter's grant under their seal, i.e., the Episcopal and Chapter seal.

36 Henry VIII., March 6th, Greenwich. "Kateryn the Quene, K. P.," to the Bishop of Exeter, the Dean or his deputy, and the Chapter there.—Is desirous to prefer John Throgmorton to some honest promotion.—Asks them to give him the next advowson of any one prebend that shall chance to be void in their church of Exeter.

n. y. March 26th. "Anne the quene" to our trustie and well beloved the Dean and Canons resident of my lordes Cathedral Church of Exetir, and to every of theym.—As their tithes in the parish of Hevitre are on lease to the Abbess of Polslowe, for a term which will soon expire, which ferm is like within brief time to be void and in their order, by reason that the same abbey shall be dissolved;—asks them to grant a lease to John Sowdon, junior, for 60 years to begin at the expiring of the other lease, at the same yearly rent as the Abbess pays.

2 Edw. VI., Feb. 10th, Palace of Westminster. "Edward" (countersigned by E. Somerset) to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter.—The Bishop of Exeter passed a grant under his seal to Sir W. Paget, Kt. of our Order and Comptroller of our household, which we send unto you herewith—Prays them to confirm it and send it by bearer (At the foot Pro edibus epi. in London).

3 Edw. VI., Dec. 1st, Westminster. "Edward" to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter.—By advice of his Council, he has sent letters to John Bishop of Exeter, requiring him to grant to Sir Andrew Dudley, Kt., one of the chief gentlemen of the Privie Chamber, and one of the four Knights appointed to attend upon his person, and to his heirs and assigns, the manor of Pawton, co. Cornwall, the manors of Bishops Teynton, Radways, and Weste Teyneyemouthe, with the parsonages of Bishops Teynton and Radway, and the advowsons of the vicarage of Bishops Teynton and Radway, co. 1704, Sept. 13th, Magdalen College, Oxford. H. Sacheverell to Mr. Edward Wilson, at his house in Cannock, near Lichfield.—He has been with the gentlemen of Christ Church College, who say they have received his (Wilson's) pedigree, and think it clearly made out, but they ask for a disproof of the pretensions of the others.—Is sorry Mr. Noel's son is not qualified for the place, for he would be put in on the account only of a collateral relation to his (Wilson's) lady's family, who are the regular lineal descendants from Frost, in deficiency at present of his (Wilson's) &c., &c. Desires his service to Wilson's good lady, Brother Perry and Wilson's sister, with the writer's old friend, Mr. Gataire and honest Major Ryves, &c.

Another folio contains the following letters:—

1696, Aug. 1st. From Sir W. Booth's house in James Street, Westminster.—Edward Littleton to the Honble. W. Blathwayt, Esq., principal secretary to His Britannic Majesty in Flanders (1 p.). Strongly advising a march into France;—might march to Paris if he please, the country being so fine;—and there can be no opposition.—The country abounds with provisions in this time of harvest, and the people would pay great contributions to ransom their goods and horses. "But you might justly sacrifice some places to the flames, in revenge for Spires, Worms and Heidelberg."

1696, Aug. 3rd. The same to the same.—He again urges the advance with 20,000 or 30,000 horse and dragoons; proposes a line of march, as the opinion of himself and his friends.

1701, Aug. 9th. The same to the same.—"Your candid acceptances of my letters during the last war hath given me encouragement to presume now further upon you. It seems not advisable that we should engage in the war (if we can help it), unless Italy and Germany do vigorously engage likewise. The Italians are hindered by their timorous, over cautious, and selfish humour; the Germans by their divisions and discontents.—Among the divisions are religion and the great Electorate. In the business of religion the Protestants must not recede an inch from the treaty of Westphalia. The great electorate was created by the Emperor in opposition to both religions."—Littleton advises that the heir apparent to the English throne should renounce it; (the Electorate) with the Emperor's consent.

1711, May 19th, Southwark. H. S[acheverell] to . . . (Indorsed as by Dr. Sacheverell, but it is quite in a different hand from the other letter, and looks more like a copy.) He is sorry that Mrs. James has married without the consent of her mother . . . "Was there no one but that miscreant in the country to join their hands" (abuses him well). From the first part of the letter it seems that Sacheverell would have married her if her father had complied with his (Sacheverell's) endeavours.

1715, July 20, St. James. Copy council letter to Henry Earl of Uxbridge, Lord Lieutenant of Scotland, sent to Sir Edward Littleton, Bart.—They hear that the Pretender is preparing to invade.—Refer to the Act of 13 & 14 Car. II. Direct him to seize the arms of papists and nonjurors. Signed by Nottingham, Dorset, Devonshire, Orrery, Manchester, Hay, and Sunderland.

1715, Sept. 16th.—Copy Council letter to the same; sent to Sir Edward Littleton.—Rebellion in Scotland.—The Castle of Edinburgh attempted to be surprised.—The intended invasion of England by the person who during the life of the late King James II. pretended to be Prince of Wales, and since his decease has taken upon himself the style and title of James III., King of England, and James VIII., King of Scotland, being bred up in the Popish superstitions, &c. Tell him to cause the whole of the militia within his lieutenancy, horse and foot, to be in readiness to meet upon the first orders, and give directions to the proper officers of the Militia to seize, with the assistance of a constable, the persons and arms of Papists, Nonjurors, or other persons he has reason to suspect to be disaffected to His Majesty, &c. Signed by Somerset, Manchester, Nottingham, Sunderland, Grafton, W. Boscawen, Bolton, Marlborough, and others.

The meeting of the deputy lieutenants was to be at 10 o'clock on Monday, the 26th instant, at the Rose and Crown, Stafford.

A paper folio found among the writings of Richard Persehouse, Esq., of Reynolds Hall, near Walsall; (his ancestor, Richard Persehouse, temp. Car. I., was a magistrate then, and also in the reign of Charles II.)

1642, Oct. 16th. "Lindsey." A protestation for Richard Persehouse, who is dutiful to the King.

Copy of His Majesty's protestation against popery; dated July 25th, 1643, before taking the sacrament from the hands of the Archbishop of Armagh.

1645, June 24th. Assessment made on that date for a contribution to His Majesty's garrisons for one month's pay. (1½ pp.)

1645, Nov. 7. A levie made for two weeks pay to His Majesty's garrison at the Close at Lichfield. (3 pp.)

(1646, May.) A letter unsigned and undated. About the surrender of Dudley, the writer being there.

1647, Jan. 15th. John Persehouse to his father Richard Persehouse.—Family matters.—The Scots begin to raunt so high, for we believe they want more money. The House of Lords have not as yet given their doom on the rial [royal] prisoner. Next Monday the House of Lords are to satisfy the Upper House what they intend concerning Monarchy, Peership, and the establishment of religion;—whether in deposing the King they intend utterly to subvert monarchy or not. It is reported the Scotch have much courted the Prince to command their army . . . This I am confident, the Scots endeavour to bring a general odium upon the Parliament in their papers, and Parliament is not slow in the remuneration.

1647, April 10th, Wednesbury. John Carter, high constable. Sends a copy of the warrant (below), and tells the addressee to send it on to the other constables whom it doth concern.

1646, March 24th. The warrant is signed by Edward Brougham, Richard Flyer, Mich. Biddulfe, and Thomas Snead.—To the constables, churchwardens, and head boro' of Walsall, boroughs of Rushall and Goscott, Cannoll, Norton, and Wynysey.—Telling them (by virtue of several ordinances of Parliament and commissions to them and others) forthwith to inquire what money, plate, horses, arms, ammunition, household stuff, goods, rents, profits, &c. have been received, taken, collected, raised, &c. by virtue or colour of any Act or Ordinance of the present Parliament, or upon any pretence for the public service;—from whom and to whom paid, &c.; and who since Michaelmas 1640 have been employed as fitting constables or otherwise in collecting, &c.—They are to leave notice in writing at every dwelling house:—Penalty on any refusing to make return. Make up accounts in a book and send it by the 1st of June to Mr. Sherwyns, Walsall, at the Three Swans.

1647, May 31st. Copy by Richard Persehouse of his letter to Capt. Tuthill.—Refers to the warrant.—He says Capt. Tuthill is not ignorant of the losses he (Persehouse) has sustained by his party.—Before making the return he would confer with him.

1657, March 12th. License (signed by Gil. Pickering) for J. Persehouse to travel from his house to Stafford, and to remain to the end of the Assizes where he has a tryal.

1658, April 24th. J. Persehouse says that when he was 17, he was betrayed into the war raised by the late King against the Parliament, and continued two years as a private person, not bearing command;—he then turned to the Commonwealth, and when Charles Stuart, the pretended King of Scotland, invaded, he offered Fairfax to raise a regiment to oppose, and gave security for 10,000l. for the faithfulness of himself and it. Fairfax said he had no order, but would remember Persehouse's readiness;—his person and offer were presented to Fairfax by Col. Alex. Popham, and Col. Algernon Sydney, then Governor of Dover, and Dr. Ernely, formerly Judge Advocate of Ireland;—he vows and protests fidelity to Oliver Cromwell. Signed John Persehouse. (A canting letter.)

1660, July 11th. Her. Bagot to (John Pershouse).—He has received his letter.—The confidences of those people were grounded on an encouragement they had of corrupting the army; the power they had in the House by over voting, but the absent members are returned and now they submit; the present debates being concerning religion, the plot being discovered I dare not venture the relation of it, as from good hands it is said a vast sum of money is sent from Mazarin. The Earls of Argyle and Antrim are both taken prisoners. Sir Henry Vane, Sir Arthur Haselrig, and very many others are seized on this account. One of the army regiments of horse did present an address to the King. The commidoonarie (?) officers were immediately discarded, and very honourable persons supply their commands.—Lord Northampton commands a regiment of army foot. Lord Falconburgh has surrendered his regiment to the King. Yesterday I was in the court when Capt. Baccus was forced to quit his employment, and it is believed this day will be a prisoner. The Act of Oblivion is past the House of Commons, and no relieve for our past actions of ware: you would suddenly see a nue face in relation to government, had the King but money to pay off the army. I am now fixed at the court . . .

If any of your insolent neighbours speak against His Majesty or His Majesty's government, a severe legal course will be taken against them. If any one should refuse justice on this account, send me speedy notice, and a severe course will be taken against them. This is the King's command.

n. d. The same to the same.—Acknowledges Pershouse's letter of the 4th of August; he did not answer it by the next post, as he (Bagot) wanted to tell him that the Act of Indemnity had past the House of Lords, and is to be an Act of Oblivion. The judges who sat on the King are to be excepted, and four more for the four lords which were murdered, your neighbour, Sheriff Haring[ton], Col. Croxton, of Chester, and one Henningham.—He mentions the House of Common's vote that ejected ministers should retake their benefices without legal prosecution.—Animosity in the House of Lords between Buckingham and the Earl of Bristol is reconciled.—Prince Rupert will be here very suddenly, and so will the Princes Royal.

An address to John Pershouse, as Justice of Peace for the co. of Stafford. Walter Grosvenor, Thomas Congreave, and others certify that Elizabeth Byrch, who had accused Thomas Smith of ill words against the King, was a woman of ill fame, and made like charges against persons under the usurper.

Draft of John Pershouse's answer.—The father and the daughter are bound to prodecute; he never saw the mother, he was obliged to commit; but he will join with another in her bail.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR EDMUND LECHMERE BART., OF RHYDD COURT, UPTON-ON-SEVERN, WORCESTERSHIRE.

Perhaps the most valuable item in this collection is a Taxation roll of the time of Edward the First for the county of Worcester, giving the names of the landholders (clerical and lay) and the sums at which they were assessed. I conclude the tax to have been on landholders because the same person is often found taxed in several places. There are some early deeds of great interest. One is very remarkable for having the seal depending by its label from the centre of the document. Early deeds by Ralph de Mortimer* and the Earl of Mellent; a writ by King Henry II., and a deed by Osbert Fitz-Hugh about the bounds of Cornwood; many deeds relating to Worcester Priory, one of them stating the termination of a dispute about land by battle; another showing that the Convent gave aid to their landlord on the occasion of the marriage of his eldest daughter (but they got a lease of land for it); the original deeds terminating the sharp dispute between Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, and Joan his countess, on the one part, and the Bishop of Worcester on the other part, about the fess which the Earl had made on top of the Malvern Hills; a curious award by the Earl of Warwick in the early part of the reign of Henry V. of the penance to be done and amends to be paid by Nicholas Burdet for (seemingly) an assault on one Thomas Compton in Worcester Cathedral. The foundation deed of a Chantry in the reign of Edward II. (recited in an Inspecimus) gives a long list of things which each chaplain was to leave for his successor.

There is a Chronicle of England, the same as that printed by Oaxton.

Among the later MSS. is a volume containing notices by Sir Nicolas Lechmere (a Baron of the Exchequer temp. Car. II.) of his ancestors, and of himself and family, and of events, public and private, from the year 1651. In this volume is an original letter by John Thurloe, written a few days after the Protector's death, expressing confidence in the stability of Richard's succession; and an original letter by Oliver. Also a contemporary copy of a letter by Bishop Bonner to the Privy Council asking their aid against the Archbishop of Canterbury and others.

A volume of parchment leaves about 13 inches square; only 18 leaves are filled. It contains entries of pedigree matters, and notices of events by Sir Nicolas Lechmere, Kt.

Thomas Lechmere, the great great grandfather of Nicholas, married Eleanor daughter of Humphrey Frere, of Blanket.—Eleanor first married one Leth, and was afterwards married to Thomas Lechmere; she was born at Blanketts on the 22nd of April 1474. The grandfather of Nicholas was Edmund Lechmere, and his father, who died in 1650, was the only son of the above, and was Edmund Lechmere of the Middle Temple; he was born in 1577, married first — Blacknall, who died without issue; secondly (in 1610), Margaret daughter of Sir Nicolas Overbury, and sister of Sir Thomas Overbury who was poisoned in the Tower. Sir Nicolas Lechmere was the third son, and was born the end of 1613, and married 1642 Penelope daughter of Sir Edwin Sandys, of Northborne, co. Kent, by Katherine daughter of Sir Richard Bulkeley. His (Nicholas Lechmere's) great grandfather was Richard Lechmere, who married Margery, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Thomas Rooke, of Ripple, a lawyer; he died in 1563; they were married in 1542.

1651, Aug. 22, Tuesday. The King with a numerous army, most Scots, some English, by long uninterrupted marches from Sterling to Worcester sodainly possessed himself of the city of Worcester, and in a few days fortified it beyond imagination. At the same time the Scots broke down Upton Bridge, Beawdley Bridge, Powick and Branceford Bridges.

Aug. 25. Massie, Major-General to the King, with about 130 Scottish horse, quartered in my house at Hanley; he treated my people civilly, but threatened extirpation to me and my posterity because I was joined to the army of the Parliament.

Aug. 27. 150 Scots horse quartered at my house at Hanley.

Aug. 28. The Parliament army under command of Lord General Cromwell advanced before Worcester, and at the same time Major-General Lambert gained Upton Bridge from the Scots, in which enterprize Massie was wounded and some few of the enemy slain.

Aug. 29. The Parliament army drew close to the city of Worcester.

1651, Sept. 3. Total overthrow to the Scottish army by God's blessing on the army of the Parliament of England, commanded by Lord General Cromwell; the battle began on the west side of the city (in those very fields where my brother-in-law, Col. Edwin Sandys, the 23rd of Sept. 1642, fought with Prince Rupert and received the wounds whereof afterwards (1st Dec. 1642) he died); but was ended (and was sharpest) on the east side. The morning the battle was fought General Cromwell made a bridge over the Severn (a little above Teme mouth), and another bridge close by over the river of Teme, whereby there passed over his army from side to side as he saw occasion. The battle began about 1 o'clock and lasted 'till night; I was present at it; in pursuit of the victory the city of Worcester was taken by storm, and all the wealth in it became booty to the soldiers. (2½ lines are erased.)

(At the foot.) Add hereunto while I was embroiled in these turmoils, my wife, Saturday, Aug. 23rd 1651, was delivered of a son named Sandys. She was at Lord Paget's house, Dean's Yard, Westminster.

(On the verso of this leaf.) 1648, July 4. I was, by the inhabitants of Beaudley, nullo contradicente, chosen burgess to the Parliament then sitting in the place of Sir Henry Herbert, Knight, high sheriff of this county, and on the 10th of the same month admitted to the House of Commons. This Parliament continued to of April 1653.

fo. 5. 1654, July 12. I was chosen one of the knights for the county of Worcester for Parliament to be held at Westminster 3rd of September following.

(6 verso.) 1656, Aug. 20. He was chosen knight of the shire co. Worcester for the Parliament to be held the 17th September following.

1656, Jan. 28. Note of purchases of land from Lord Coventry and his brothers.

1657, Aug. 26. This year 1657, many died in this parish of Hanley; at least 40, but of no pestilential or infectious disease.

Printed paper, 9½ lines.—At the top is written, "Nicholas Lechmere, Esq., Attorney of the Duchy, in your morning gown and hood." You are desired to attend the funeral of the most serene and most renowned OLIVER, late Lord Protector, from Somerset House, on Tuesday, the 23rd of November instant, at eight of the clock in the morning at the farthest, and to bring with you this ticket; and that by Friday next you send to the Herald's Office, near Paule, the names of your servants that are to attend, in mourning, without which they are not to be admitted; and also to take notice that no coaches are to pass on that day in the streets between Somerset House and Westminster. Seal of arms, a lion rampant. In the corner, "Recept. 18th Nov. 1658, N. Lechmere."

fo. 8. 1658, Friday, Sept. 3. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon at Whitehall died Oliver Cromwell, Lord Protector of England, Scotland, and Ireland, having, according to the humble petition and advice of the last preceding Parliament, declared his eldest son, the Lord Richard Cromwell, his successor, who was the next day solemnly proclaimed in London and Westminster, and throughout England the week following. Shortly after he was proclaimed in Dunkirk, then in the possession of the English (won by his father, together with Mardike, from the Spaniard in 1658) . . . In December following writs issued for summoning a Parliament for the 27th of January.—The 19th of January was the day of election for this county; myself and Thomas Foley were chosen knights of the shire. The election was very costly. The expenses at several inns in Worcester (taken up by Mr. Foley and myself for the entertainment of our friends) amounting to 614*l.*, which we paid to a penny. All this was occasioned by our competition with Mr. John Talbott, of Salwarp, and Mr. John Nanfan, of Birds Norton, joining against Mr. Foley and myself, Geo. Coventry, Esq., eldest son to Lord Coventry, then high sheriff.

Parliament was dissolved the day of 1659, and shortly afterward the old Long Parliament, which had been interrupted the 19th of April 1653, and discontinued to the 7th of May 1659, then re-assembled; and shortly after was Richard the Lord Protector laid aside, his brother Henry, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, commanded home, and both retiring to a private life, the Parliament restored the Government in the way of a republic, as it was before their interruption.

This summer was an (here is a word erased) insurrection made by Sir George Booth and Sir Thomas Middleton in Lancashire and Cheshire.

8b. Notices of himself and a copy of verses sent to him by Wm. Ligon, Esq.; 14 lines, beginning—Sir, though your serious thoughts frequent the barr; end—Our love and friendship's lasting monument. This accompanied a poem composed by himself (Ligon), much savouring of a devout, holy mind; the title was The Triumphs of Sion, or the Victory of Grace in Sufferings.

fo. 9. 1659, March 16. The Long Parliament (first assembled by writ of King Charles I., Nov. 3, 1640) after many wonderful changes by them made upon Church and State, and many unprecedented alterations and impressions made upon themselves as (from their first consistence of King, Lords, and Commons), acting by the power of the Lords and Commons, without and against the King, and after by the power of the Commons only (or rather a small part of the Commons), without and against the King and Lords, and after many interruptions of that remaining part of the Commons, the first by Oliver Cromwell, from the 9th of April 1653 to the 7th of May 1657, and the other by Col. John Lambert and other officers of the army, from day of to day of 1659, the Long Parliament, the said 16th of March 1659, by act of its own, dissolved itself. But before its dissolution an Act was made by them for assembling another Parliament on the 25th April 1660, which assembled accordingly. Note, the Commons were summoned by writ made under the then Great Seal, under the style of the Keepers of the Libertys (a name invented by the Long Parliament after they had declared themselves a Republic), and no writs at all issued for summoning of the peers, but they assembled gratis, and acted as a House of Peers.—A note of the accession and landing of Charles II. after the dissolution of the Long Parliament, "of which I was an unhappy member. I applied myself to His Majesty, [9b] then at Bruxelles, for his pardon, which he at Breda, 4th April 1660, granted. I shortly after received it under the Great Seal. The chief instrument in procuring it was Viscount Mordaunt, "by the mediation of Thos. Beverley, now Sir Thomas Beverley."

Note of the Coronation, April 22nd 1661.

fo. 12. 1665. This year there was great mortality in London.

12 b. Fire of London.

fo. 13. 1668, March 1. Entered upon readings at the Middle Temple, relating to that branch of 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39, which subjects estates tail to the King's debts by judgment, recognizance, &c.

13 b. 1669, Jan. '3, died George Duke of Albemarle. 1669, Dec. , Sir Henry Sandys, of Northburn, Kent, was a birding, the gun went off unexpectedly and shot him dead.—Other notices of the family of Sandys.

fo. 16. 1689, April 25. I received His Majesty's writ to take the degree of serjeant-at-law.—May 1. I appeared in Chancery and took the oath.—On Wednesday, May 8th, I received my patent to be Baron of the Exchequer—took the oath.—On May 24th received the King's writ to attend in the House of Peers, and attended: the King came in state, and assented to three Bills; the first, Indulgence to dissenting Protestants; second, reversing the attainder of Lady Lisle, beheaded by Jeffrey in the West; the third, for selling some houses in Piccadilly formerly belonging to Mr. H. Coventry. (The writ mentioned above is in the volume.) The last entry in the volume is the 26th of Nov. 1703, mentioning a dreadful storm of wind.

On the last leaf is the entry of the death of Sir Nicholas Lechmere, on the 30th of April 1701, 88 years of age.

In the volume are two letters by R. Ligon, about his book which he sent to Sir N. Lechmere and some family letters; also the following letters:—

1658, July 20, Hampton Court. Jo. Thurloe to N. Lechmere, Esq., Attorney of the Duchy, about office business.

1658, Sept. 9, Whitehall.—The same to the same.—I find by yours of the 6th instant, that you have heard of the great breach the Lord hath been pleased to make upon us at Whitehall by taking away His Highness, as also of the succession of his sonne in the Government; so that I need not trouble you with the particulars of that, save only to assure you that his new Highness hath the blessinge of a very easie and peaceable entrance upon the government. All parties centringe in him as one deserving it of himselfe, as also being the eldest sonne of the bravest man that ever this nation bred. The army will be and are entirely his; those that were most doubted threw themselves most forward in his establishment. You are very right about the proclamations, and according that which you mention was emitted upon Saturday night; it could not be done before, in respect His Highness, before he entered upon his government, was to take the oath in the Petition and Advice, and he was to be proclaymed before he tooke his oath. The last night we had the newes of a great defeat given by the French to the Spanyard near Ypres, where the French killed and tooke neare 4,000 horse and foot; a party commanded by Prince de Ligne, who was to relieve Ypres, a place streightened by the French. This was done upon Friday, the same day His Highness died, it being alsoe the 3rd of September.

I am your affectionate cosen and most humble servant, Jo. Thurloe.

A vellum roll, Latin, 14th century, in three pieces (many membranes), between 30 and 40 feet long, and 5 inches wide.—The beginning is absent. It contains, apparently, short heads of discourses for Sundays (with a text at the head of each). Also on Saints' days; and Narraciones.—Those for Sundays have several heads (short).—Those for Saints and Apostles are longer.

1549, Oct. 26, Marshalsea. Contemporary copy of a letter by E. London (Bonner) to Lord Chancellor Ryeche and others of the Privy Council (2½ pp.).—He has complained and prayed redress against my Lord of Canterbury, Lord of Rochester, Dr. Smith, and Dr. Maye; yet, because Dr. Smith, being a minister to the Duke of Somerset, and they both his deadly enemies, have laboured his ruin, staying his remedies and suits, having help of the two others, he asks them (the Lords) again to be allowed to sue for honest and lawful liberty to prosecute his appellation and supplication to the King, and according to law to make suit for redress of injuries by the said persons.—As an argument, he says the collection of the King's subsidy in his (Bonner's) diocese is stayed.

1641, June 30. George (Bishop of Hereford) certifies that Roger Lechmere, of Fownhope, gentleman, having been formerly indicted and convicted a recusant, has appeared before two justices of the peace, and submitted himself to the State and Church of England. He has taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy, and has protested by certificate that he would for the future conform. And he has received a certificate that Lechmere had for more than a year conformed and frequented the parish church of Fownhope, and taken the Sacrament.

1654, March 24, Whitehall. "Oliver P." to Sir John Walsh, Serjeant-at-Law, and the rest of the justices of the peace for the county of Worcester, or any of them, to be communicated to the rest, or, in his absence, to Nicholas Lechmere, Esq. (Wafer seal of arms, six quarters, the arms of Cromwell in the first quarter.)

"Gentlemen,—We doubt not but you have heard before this tyme of the hand of God goeing along with us in defeating the late rebellious insurrection. And we hope that through His blessing upon our labours an effectual course will be taken for the totall disappointment of the whole designe. Yet, knowing the restlessness of the common enemy to involve this nation in new calamities, we conceive ourselfe, and all others who are intrusted with preserving the peace of the nation, obliged to endeavour in their places to prevent and defeat the enemy's intentions. And therefore, as a meanes specially conducing to that end, we doe earnestly recommend to take orders that diligent watches (such as the law hath appointed) be duly kept for taking a strict account of all strangers in your country, which wil not only be a meanes to suppress all loose and idle persons, but may probably cause some of those who come from abroad to kindle fires here to be apprehended and seized upon; especially if care be taken to secure all those who cannot give a good account of their business; and may also break all dangerous meetings and assemblings together. Herein we do require and shall expect your effectual endeavours; knowing that if what by law ought to be done were done with diligence in this respect, the contrivance of such dangerous designs as these would be frustrated in the birth, or kept from growing to maturity. I rest your very affectionate friend, Oliver P."

1655, July 17. Parchment under the Great Seal.—License by Oliver Cromwell to Nicholas Lechmere, of the Middle Temple, Esq., to practise within the bar of the several courts at Westminster.

1658, Oct. 23. License by Richard Lord Protector to Nicholas Lechmere, under the Great Seal, as above.

A small book of about 24 leaves, containing list of causes in the various terms during the years 1666, 7, 8, &c., at Gloucester, Hereford, Salop, Stafford, Worcester, Oxford, &c., being apparently those causes in which he pleaded.

1658, Dec. 16. Appointment by Richard Lord Protector of Nicholas Lechmere to be Attorney-General of the Duchy of Lancaster. Under the Great Seal of the County Palatine, and the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster.

A large fine red Great Seal of King Stephen. The legend is Stephanus Dei Gratia Rex Anglorum. The King is seated on a broad chair, sword in right hand, a ball, cross, and dove in the other; on the reverse, Stephanus Dei Gratia Dux Normannorum; a man on horseback with shield and sword; the action of the horse is good, but the legs are thin; the horse's neck is well curved.—A charter must once have been there with it; a slip of paper says Roger Bishop of Salisbury died 1140, who was one of the witnesses; so that the date of the charter must be 1135–1140.

12th century. William, son of Wido of Offeni, releases to the prior and monks of Worcester his part of Hunelton, which Humel Isnardus his grandfather and Emma his wife bequeathed to them. Witnesses, Gilbert Bishop of Hereford, Walter the Archdeacon of Salop, Master Geoffrey de Clifford, Master Godfrey nephew (nepos) of the prior, W. de Beauchamp, Richard la blaça, Osbert le brun, Siward de linderigga, Thomas . . . and Thomas his son, Simon Albus, Thos. de Chichely, Alan de Bradewud.—A fine round seal about 2½ inches. 12th century. G. Comes Mett. Willelmo de bello Campo filio suo sat. I direct you to quit claim to the Prior and monks of the Church of St. Mary of Worcester the forestage of Tibritune and all places of that forest, so that henceforth you claim no forest rights pertaining to that vill; for you know that for the soul of me and my countess, and Rodbert my son, and of my father and mother, I concede and pardon to the Prior and Monks the King's gild which to me belongs, and all customs and services and forest rights which were formerly the King's and then mine in the said vill. As to the land which they held in service of me (one carucate), which is of the Bishop's fee, I cannot intermeddle pro itinere meo. But whatever my brother the Earl of Leicester and you do on my part, I grant to the Prior and monks. For know that there are no monks in my domains whom I love so much, nor in whose prayers I so much confide; and if God grant I return from the Pilgrimage safe and sound, I will well shew it to them. So I ask you, as my dear son, that them and all of them for the love of me you will maintain. Witnesses, Wm. the Chaplain, Ralph de Auro Monto, Hugh son of Galer and Gervase bailiff of Mellent. (Seal is gone.)

12th century. A deed by Osbert filius Hugonis. The long dispute between me and the monks of Worcester about the bounds of Cornewda by counsel of my knights and neighbours and lawful men is thus ended. That they may hold what we have marked out by foss through the midst of the whole wood between me and them. Witnesses, Hugh de Sai my brother, Roger de Solers, Robert de Sturmi, W. de W . . . W. Carbonel, Eustace d'estas', Philip de Wornell, Symon Blunde, Andrew Ethelin de Lawe, David his brother, John de Wdesetune, Ralph his son, Horn son of Ketelbi, and others. Seal, round, 3 inches. A man on horseback in armour, with sword and shield. Legend . . . berti filii Hugonis.

Hen. II.—H. King of England and Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine and Earl of Anjou, to the Bailiffs of Worcestresir and Salopesire, greeting. I command you that without delay you cause the monks of Worcester to have their common which they ought to have in the wood of Cornewude, of which Osbert son of Hugh deforces them. If not let my Sheriffs of Worcester and Salop do it, so that I hear no more clamour for want of right. Witness, G. Archbishop of Canterbury, at Evesam. Part of the Great Seal, the King seated; reverse, a man on a horse.

10 John. Gloucester, before the King, &c. Fine between Ranū Prior of Worcester, and Hugh de Cinctetone, of half a hide in Cinctetone, to the Prior and Convent of Worcester.

14 Hen. III. Worcester, morrow of Trinity. Fine between Christiana de Kankleton and the Prior of Worcester, of the fourth of a virgate and nine acres in Kankleton, to the Prior and Church of Worcester.

29 Hen. III. Octaves of the Purification. Fine between the Prior of Worcester by attorney, and Ralph Gundi and Grecia his wife, of half a virgate in Tetindone, to the Prior and Church of Worcester.

30 Hen. III. Westminster, three weeks of Easter. Fine between Richard Prior of Worcester, by Geoffrey de Croppethorne his attorney, and Nicholas de Yardel and Christiana his wife, of half a virgate in Tedington, to the Prior and Church of Worcester.

33 Hen. son of John.—Agreement between William de Bracy and Richard Prior of Worcester. He releases to the Prior, &c. a pasture in Tybertone, and gives them liberty to enclose a field called Purnewude, in the same vill. They may have a way (of 8 feet) through his wood of Warmedone, from the manor of Tybertone to the King's highway which goes to Worcester; they are to make a bec to protect the corn. For this the Prior gives a messuage and croft in Trotteswelle and 10 marks of silver. Witnesses, Sir W. de Beauchamp, Sir W. de Santemareys, Simon de Robeford, Walter Fitz Warin, Adam de Crumbe, Master W. de Foywyke, Thos. de Stokes, and others. Seal of arms, a fess, two stars in chief. Sigillum Willelmi de Braci.

13th century. Odo de Michegros to all, &c. The plea which was in the Court of the Prior of Worcester by precept of the King, about one hide of land with the appurtenances in Elfsiston, between me plaintiff, as attorney for Eleanor my wife, and Godfrey of Elfsiston tenant, thus was terminated per finem duelli in the court, by Peter de Wicke my champion, and Richard de Dunie (or Dunic), champion for Godfrey; namely, that Godfrey and his heirs should make to me and my heirs by Alianor homage for the land, and I and my heirs to the Prior of Worcester. When the prior and convent ought to receive their rent, we or our heirs will send to the house of Godfrey or his heirs and will receive from them the rent, and immediately before we leave the house will repay it to them as our stewards, to be paid by them in our behalf to the Prior and convent. They also quitclaim per finem dicti duelli to the Prior and convent all right in five virgates of land and a mill in the parish of Un'bo and all claim whatever. Witnesses, Adam de Duderhulle, Sheriff of Worcester, Walter le Poher, Sheriff of Warwick and Leicester, . . . Philip de Mutton, . . . and others. Round seal, a bird, wings spread. Sigillum Odonis Michegros.

* The label on which the seal is, is suspended from the vellum at this point.

STR. E.
LECHMERE,
BART.

13th century. W. de Beauchamp of Elmeley gives to God and St. Mary, and the Prior and Convent of Worcester, all that solum with the appurtenances in Bredone of which there was an agreement between him and them in the King's Court, before the Justices Itinerant in Worcestershire, namely, Roger de Thurkelby, Gilbert de Preston, Symon de Wakdone, and John de Cobham, in 33 Hen. III., saving to him and his son common of herbage in the said soil, and to take stone in the quarries there. The grantees to have the services of the land of Clement Porkil and his heirs, &c. Witnesses, Lord Richard Muscegros of Wullafeshull, Robert de Penedok, John le Poer, and another. Round seal of arms, a fess; at top of the shield a crescent, and on each side a star. Sigill. Willi. de Bea . . . mp.

13th century. Geoffrey de Abedetock, Lord of Hyn-deleph, to the Prior and Convent of Worcester; he gives a right of way in a road from Worcester to Coderugge, in frank almoign. Witnesses, Robert Vicar of St. Johns, Nicholas le Bodel, &c., &c. Seal of arms broken: two lions passant; a star at the top and on each side of the shield.

13th century. Petrus de Saltumarisco gives to William de Saltumarisco, his brother, all his land in Dunhamstede. Witnesses, Lord Walter de Beauchamp, Lord Henry Lovet, Sheriff of Worcester, Lord Robert Folet, Eudo de Beauchamp, W. de Chadintone, Osbert de Abbetot, Hugh le Poiher, Rad. Haket, and five others (named), and others. Seal, a shield with fess. Sig . . . Petri de Sautmarets.

13th century. Peter de Saltumarisco gives to William de Saltumarisco, his brother, all his land in Dunhamstede. Witnesses, Lord Henry Lovet, Sheriff of Worcester, Hugh le Power. (This deed is by a different scribe, and I do not think that the seal is from the same mould as the last. The order of words in the charter differs.)

n.d. (Earlier than the last.) W. de Saltemareis to all. I have received from . . . the Prior and the Convent of the Church of Worcester, grauam which is between the wood of Heddeclover and Sedwelleliche (Sedwellsiche?), and grauam which is on the other part of the meadow, which is between Dnewda and Linches graua; to hold in fee, paying to the Church of Worcester yearly 5s.—Among the witnesses is Roger Dod.—Seal round, nearly 2 inches, broken at the foot. Man on horseback, with sword and shield. Sigill. Wil . . . mareis.

n.d. Agreement between the Prior and Convent of Worcester on the one part, and Richard de Witfeld on the other part. Richard grants to farm to them all his land of Tymberdene, with the men and other appurtenances, ad usum Elemosinarie sue, except two men, namely, Reginald Cok and W. Huctred. To hold from Michaelmas 1243, for fifty years, paying 1 lb. of cummin to Richard and his heirs yearly by the hand of the Elemosinary of Worcester. The men of the said vill in common (Comunit) shall acquit the said lord of royal and foreign service. For this, on his urgent occasion, namely, the marriage of his eldest daughter, they gave to Richard 36 marks of silver. Witnesses, Master W. de Powyke, Sheriff of Worcester, Lord Peter de Wyke, Lord Hugh de Pirie, Thos. de Stoke, Symon the Clerk, Robert of St. Godwale, Peter Colle, Richard the Clerk, W. Wareford, Luke de Novalanda, Drugo de Piritone, J. de Notteclive, W. de Papancker, Simon Clerk of Bobure, and others. A round seal, a fleur-de-lis. Sigillum Ric. fil. Ric. Dastela.

n.d. Wm. le Poer, Kt., son of Roger le Poer, to all. Whereas Richard de Wichefeld leased to the Prior and Convent of Worcester all land which he held of William in Tymberdene, with the men and their services, except the services of Reginald Coc and W. Huttred, from Michaelmas 1243, for 50 years: He (William) confirms it, and will not distrein for the default of Richard; consideration, 60s. Witnesses, Sir Richard de Boudon their officer, Master W. de Powyk, W. de Rowelle, Sheriff of Worcester, Walter de la Dene the bailiff of the Bishop, &c. Seal of arms of William le Poer.

13 Ed. I. Oct. Trin. A Fine in which Thomas de Weyland was plaintiff, and the Prior of Worcester defendant, of the advowson of the Church of Great Sobbury; to the Prior of the Church of St. Mary. As the consideration, they receive him to the benefit of all prayers in the church.

19 Ed. I. Tewkesbury, Saturday before the Feast of St. Dunstan. Godfrey Bishop of Worcester, Gilbert de Clare Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, and Johanna Countess of the same counties, to all faithful in Christ.—Recites a dispute between Godfrey Bishop of Worcester on the one part, and the said Earl and Countess on the other part, about a foss made by the Earl and Countess on the top of Malvern Hill on the land of the Bishop, to the nuisance of the said Bishop and Church of Worcester; by the intervention of friends, particularly Robert, Bishop of Bath and Wells, it is appeased; namely, that the Earl and Countess hereby grant to Godfrey and his successors two fat bucks on the vigil of the Assumption of the Virgin, and two fat does on the vigil of the Nativity of the Lord, out of their forest and chase of Malvern, yearly at his manor of Kemeseye; on failure, other two bucks and does within the octaves of the said terms, and doubled for every octave; on failure, they submit themselves to the King or the bailiff of any other whom the Bishop shall name, who may distrein them (the grantors). And they will give to the Prior and Chaplain of St. Mary, Worcester, when the see is vacant, or to their attorney asking for them, at the Castle of Hanlegh, the above bucks, &c. Godfrey with the assent of the Prior and Chapter of Worcester allows the foss to continue, and gives to the Earl and Countess in fee all their lands and messuages outside the foss and contiguous thereto towards Hereford. Seals of both the parties, and the seal of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, in whose presence the deed was made. The first seal is oval green wax, a Bishop with crozier, and hand blessing, about 3 inches high; the legend is gone. The second and third seals, of the Chapter and the Earl, are gone. The fourth seal is a small round one, a shield with three lions passant, no legend, but a scroll; on the right side of the shield is a lion courant, on the left a castle. The fifth seal is gone.

19 Ed. I. Saturday before the Feast of St. Dunstan, Tewkesbury. Another deed by the same parties relating to the squabble about the foss. The seals are, first, that of the Bishop of Worcester; second, the Chapter of Worcester (the secretum is a gem, a woman beside a short column, on which is a cupid, and the legend, Habundans Cautela non nocet); the third is a large one of the Earl on a horse in chain armour, with sword and shield charged with three chevrons; the horse's trappings are charged with the same (well out); the heads of the horse and man and the feet of the horse are gone; on the obverse is a large shield of the arms; the fourth is that of the Countess, a small seal, three lions; the fifth, Bath and Wells, head gone. (The second seal is engraved in the new edition of Dugdale's Monasticon, but the legend is wrongly given thus, Abundans cautela nocet).

19 Ed. I. March 10, Ichyntone.—The King writes to Malcolm de Harlee, Escheator this side of the Trent, to find by a jury if damage will arise if he license Robert Blanket to give one messuage and one virgate in Tymberdene to the Prior and Convent of Worcester in augmentation of the alms of their house, &c., &c.; and to make a return.—Inquisition of lands, &c., of Robert Blanket, in Tymberdene, at Worcester, taken Tuesday after the feast of St. Clement, before the sub-escheator, 20 Ed. I., by the oaths of 12 named, who say he may do it without damage to the King. It is of the fee of Roger le Poer, and owes suit of court every three weeks, and is worth 20s. per annum.

End of the 21st year of Ed. I. 6th of the Ides of November, Hattenhale.—William le Poer, Knight, Lord of Hattenhale, confirms to the Lord Prior and the Convent of Worcester, for the use of the almoner, all donations, by Osbert Blanket of, &c., in Tyberdene, and he releases to them all services. Witnesses, Lord Robert de Bracy, Henry le Walleys, and two other knights, Osbert Blanket, and one other.—Seal of arms, a fess, and two stars in chief.

34 Ed. I. Monday, on the Feast of St. John the Evangelist, Worcester.—John Lovet, of Elmeleghe, Knight, releases to the Prior and Convent of the Church of St. Mary of Worcester, and their successors, his right for life in 20d. in rent, which he receives from them out of a croft which they had from Reginald le Leche, of Worcester, which croft John Comyn, of Worcester, holds extra Losemere de Wygorn. Witnesses, Richard le Mercer, William Colle, William Roculf, Richard le Belletere, Richard de Evesham, Henry de Uptone, Ad. le Pirie, and others. (Seal gone.)

7 Edw. II. Feb. 16, Castle of Hanleye, Feast of the Purification. Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, gives to Sir Roger Tyrel, Robert the son of Robert le Grava de Hanleye "our naif," with all his sequel and lands and chattels. Seal, three chevrons.

16 Ed. II. Monday after the Feast of Mary Magdalene, in the Priory of Worcester.—John de Holeway quitclaims to the Prior of the Church of St. Mary of Worcester and the convent, his right in the lands, &c. which he had in Coutertone, within the manor of Overbury.

Sir H.
LECHMAR,
Bart.

Sir H.
LECHMAR,
Bart.

Witnesses, Nicholas Russell, Sheriff of Worcester, and four named, and others.

Insuper, by Thomas Bishop of Worcester, of a charter by John Salemon of Stretford, clerk, saying that Edward II. gave license to give land in Rippel to two chaplains in the Church of Rippel, and he with the consent of Walter de Bedewynde, Rector of the Church of Rippel, Worcester diocese, gave it to God and St. Mary, and to Philip David, of Ewininge, chaplain, to say masses for him and his father John and mother Lettice, and Alice, Arice, Christian, and Jone his sisters, and all, &c., and for Thomas de Cobham, Bishop of Worcester, and his ancestors, &c., and John de Sapi and Sibil his wife, &c., and Lord Walter de Beauchamp and Alice his wife, and Walter, William, and Giles their sons, and Petronilla their daughter, and Simon de Crombe, &c. The chaplain was to be presented by him while living, and then Philip and his successors were to leave to their successors the following things (if they be): "mellus plaus-trum vel caretam, unam carucam cum pertinentiis, unam herciam, unam archam, unum tonellum, unam cunam, unam cudum, unam tinam, unam ollam eneam, unam patinam, unum uroelum, unam craticulam, unam mensam, unam formam cum trestellis, unam map-pam, unum toellum, unum lavatorium, unam pelvim, unam scalam, unam tentorium, unum saccum, unum bussellum ad mensurandum bladum, unam corballum; videlicet de quo libet eorum melius vas quod habe-bitur tempore vacationis dicte Cantarie." Witnesses, William de Beauchamp, John de Sapi, Symon (?) de Crombe, Knights, &c., 1320, 14 Ed. II.—Then follows the King's charter of license to amortize, dated at Hertfordbrigg, in Northumberland, 14th of August, 13th year of Ed. II.—The Bishop then ratifies the foundation of the chantry. Dated at Bredone, Wednesday after the Feast of St. Bartholomew in the year above. (The gift was of a messuage and 48 acres of land, 12 of meadow, 3 of pasture, and 3s. of rent in Rippel.)

4 Ed. III. July 5, Wodestok. Edward the King gives license to the Prior and Convent of Worcester that they the church of Overbury, with the chapels of Waphebourne, Tedyntone, and Borge annexed to the said church, in Worcester diocese, and of their patronage, may appropriate and hold for their own use, notwithstanding the Statute of Mortmain. By writ of privy seal. Great Seal of England, nearly perfect, in green wax. The King seated under a canopy with sceptre and ball, a fleur-de-lis on each side. On the other side, the King on a horse, with sword and shield; the sword is fastened with a chain: lions on the trappings of the horse.

8 Edw. III. In a deed of this date Adam de Feckenham, bailiff of Worcester, is named.

1347, June 9, Worcester.—Indenture made in the presence of Wolstan, Bishop of Worcester, between Hugh le Despenser, Lord of Glamorgan and Morg', patron of the Monastery of St. Mary of Tewkesbury, of one part, and John by divine permission Abbat of the same monastery and the convent of the same place of the other part. Whereas Hugh gave them in frank almoign three acres of land in Lantrian in Meslyn in Morgan, in the field of the said Hugh called Crokbobruan, of the land called Tyrmoyl, with the advowson of the church of the vill of Lantrian; and Hugh caused the said church at his own expense to be legally and canonically appropriated, and gave them possession: Hugh with their consent and that of the Bishop orders that from the Nativity every year while Hugh lives, and on the anniversaries of his death, a certain expenditure of money and certain religious services should be performed. As a penalty for non-observance Hugh and his heirs may distrein on the manor of Forthampton: in their default the Bishop may distrein; on his default the Prior and Chapter of Worcester may distrein. Four seals: 1st, seal of Despenser; 2nd, seal of the Bishop of Worcester; 3rd gone; 4th round.

5 Ric. II. John Russel, Lord of Strengesham, Knight, and Agnes his wife, declare that whereas Joan relict of Laurence de Hanleye in her widowhood gave to Sir John Haddon, chaplain, and two other clerks, in fee five solidates of rent in the manor of Bradecote; they have attorned. Seal of John Russel; a chevron between three cross crosslets fichées. The other seal, the front of a church with two steeples; legend Mons Syon.

7 Ric. II. Feb. 19, Westminster. Letters patent under the Great Seal. License to the Prior and Convent of St. Mary of Worcester to acquire lands to the value of 10 marks per annum of lands holden of the King in capite.

16 Ric. II. Memorandum (indorsed on the above) that on the 3rd of Sept. they had got lands of 100s. per annum in part satisfaction.

1389, Chapter House of the Monastery of Lesser Malvern.—Richard Prior of the Monastery or Priory of Lesser Malvern, of the Order of Benedictines, Worcester diocese, considering the loss which, by reason of the appropriation of the parish church of Whatekole lately given to us and our monastery by Henry Bishop of Worcester, will arise to the Prior and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Worcester whenever the see is vacant, they grant to the said Prior and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Worcester and their successors, and the said Cathedral Church, a yearly amount of 3s. 4d. Oval seal, 3 inches high. An ecclesiastic in robes, with staff and book; legend broken, illum Sci Egid atis nove m

2 Hen V. June 6, Warwyck (French). Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, to all.—John Fordham, Prior of the Church of our Lord of Worcester, and Thomas Burdet of Arewe, co. Warwick, Kt., in November, 1 Hen. V., for him and Nicholas his son, were bound in 500 marks sterling, i.e. the Prior and Avery Trussel, Kt., and the said Thomas to W. Beauchamp of Powyk, Kt., to be paid at certain times, to abide the award of Thomas Wallewayne and John Barton or other persons in their place to be named on the part of the Prior, their men and servants, and Richard Whillyngton and Thos Harewell or other persons in their places on the part of Thos. Burdet and Nicholas and their men and servants; and if the award was not made by a certain time, then to stand to our ordinance and arbitration. The parties with counsel appeared at Tewkesbury on Tuesday in Easter week last past. The award was that the Prior and Thomas shall be friends; Nicholas as soon as he comes to England out of Ireland for fear of the execution of a process of law against him, shall, before he goes to his father's inn, go to Worcester, and there in the Cathedral Church of Worcester, at the image of our Lady before the high altar, shall offer a taper of wax of 5 lbs. between his hands in honour of God and our Lady on some Sunday or feast day at the hour of mass, for the offence and trespass to the said church by him done; and that taper in form of penance, and not with an assembly of people, shall offer; and from the said image shall go to the Chapter House, and in the said house of the Prior and his co-monks ask pardon for the offence done to God, the church, the Prior and co-monks. Thomas Burdet to be bound to us in 300 marks, so that Thomas or Nicholas do no damage or corporal injury to the Prior or his co-monks or servants. The Prior and his men, indicted in the co. of Warwick, and Thomas and Nicholas, indicted in co. Worcester, are to procure respectively their deliverances according to law without disturbance. Thomas and Nicholas are to pay to Thomas Compton of Shipston 100s. for damage done to him by Nicholas.—A large seal (rather broken) of the Earl; four quarters, two bears supporters, helmet, and (the crest is broken); first and fourth chequy a chevron charged with . . . ; second and third a fess between six cross crosslets.

1474, Oct. 12, Evesham Chapter House. Richard Abbat of the Monastery of St. Mary the Virgin, and Egwin Bishop and Confessor of Evesham, of the Order of St. Benedict, Worcester diocese, ad Romanam Ecclesiam nullo medio pertinentis, and the convent of the same place, to all, &c. Considering the damage, by the appropriation, annexation, and consolidation of the Monastery of Almcestria, alias Rutherford, Worcester diocese, to us and our monastery, lately made by John Bishop of Worcester, done to the Prior of the Cathedral Church of St. Mary's Worcester, during vacancy; we give an annuity of 6s. 8d. to the prior and chapter, with power of distress on Almcestre.

1 Ed. VI. March 4. A roll of vellum about 2 feet in length. Hundred of Pershore, co. Worcester. A direction to Richard Lechmar, of Hanley Castle, gentleman, high collector of the said hundred, to gather the sums below mentioned for the second payment of the subsidy granted in 37 Hen. VIII. It gives the names of the petty collectors and the sums to be received from each. Total, 224l. 7s. 9d. Signed by Geo. Wylloughbie, Will. Cokesay, Rich. Sheldone, the King's three Commissioners.

A Taxation roll for Worcestershire of the time of Edward the First.—There are 17 membranes sewn together so as to make a long roll, and to the last are fastened eight other membranes pendent like the Plea Rolls. There is no heading to indicate in what year or for what purpose the taxation was made. From the traces of thread holes at the top of the first membrane it is probable that the heading has been lost. The writing is very good; the entries are in two columns. The city of Worcester comes first on the list of places. As the entire

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR JOHN MARYON WILSON, BART., OF CHARLTON HOUSE, KENT.

SIR J. M.
WILSON,
BART.

A volume of 167 leaves of thick parchment, about 5½ inches high and 4½ inches wide. The writing seems to be of the 14th century; the abbreviations are numerous. It contains the Code of Icelandic Laws, known as Jonsbok, given by King Magnus (in substitution for the code known as Jernsida) in 1280. This code was printed in small 8vo. at Holm in 1578. On comparison, this MS. and the printed text are found to agree substantially, but the spelling and order of the words vary, and the order of some of the chapters is different, and in a few instances the MS. contains more or less than the print.

In the Landzleigum the wording of the MS. differs much. The appendix of the MS. contains some documents not in the appendix to the print. A few of the leaves seem palimpsest, and there are traces of scroll ornaments in the margins of some of the leaves, which seem not to have been originally intended for the Code of Laws. The initial capital letters are coloured variously, lake, yellow, green, and vermilion, and some are gilt. At 355 is a very large F, beautifully interlaced with conventional foliage. In the initial P at the commencement of the Thiofa Balk is a rude drawing of a man hanging from gallows.

On the first flyleaf are,—the name Magnus Björnsson (in writing about 150 or 200 years old), and a later autograph of Olafur Thorlaksson; another illegible; and Magnus Thorleifsson me possidet. At fo. 49 some writing has been erased, but the date, 1622, is just visible. On the last leaf of the volume there is the name of Magnus Thorlaksson.

The text of the Code occupies all but the last 26 leaves. After the Code come 9 leaves of appendix, and 15 leaves of index, and 2 leaves containing seemingly computations of the values of money.

The MS. has Bat where the print has Path; and lier where the print has leggr.

1559, Nov. 29. Ferrara. A diploma granting to Thomas Wilson the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Inventory of the goods and chattels of Thomas Wilson, secretary to Queen Elizabeth (about 20 feet long and 5 or 6 inches wide).

1640. The like of John Wilson; one roll of vellum and one of paper.

1596. Folio, 7 written leaves. An English Quid for a Spanish Quo; or a most royally renowned resolution.

Expedition and most memorable exploit performed by God's assistance and Her Majesty's loyal navy and army at Cadiz, on the coast of Spayne, in the year of Christ our Saviour 1596. Exscript per me R. Ro.—It contains a list of the sea and land regiments, English and Hollanders, noblemen, knights, gentlemen, and captains, English and stranger volunteers, &c. &c. A short account of the departure for and arrival at Cadiz.—A copy of the Queen's prayer.—A copy of the Lord Admiral Howard's letter to Lord Hunsdon, giving an account of the affair at Cadiz, dated from on board the "Ark," July 8, 1596.—A short notice of the subsequent doings of the fleet, and its return to England.—At the end, "In gratiam gratorum gratiis, A. C. 1598, May 29: "inscript. per me Ricard. Robinson." (This MS. was printed not quite correctly in the periodical paper called Long ago for November 1873. The Admiral's letter is printed nearly at length in Birch's Memoirs of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, vol. 2, p. 52.)

1627, Oct. 6. A sheet of vellum, with the seal attached of Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden. It recites that King Charles had determined to admit Gustavus into the Order of the Garter, and had therefore sent Sir James Spens, of Wormeston, Peter Young, Esq., gentleman of the bedchamber, and Henry St. George, herald at arms, to make the investiture. The King Gustavus Adolphus certifies that all was done properly, and that he will observe the rules of the order. (Latin.)

4to., Latin paper, 17th century. Paradigmata quædam et loci communes ex novem primis libris partis secundæ moralium Plutarchi collecta.—By Edward Burton.—Dedication to Doctor Langton, President of Magdalen College.—About 22 leaves, followed by some sermons in English.

4to., Latin, paper, 17th century. Metaphysica from Aristotle.—A treatise on the eye.—De Astronomiâ: extract from John de Sacrobosco. (This Edward Burton was son and heir of Sir Edward Burton, Kt., of Eastbourne, in Sussex, and the last heir male of that ancient family. He was of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Doctor of Divinity, and one of the chaplains in ordinary to King Charles I. He was rector of Broadwater, in Sussex, where he died 9th Aug. 1661. Mary, the daughter of Judith, his first wife, by her first husband, Francis Haddon, of London and of Kent, grandnephew of Walter Haddon, Esq., LL.D., master of the Court of Requests to Queen Elizabeth, and her ambassador, was wife of Sir William Wilson, of Eastbourne, Baronet.)

In a roll of several papers are the following:—
1520, Oct. 10. Copy presentment of the Customs of Ashdowne, co. Sussex. (About 5½ feet by 7 inches.)

1607. Presentment of abuses in Ashdown forest. Inter alia, the Earl of Dorset is presented for taking a piece of land.

1656. John Earl of Thanet and Lady Margaret his wife, eldest daughter of one of the co-heirs of Richard, late Earl of Dorset, are seised in fee of the manors of Bolbrook, Bassets, St. Ties, and Churtneess in Hartfield, co. Sussex. They claim wood for firing.

1625, Nov. 2. Hampton Court. Printed form of Privy Seal, addressed to John Wilson, of Sheffield, in Sussex, for a loan of 10l. to the King Charles I. Sir Henry Tompson was to receive it, and at the foot is his receipt to Mr. Wilson. Large seal of red wax at the back.

1631. John Tye spoke insulting words of John Wilson, Esq., of Eastbourne. The Earl Marshal compelled Tye to make an apology, and engage to behave well. There are also a letter by the Earl, deposition about Tye's speech, and Tye's undertaking, &c.

1704, Nov. 1. Warrant signed George (Prince of Denmark), appointing Edward Jocelyn to be chaplain of the Prince's own regiment of marines, commanded by the Right Honourable Richard Viscount Shannon.

Among a number of old deeds is one of the time of Henry VI., which mentions William Say, valet of the buttery of the King. In one of the time of Henry VIII. is mentioned "Robert Hogen, magister pro ore domini regis in coquina sua." A deed of 30 Elizabeth is a conveyance from Thomas Hog, of Buxtedd, co. Sussex, to James Burgess, of a house in Buxted, which bears the indorsement, "In this house lived ralp Hog, who at the then furnace at Buxted cast the first cannon that was cast in England."

There are two volumes containing copies of letters in the 17th and 18th centuries by members of the Wilson family and others; and copies of the letters and papers above noted about John Tye's slanders (the originals, except those about John Tye, I did not see); and personal notices of some of the Wilsons. There are interesting letters from Francis Wilson, who took military service with the Dutch, and afterwards with the Swedes, temp. Car. I.; and a little later curious accounts of the way in which William Wilson (afterwards made a baronet) defeated a search by Cromwell's soldiers for compromising papers, and of the kidnapping and sale as a slave of his son Thomas; an account by Sir Thomas Spencer Wilson of the battle of Minden, at which he was present, and other letters. Everything of interest in these volumes has been printed under the editorship of Mr. W. R. Blencowe, in the 10th and 11th volumes of the Sussex Archæological Collections.

Sir T. Spencer Wilson's daughter Jane married the Right Hon. Spencer Perceval, who was shot by Bellingham. The assassin was hung. At Charlton House is a copy of the account of a dream by a gentleman in Devonshire (several days before the event) three times in one night, in which he seemed to see the act of assassination and the place of it. On going to London after the news came down he recognised from inspection the place, the murderer, and his victim, and the dresses worn by them at the time.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

A MANUSCRIPT BELONGING TO SIR JOHN LAWSON, BART., OF BROUGH HALL, YORKSHIRE.

The York Ritual or Manual mentioned in the last Report was afterwards found, and was sent to London by Sir John Lawson.

It is in small folio, written on vellum in the 14th century. It has 176 leaves including the fly-leaf at the end. It commences with a calendar, one page for each month; then comes a table to find Easter from 1403 occupying four pages. (The calendar and table are by a later hand than is the text of the volume.) The text follows. From the calendar I extract the notice of English persons. Such parts of the text as are in English, I have thought it desirable to copy, as specimens of 14th century English.

- Jan. 7. Deposition of St. Edward, king and confessor.
- March 2. St. Chad.
- March 20. St. Cuthbert.
- April 24. Translation of St. Wilfred, archbishop of York.
- May 19. St. Dunstan.
- June 8. St. Wilfred, Archbishop of York.
- July 2. St. Swithun.
- July 7. Translation of St. Thomas (erased).
- Aug. 5. St. Oswald, king and martyr.
- Aug. 23. St. Hilda.
- Aug. 31. St. Aidan, bishop and confessor.
- Sept. 1. St. Giles, abbat.
- Sept. 4. Translation of St. Cuthbert.
- Sept. 5. St. Bertin, abbat.
- Oct. 2. St. Thomas of Hereford.
- Oct. 12. St. Wilfrid, archbishop of York.
- Oct. 13. Translation of St. Edward the king.
- Oct. 15. St. Wulfran, bishop and confessor.
- Nov. 6. St. Leonard, abbat and confessor.
- Nov. 7. St. Willibrod, bishop and confessor.
- Nov. 21. St. Edmund, king and martyr.
- Dec. 29. St. Thomas (erased).

At the foot of each page of the calendar are "Festa colenda" (two or three special feasts named).

The text of the volume commences on the 9th leaf. It is written with very black ink in a large, firm, Gothic hand (21 lines in a page). The large initial letters are ornamented, blue and red; the smaller capitals are alternately red and blue.

Fol. 9. The seven penitential psalms.

17b. The Litany ends.

18. Various prayers.

19. Deus, Deus meus, respice in me.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR HENRY MILDMAI, BART., OF DOGMERSFIELD PARK, CO. HANTS.

SIR H.
MILDMAI,
BART.

These are very few; there are, however, two of great interest although indifferent degrees. One is the original order by Oliver Cromwell for the arms and flag to be used in the Navy in substitution for those used under the King. The other is part of the original manuscript by Abraham Tucker of his work called The Light of Nature pursued. This work was published by him (under the pseudonym of Edward Search), in 7 vols., 8vo., 1768-78; reprinted in 1805. The late William Hazlitt executed an able abridgment of the work, and it was published in one volume in 1807.

34 Hen. VIII., July 23rd. Grant to Thomas Mildmay and Avice, his wife, of the manor of Mulsham, in Essex, late the property of the monastery of St. Peter of Westminster.

1 Mary, Oct. 3d. The Queen's general pardon to Thomas Mildmay, one of the auditors of the Court of Augmentation and Revenue of the Crown, alias T. Mildmay, Esq. Auditor of our Duchy of Cornwall, alias T. Mildmay, Esq. Sealed with the great seal of Edward VI.

1573, June 25th. (Wa. Mildmay to) Roger Iveson, one of the Queen's messengers, prays the allowance for service by him done at the command of the Right Hon. Sir Walter Mildmay, Kt., one of the Queen's Privy Council, and Chancellor of the Exchequer. There are several items. At the foot is the warrant for payment, thus—Allow for this bill to 6s. 8d. Wa. Mildmay.

1 Jac. I., March 3d. General pardon to Sir George Harvey, Lieutenant of the Tower of London.

2 Jac. I., March 28th. General pardon to Sir Gawin Harvey, of Markes, in the parish of Hornechurch, co. Essex.

1 Car. I., Feb. 10th. General pardon to Sir Henry Mildmay.

1648, Feb. 23rd., Derby House. "O. Cromwell" Proeses pro tempore to Gentlemen, there has been a report made to the Council by Sir Henry Mildmay of your desire to be informed what is to be borne on the flags of those ships that are in the service of the State, and what to be borne on the stern in lieu of the arms formerly there engraven. The council resolve they shall bear the red cross only on a white flag quite through the flag, upon the stern the red cross in one escutcheon and the harp in the other, being the arms of England and Ireland; both escutcheons joined according to the pattern herewith sent. The flags to be provided with all expedition for the ships for the summer guard, &c. Signed (by Oliver Cromwell as above) in the name and by the order of the Council of State, appointed by the authority of Parliament.

1652, May 18th. Committee for the Public Revenue sitting at Westminster. By virtue of an ordinance of both Houses of Parliament, 21st of Sept. 1643, and order of the Trustees for the maintenance of Ministers of the 31st of March 1652, these are to require you out of money in hand of the profits of first fruits and tenths payable to the commonwealth since 8th June 1649, to pay to Mr. Robert Asby, minister of Stratford, co. Suffolk, 20l. for half a year due 25th of March last, for the yearly sum of 40l. granted to him by order of the Committee for the reformation of the University, of the 13th of June 1651. Signed by H. Vane, Hen. Mildmay, and three others.

The following letters from King William III to the Earl of Galway are copies in writing of the last century. I made abstracts of all, but find that all except one are given in "Letters of William III. and Louis XIV., and of their ministers, &c. 1697 to 1700," edited by Paul Grimblot, 2 vols. 8vo. London, 1848.

1697, Oct. 19th.	1699, Aug. 14th.
1697, Nov. 26th.	1700, May 11th.
1698, July 16th.	1700, July 2nd.
1698, Jan. 27th.	1700, Aug. 15th.
1699, June 1st.

1698, Oct. 13. Au Geur. The king acknowledges the Earl of Galway's letter of the 10th September. He has not been able to send orders with regard to the assembly of Parliament in Ireland; being so far off he (the King) cannot well give orders. Refers the Earl of Galway to the Lord Justices in England. He knows that many in England do not wish the session of the Irish Parliament to turn out well. He fears that the hatred against the chancellor Methuen will be a great obstacle. All he can say is, provide for the subsistence of the troops in Ireland. It is of consequence that there be a good session in Ireland.

1803, July 23d. Hartford Bridge. Original memorandum for an association for the defence of the country (by raising a corps of cavalry). Signed by H. St. John Mildmay and 52 others.

Pedigree of the Mildmays, of Moulsham Hall, Essex, and also of the St. Johns, of Farley. 4to. London, printed 1803.

Four volumes, folio, blue morocco. A manuscript copy of the Light of Nature by Abraham Tucker. The first 24 chapters, ending in the second volume, are by the author's hand. The rest of the volumes are copied.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR ALEXANDER MALET, BART., AT QUEENSBERRY PLACE, KENSINGTON.

SIR
A. MALET,
BART.

These are very interesting, and some of them are of great historical value. They range over two centuries and a half, beginning with the reign of Henry VIII. Being arranged in nearly chronological order, reference to them is comparatively easy, and research is further facilitated by tables of contents, which Sir Alexander Malet has prefixed to the volumes in which the papers are bound up.

One of the papers is of the reign of Henry VI., and is the beginning of a petition by the Commons to the King against the Duke of Suffolk.* There are early copies of letters from Sir Thomas Boleyn, while the King's agent in the Low Countries in 1509 and 1510; and from Sir Thomas Spinely, at Brussels, to the King in 1513 and 1514, and original letters from the King to James V. of Scotland and to the Earl of Arran; a letter by Sir John Cheke, while a prisoner in the Tower of London in 1556; and a copy of Queen Mary's will. The Scotch papers in the time of Mary Queen of Scots are of special interest. In 1559 are the original instructions by the Duke of Chatelherault and others of the Council, given to Lethington on the occasion of his embassy to Queen Elizabeth; an original letter in 1567 to Lord Gray from the confederated Lords Morton, Mar, and four others (and signed by them), for deliverance of their Queen, the preservation of the Prince, &c.; a copy of the Declaration of the Earl of Morton in 1568 regarding the finding of the silver box and the letters and sonnets therein; in 1561 a long letter from James Stuart to Mary Queen of Scots, giving remonstrance and advice; letters from Maitland to his Queen; letters by Cecil and the Earl of Leicester; copies of letters by Elizabeth to Mary and to James; and a holograph letter to the Earl of Leicester by King James, written between the trial and the execution of his mother, which seems to show that he was rather indifferent to her fate. There are several letters by important persons on religion during the reign of Elizabeth.

Out of their proper place are two long and important letters by Lord Wharton to the Earl of Hertford, telling in detail the writer's ravages in Scotland towards the close of the reign of Henry VIII.

An original petition to the King by Arabella Seymour is strongly worded. There is also a letter by her.

There are letters by Grindal Archbishop of York and Abbot Archbishop of Canterbury, John Selden (and several to him), Sir Simonds Dewes, Gerard Langbaine, Charles I., Lord Keeper Coventry, and Secretary Windebank; papers by Archbishop Laud about his right to visit the University of Cambridge; and letters to Whitelocke in Sweden. Some papers here show that Oliver Cromwell intended to found a new college at Oxford; and that Lord Ashley (first Earl of Shaftesbury) projected writing a history of England. In 1653 Whitelocke seems to have had the custody of the Codex Alexandrinus, and to have been authorised by the Council of State to lend it to Brian Walton and others, who signed an undertaking to keep it safe and return it. Walton afterwards asks for a grant from the Treasury towards the expense of printing the celebrated Polyglot Bible.

There are letters by Charles II., James II., Algernon Sidney, Gilbert Burnet; several letters to Henry Coventry (Secretary of State, temp. Charles II.), and by his brother Sir William Coventry, on naval affairs; many interesting letters to the Earl and Duke of Lauderdale, who advocates stern measures with the Scotch Covenanters.

Letters by Lord Clarendon; a series of letters by Sir Thomas Higgon, our agent at Venice in 1675 and later years; and some by the Duke of Ormonde; several letters from Cardinals at Rome to Charles II. giving birthday congratulations; a letter by the Duke of Monmouth; a curious letter by Rushworth to the Honorable Thomas Thynne, M.P., accounting for certain suppressions in the Historical Collections; letters from the Earl of Orrery to Sir J. Malet, in 1678, giving Irish news; papers about Oates' plot; letters from Louis XIV. to the Duke of York; and by the Duke of Tyrconnel (in 1688) to James II.; and an account of the seizure of the latter at Faversham. There are also letters by Atterbury, Bishop Ken, and David Garrick.

The parentage of the Old Pretender was for a long time the subject of discussion: a volume in this collection is wholly occupied by papers (printed and manuscript) about it.

The salient points of Sir Alexander Malet's MSS. are indicated above; brief notes of nearly every document are given below.

(5 pp.) In the fifth page he says: Take stinte Madam; judge this with yourself that thair is na man that knoweth perfectly the present estate of your realm, and desireth with true affection the advancement of your grace's service that ever will advise your grace to meddle with matters of religion at this time. If it shall please your grace to credit me and follow my foressaid advice proceeding from an unfeyned heart that truly willet your grace's advancement, then fear not th at your grace shall have a perfect obedience in despite of any will press the contrair, whateir they be (God willing), and thereupon I will bestow my own life most willingly.

1562, March 9th, Westminster. (Copy.) W. Maitland to the Queen. Begins: Your Majesty may please to understand that upon the 4th day of this month I wrote to your Majesty some beginning of a conversation that passed between the Spanish Ambassador and me. Yesterday I dined at his house; the French Ambassador was there. (After dinner the French Ambassador went to Court, and the other and he talked.) At the end: I received yesternight last a packet of letters for your Majesty dated at St. Andrews the last of Feby., and shewing a discourse of Chattelard's matter, the execution whereof being so wysely and orderly done cannot but redound to your Majesty's high honour. It is so long since the matter was brought to my ears, I believe Mr. Randolph writ either to the Queen or to Mr. Secretary, but always it was very humbly reported and almost . . . in the same manner as the discourse bears; this only differed, that was that when at the first your Majesty was so angry that you would needs have him slain or ever he passed out of the place, and commanded Colemanye to do it out of hand, but that my lord of Murray said it was more convenient to execute him by justice. (5½ pp.)

1562, June 10th, Greenwich. W. Maitland to the Queen, touching the meeting of the two Queens.—Thinks the time will be appointed for Mary to be at York on the 24th Aug. or thereabout.—Warning is given to all officers to make provisions.—Safe conduct will be given for 1,000, but they will be glad if she (Mary) will make the number less.—Speaks strongly of Elizabeth's affection for Mary.—Tells Mary to write as if she were in love, and because she has not experience in such matters she is to consult some of her ladys;—she is sure to have good counsell of the Lord of Mar, who has been long acquainted with love matters. (3½ pp.)

1567, Aug. 20, Windsor. W. Cecill to (Randolph). It begins, with Sir, but on the second page the writer says, My Lord.—The letter is full of religious expressions and hatred of Antichrist. On p. 2 he says, The reiteration of the purpose intended by the Guises in marriage of your Queen to the French King to disturb the realm, and consequently to stir mortal war betwixt the two kingdoms can never be tolerable to this realm. On p. 3 he says he will never consent to it. Ends, Yours in god, and in the concord of this Ile inseperable, W. C. (Indorsed: Cecils letter to Randolph, touching the Queens marriage in Spaine.) (Holograph, 3 pp.)

1568, July 15th. From the Court at Havering. W. Cecill to (Your Grace) L. S.—Has received letters to him, and imparted hers to the Lords of the Council, saying that Sir John Southworth has been before her and cannot be persuaded to conformity; therefore he is to remain where he is. n. d. Copy of warrant to seize and imprison R. Montagu, because he came to England without license, and while in France held secret correspondence with the Pope's nuncio.

Copy of reasons to induce the Duchess of York to embrace the Roman Catholic religion, as it was written by her own hand. Begins, Being from youth brought up in the Protestant religion. (3 pp.)

Notes and extracts concerning the Poor by Sir W. Coventry (4 pp.); and 7 pp. of a clerk's writing on the same subject, dated 1670, Dec. 3rd.

Remembrances concerning the funeral of Sir J. Stowell, K.B. (They went from Hamme, co. Somerset to Cotherston in the same county, on horse; there is a list of the attendants.)

1672, Oct. 1st, Paris. The Earl of Sunderland to Secretary Coventry.—It is more difficult than he thought to get the exemption which the King designs for M. de la Zulestein. (2 pp.)

1672, Oct. 15th, Edinburgh. Sir George Mackenzie to the Duke of Lauderdale (His Majesty's Commissioner). It contains much about Sir Andrew Ramsay's election, and the town not wishing to jostle with him. (2 pp.)

Two letters by Geo. Mackenzie, Ja. Foulis and Murray to the Duke of Lauderdale.—About town business.

About 25 letters to Lauderdale the King's Commissioner in Scotland, wholly relating to Scotch affairs. Most of them appear to be written by James Foulis, some by George Mackenzie, some by both, and Murray. One is about Convention; another refers seemingly to the murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, and says that all the prisoners will be put to the torture.—In another are mentioned interviews with the King, the Duke of York, Monmouth and Secretary Williamson.

In another letter dated 28th of May 1678.—The King has so engaged himself with us now that we may expect any thing of him.—One mentions the condemnation of Rebels and forfeiture of estates, and in another he (Mackenzie who was Lord Advocate) says, I have this day served the King heir to the Duke of Lenox.

George Mackenzie to the Duke of Lenox.—The inquest brought in a verdict after a whole night; they found all 29 guilty of high treason.—The point debated was, whether when one witness saw a rebel in one place and another in another place their depositions could be joined, since the witnesses were not contestes. He was forced to argue;—never had a harder task. The preparation is of great use to the Crown.

George Mackenzie to the Duke.—The Chancellor and I waited all this day at Leith examining witnesses, and certainly Hackston of Rathalrick was he who struck the postilion and turned the coach; but is not taken. One Stick is taken who is said to have given the first stroak. Camron's brother is taken who certainly wounded the town-major and probably was at this murder. A merchant woman who gave them brandy and ale at the house where the murder was committed, is in prison. It seems that Irish dornie, who is now killed, did command the party. He was killed by Achmutie who was the Duchesses page. Many who are suspect are taken, but no clear probation against them; but we will put them all to the torture. Remember the King that King Alexander the 2nd killed 4,000 for the death of one Bishop of Caithness, and gelded them: and what law had he for that?

1678, last of April. George Mackenzie to the Duke of Lauderdale.—Says he came to London on Monday and kissed hands;—talked with the King and the Duke of Monmouth. (3 pp.)

1678, May 7, 23, and 25. Letters from the same to the same.

1678, Feb. 10. The same to the same.

1678, Feb. 19. The same to the same.—I have forfeited yesterday six of the most considerable of the rebels Machiesmore, Crecklie, Kellock, Earlstown the elder, and the younger Culvernam, with sound of trumpet and tearing of their arms.

1679, April 8. The same to the same.—Asks him to tell the King at the request of a meeting that the 6th Act of the third Parliament of James V. is the best security against field meetings. (3 pp.)

Three letters with no date to His Majesty's High Commissioner (the Duke of Lauderdale) from G. Mackenzie.

n. d. From the same. Was with the Duke, who entreated me to tell you that you nor we should not mistake his admitting those people to kiss his hand, for he did it merely to get them to go about in the Convention, and to tell them that opposing the King would not do their business. This Claverhouse tells me he told them when they came to him, and he told them also that this Convention was an infallible test of their duty; it is my humble opinion that your Grace should give them fair weather and smooth things till the Convention be over, &c. (2 pp.)

Another letter of 3 pp. with no year but the date of July 6.

n. y. March 5, Edinburgh. The same to the Earl of Lauderdale.—At Lauderdale's parting from Edinburgh yesterday there was such a crowd that Mackenzie failed to take his leave, &c. (1½ pp.)

1679, Jan. 15. Lord Arlington's defence before the House of Commons. (5½ pp.)

1673, Aug. 16, Whitehall, Jo. Cooke to [Secretary Coventry].—The Lord Chancellor drinks the waters every morning.—No particular account yet of the late engagement at sea between the Prince and De Ruyter on the Monday preceeding.

Letters from Lord Arlington.—they are generally in cypher, three figures to one letter; the first is dated from the Hague in 1674, Nov. 24, s. v.

1674, Nov. 24, s. v., Hague. Lord Arlington to the King.—Gives an account of his conversation with the Prince of Orange who wished to be taken into favour. (6 pp.)

1674, Nov. 27. Since writing the letter, the Prince came into my chamber (nearly 2 pp. of cypher partly deciphered).

Sir Thomas Higgons' speech in Parliament about the the Duke of York's marriage to the Princess of Modena. (Autograph, 2½ pp.)

1674, May 18, Paris. Thomas Higgons to——. (1½ pp.)

1674, Sept. 1½, Venice. From the same.—Chiefly about the mode of his reception in the college, which was at first thought insulting. (3 pp.)

1674, Oct. 2. Copy of a memorial in Italian, presented in the college, about some custom levied.

A second copy of the memorial.

1675, Jan. 14. Reply to the above, and another dated on the 13th of Sept. (in all 9 pp.)

1674, Nov. 16, Venice. T. Higgons to Secretary Coventry.—Suggests that a few frigates should be sent to the Mediterranean for defence against the Tripolines. (2½ pp.)

1674, Dec. 21 and 28, Venice. Two letters from the same to the same, the first is of 2 pp. and the second of 3 pp.—News.

1675, Jan. 4. Xmas Day, 1674. The same to the same. (3½ pp.)

 1677, Jan. 15. Signor Brusoni, now historiographer of the house of Savoy, wrote the general history of Italy from 1625 to the present year, wherein are several things thought prejudicial to the interests of the house of Savoy;—he wrote this before he was in the service of Madame Royale and sold the copy to some printer at Venice. Now he wished to correct it, and print it in some other form; but the printer having bought and got license to print, Brusoni knows not how to hinder it. San Tomaso, chief minister to the Duke of Savoy and also to Madame Royale, wrote to Higgons to assist Ct. Matthioli, who was coming from Turin to Venice about it. Count Matthioli having business of his own at Milan, stays so long by the way, that before he gets to Venice, the book is printed, and on the stalls;—so it is too late for Higgons to suppress the publication. Matthioli wanted Higgons to let him seize the books by violence under cover of the English Envoy's authority.—Higgons refused. (1½ pp.)
 1677, Jan. 22. Lord Winchelsea notwithstanding the cold, embarked this day in the English ship "William" for Zante; thence he says he will go to Patras, thence to Smyrna, and so to Constantinople. (2 pp.)

1674, March 13th. Minster Lovell.—Henry Coventry to (his brother) Sir John Coventry.—A draft letter of 3½ pp., in which he tries to persuade his brother to marry.
 Copy of Dr. Burnett's deposition relating to the Duke of Lauderdale (found among the papers of Sir John Malet of St. Audrey, Co. Somerset, then M.P., and was written with his own hand).

1675, April 23rd. Gives an account of his conversation with the Duke of Lauderdale on the first Saturday in September, 1673. It was about Scotland, particularly about suspending penal laws in matters ecclesiastical. He said the people in Scotland that were at such a distance could not imagine what to make of the King's speech and declaration; the Duke said Hinc illa lachrymæ, and that all had forsaken the King but he and Lord Clifford.

Copy Petition against the Duke of Lauderdale by the Commons to remove him from all employment and from the King's Council, referring to the Duke's saying that the King's edicts were equal to laws and ought to be observed. (2 pp.)

Copy by Sir John Malet of the King's answer. (1 p.)

Copy of (Lauderdale's) speech on the opening of Parliament. Begins, the last time I had the honour to serve the King in this place. (He told them of the King's grounds for war against the State. He wants peace; the Swedes proposed Dunkirk as a place of treaty; the enemy refused.—The King accepted Cologne proposed by the enemy.—Another reason for keeping this session is to punish field Conventicles.)

1675, Aug. 30th. T. Howard, of Richmond and Carlisle, to . . . (concerning Lord Cavendish). Against severity to Catholics; about the talk of Lord Cavendish and another in St. James's Park about the French retreat over the Rhine.—On the 3rd page is the following note:—In obedience to the order of the House writ to T. H., asked if he owned the papers: He declined to answer.

Copy (7 pp.) of my letter to the Earl of Essex, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, upon the subject of his reiterated proclamation for banishment of all the Popish prelates and all regular priests too; permitting the secular priests to remain at home unmolested, viz., according to and in performance of the address made for that purpose to His Majesty by the House of Commons in 1674.—This letter shows that all the stress of the said proclamations and address fell on the few loyal remonstrant regulars, which I believe the said House of Commons could not intend, but rather would have desired His Majesty to protect such men were their case known to them. The letter is signed P. W. (i.e., Peter Walsh.)

Letters from the Duke of Ormond to Secretary Coventry.

1674, Aug. 12th. Acknowledges his kindness to Sir S. Lane.—Supposes it too early to think of the meeting of the Parliament: it may be hard to saw how long it will sit. (1 p.)

1674, Nov. 11th. Speaks well of the farmers of the Irish revenue. The bearer is employed by them. (1 p.)

1676, April 7th. Thanks for Coventry's interfering with the King for Ormonde's son, John, for the Government held by the last Earl of Donegal. (1 p.)

1678, Nov. 5th. Concerning the ecclesiastical promotions and disposal of the primacy.—Declares the apprehension the Protestants have of the Papists, and the bad state of the forts. (3 pp.)

1677. Giving an account of the state he found Ireland in at his first arrival. (7 pp.)

1677, Feb. 12th. The Scotch bishops to Lauderdale, against toleration; signed by St. Andrews; Alexander, Edinburgh; Jo. Gallovidian; Ro. Brechinen.

n. d. R. B. (Rd. Baxter), to the Earl of Lauderdale; docketed (a canting letter to the Lord Lieutenant). (1½ p.)

1672, Aug. 14th, Whitehall. "Charles R" and seal (countersigned by Henry Coventry) to John Shelley, Esq., at Thackham, Co. Sussex.—An order to give certain large coins or medals lately found in Sussex to Elias Ashmole.

1678, Nov. 30th. "Charles R" to the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex.—Was lately informed that the head and quarters of Wm. Staley, executed for high treason, which he gave leave to be privately interred, were buried with funeral pomp; and it was ordered in Council that they should be disinterred and set up in public quarters.—Mistake in the information.—Stop execution of the said order until further pleasure.

1677, Feb. 28th, Whitehall.—Letter of "C. R." (the signature at the foot) to the Duke of York to go beyond sea (bad spelling). At the end, "for my dearest friend the Duke of Yorck." (½ p.)

1676, June 2nd. Ch. duc Dudley, &c., to the King, (French). Although born out of England considers himself a subject.—Cardinal Norfolk will assure the King of his submission. (A short letter.)

1676, Nov. 12th, Zutliw. "Jean R." (Sobieski) to the King.—Concerning the death of Mr. Christmas, H.M. Trumpeter. (French 2 pp.)

1675, Nov. 30th, Roma (Italian). Cardinal Rospigliosi to the King. Assurance of his desire to serve him, and hopes the solemnities at Christmas will be pleasing to him.

1676, April 11th. The same to the same.—Acknowledges the King's letter of the 9th of March in last year.—Speaks of his great desire to serve him.

1677, Nov. 27th. The same to the same.—Alludes to il vicino natal santissimo.

1678, Nov. 26th. The same to the same.—On the same subject.

1675, Dec. 11th, Rome. Cardinal Barberino to the King.—Sends good wishes for the new year.

1676, Dec. 8th. The same to the same.

1677, Nov. 27th. The same to the same.

1676, March 31st. Cardinal Altieri to the King.—Acknowledges the King's letter praising the Cardinal of Norfolk.

1677, Dec. 6th. Rome.—Flavio Duke of Bracciano to the King.—Christmas congratulations.

1688, Sept. 28th. Munich. Josephus Clemens, Elector, to the King (Latin). Announces that by his election, &c. he has obtained the Archbishopric of Cologne, and also Papal confirmation of it.

1677, March (Ostend). The Duke of Monmouth to the King.—Mentions his arrival at Ostend with Lord Howard's five companies, four of the Duke's, and a hundred of the guards.—The Spaniards here are miserable creatures, only 400 of them, and that is all the garrison in Ostend except what Monmouth brought.—Asks for more men. (2½ pp.)

1678, Aug. 17th. Louis (XIV.) and Arnauld to the King.—Tells him of the signature of peace between him and Spain on the 10th of August.

12th March. Princesse de Chastillon to King Charles. Asks for a passport to travel. (5 pp., 4to.)

The same to the Queen. (9 pp.)

1674, Nov. 10th. Cypher between the King and the Lord Chamberlain. Indorsed, "For His Majesty." (One large sheet, and a little sheet.)

1677, Sept. 6th. Jo. Rushworth to the Hon. Thomas Thynne, M.P., at Drayton.—Thanks for letter.—Mr. Secretary has delivered him all the papers, and excepted to nothing but some passages on the beginning of Parliament, 3rd of Nov., 1640—words spoken by Lord Digby, Faulkland, Culpeper, Hide, &c.; some reflecting upon Bishops, Judges, projects, &c. He knows the passages were spoken, but he objects to sanction the publication. So Rushworth agreed to break off before that point. The secretary is to have a copy to see whether the copy that goes through the press differs from the copy with him. All quiet at Whitehall.—Saw at Bartholomew fair the Duke of Buckingham, Madame Mazarin, and other ladies. The Duke and the Lord Treasurer are far from being friends.—Merchants on the Exchange are calling in their concerns in the Spanish dominions, fearing a sudden rupture. P.S. Muddiman is in custody for writing so confidently that the Spaniard intends war against us, and yet the merchants will not credit the contrary.

1677, Sept. 22nd. London. The same to the same. Containing town news and news from an Edinburgh news letter.

1677, Dec. 6. Canterbury. Jo. Tillden to Secretary Coventry. — About Coventry's application for Mr. Ivory for the living of Exning. The Chapter have given it to Mr. Balk, Fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, his (Ivory's) superior in learning and standing.

1688, Oct. 23rd. The same to Lady Coventry.

1678, Nov. 1st. The Duke of Buckingham, Lords Winchester and Halifax, and H. London (Bishop) to Secretary Coventry.—It being referred to them to take examinations concerning the murder of Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey, they want all the evidence; they tell him to send to the Marquis of Winchester's house in Lincoln's Inn Fields the examination of Charles Atkins, which Sir Philip Howard delivered to Coventry, and the examinations of John Child and Mr. C. Atkins, and the body of Samuel Atkins then in their custody.

Copy of Coventry's narrative. Begins, Since the reiterated address from the Houses of Parliament, the unexpected successes of the French alarmed the King, and he sent to his ministers to inform him of the condition of the Confederates. (3½ pp.)

1678, Oct. 7th. Henry Coventry to the King. About Oates, Coleman, and Rumball. (2 pp.)

1675, Nov. Copy of Lord Shaftesbury's speech in Parliament. Begins, Our all is at stake and therefore you must give me leave to speak freely before we part with it. (9 pp.) It is on the subject of Appeals.

Lord Shaftesbury to — (of Carlisle). Begins, I very much approve of what Lord Mordant and you told me you were about:—says he can't come up to town as he intended, for he hears it reported that an office with a strange name is prepared for him.—He will come when the addressee sends for him. (1 p.)

1677. Copy of (Hydes?) Speech to the King of Poland.—The King has agreed with the King of France to assist in establishing the King of Poland.

1701. That part of Dr. Smith's letter to Mr. Bennet, the bookseller, which relates to the paper published against the Earl of Rochester. (The True Patriot Vindicated.) He tells which speech it was that he Latinised, and that there was nothing about religion in it.

The Earl of Orrery's letters (from Castle Martyr) to Sir J. Mallet, M.P., as follow:—

1678, Jan. 1st and 14th, March 7th and 21st, June 24th and 28th, July 16th, Oct. 22nd, Nov. 26th, Dec. 3rd, 6th, 10th, 20th, and 27th. (It seems that Sir John Mallet sent news; and the Earl of Orrery tells him a little Irish news; these letters are generally of one page.) In the letter dated 3rd of Dec., he says very few of the Romish Titular and regular clergy had gone out of the Kingdom, notwithstanding the late Proclamation requiring them to do so; and very few firearms have been brought in.

In the letter of the 20th of Dec., he says, the 12th instant a damned plot was detected at Dublin for murdering the Lord Lieutenant; a young Englishman, one John Jephson, was to have committed the villany at the instigation of four Irish Roman Ecclesiastics, of whom two are taken; one is in France and the other not known where.

Copies of some depositions in Irish Plots in 1678.

Copy of an unsigned letter on the Plot. (3 pp.)

There are other letters from the Earl of Orrery to Sir J. Mallet in 1679, March 28th, April 4th, 8th, 28th, 29th, May 2nd, 6th, 13th, and 23rd.

1678, Aug., Arington near Hungerford.—W. Jones to —. His opinion concerning words spoken by Mr. Malet, which he thinks are criminal. (1 p.)

1678, April. Copy of a letter by the State of Genoa to their agent touching the murder of the Duke of Somerset. Begins, Magnifico nostro Agente. (2 pp.)*

1677, Sept. 19th. Unsigned newsletter to Thomas Thynne, M.P. (3 pp.)

1677, Oct. 13th, London. Ditto. (3 pp.)

1677, Oct. 24th, London. Ditto. (3 pp.)

1677, Dec. 4th, London. Ditto. (1 p.)

1677, Oct. 23rd, Whitehall. — to his brother Thomas Thynne.—Yesterday the King declared his resolution of giving Lady Mary to the Prince of Orange; the Duke being called in declared, his desire and consent. (1 p.)

1678, Jan. 1st, The Hague. (Indorsed Mr. Hyde to Secretary Williamson.) About the treaty of peace and the wording of it. (16½ pp.)

1679, Jan. 4th, Vienne. Guillaume de Schrotters (or Schrolders) to the King.—Sends a powder to counteract fever.

1679, Oct. 20th. (Endorsed, This paper was presented to the King by the Duke of York.)—That about May or June last Col. ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR GERALD FITZGERALD, BART., OF THURNHAM HALL, LANCASHIRE.

After the report on the MSS. at Thurnham Hall (see p. 246 of the Appendix to the 3rd Report of the Commission), Sir Gerald sent for examination the following:—

Pedigree of the House of Desmond, from Morice Fitz-Gerald son to Gerald of Windsor and Nesta daughter of Rhesus, Prince of Wales, who went to Ireland 16 Henry II., down to James Fitzjohn, 14th Earl who married Joan, daughter of Viscount Roche. Honora, one of the daughters of the daughter of the 14th Earl "married McCarthy More, by whom she had issue " Ellen, wife to Florence McCarthy now prisoner in " England." This account of the family occupies 3½ pp., foolscap size, closely written. The writing is of the early part of the reign of King James I.

1686 (Nov.) 4th.* Thomas Nugent to Sir John Fitzgerald, Bart. Tells of Sir John's poor friend Edmund Fitzgerald, being persuaded to meet an antagonist in order to a reference, and that on the word of a gentleman and Christian no further trouble should be offered him, both of which he forfeited by taking poor Ned and sending him to gaol at Cork. Edmund sent word to Nugent, who wrote to the mayor that Edmund was one of Sir John's soldiers and consequently not to be arrested without Sir John's leave, or orders from higher powers; in which he finds that they have taken Edmund into their own custody, and that he was to be kept at the Guard Chamber until Sir John's pleasure was known. Nugent says that the pass makes Edmund Sir John's soldier, and thinks that Sir John should write to Capt. Colgrave to say that he does not wish to cover any to defraud his neighbour, but that until they address him or the higher power he will not expose the King's soldier or friend. "You were extremely wanting at Cork, last night being Gunpowder Treason. "Capt. Colgrave discoursed nie three days agoe about "what he should order that night. I told him he "should act as he thought convenient, but that if he "had a mind to imitate the King he should use noe "ceremony; for I living this time twelvemonth in "London, the King ordered that bone-fires nor noe "other ceremony should be used; notwithstanding "which he drew out the regiment and made them fire

* This should be (perhaps it is) 6th, because of the reference in the letter to Gunpowder Treason.

"a volley of comemoration to their former principles; "this is what we get by such commanders in chief; "if more falls in their way, we shall not be forgot; "let us give our friends thanks."

1689, Dublin. John Callaghan to Sir John Fitzgerald, Bart., at his house in Limerick. — Sir John will find by the letters he (Callaghan) lately wrote to him that the prospect of having a company elsewhere was not his motive for quitting his employ under Sir John, but his indisposition (which yet was so much that he could do nothing with his right hand, but writing by the help of a table to support it). Thanks Sir John for continuing him in his ensign's place. 'Tis true he might have a company raised in September last, but Sir John having then sent for a commission for him in Lieut. Lavallen's place, and he (C.) finding Sir John willing to advance him further and there being a talk of their marching to the north, he was ashamed to move for a discharge; but now seeing he cannot draw his sword he is forced to receive the discharge. Sir John says he (C.) may continue until he is provided with a captain's place, which he doubts not to have next campaign if he be able to manage it; but if he do not recover the use of his hand by the end of the month or the beginning of February, he will resign. Thanks Sir John for his kindness; so does Col. Dennis Callaghan. . . 'Tis said His Majesty goes towards Cork, Kingsale as some say, on Thursday, and as others say on Monday next. The major was here for money, and went away on Sunday, and Capt. Fitzmaurice along with him; he said if he did not come himself he would write to Callaghan about consulting Councillor Butler in order to get the regiment removed to Munster, after the taking of Kenagh. Some of Sir John's officers at Dublin, but Capt. Roche and Capt. Creagh. Sir John's brother was still there; he had expected to go to Scotland, but now he did not know where to go.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF LEWIS MAJENDIE, ESQUIRE, M.P., OF HEDINGHAM CASTLE, CO. ESSEX.

These are few. The most important is a long Bede Roll of the end of the 12th century, shewing that 120 churches acceded to the entreaty of the Abbess of the Convent of Hedingham to pray for the Soul of her predecessor Lucy the Countess of Oxford. The various styles of writing make this a most valuable document for palæographical purposes, as well as for the notices of churches then existing.

The topography of the Manor of Castle Hedingham at the latter end of the 16th century is amply shewn by a volume of descriptions and plans compiled for Lord Burghley who was the then owner.

There are many letters, from 1753 to 1763, from the Archbishop of Canterbury and others to the Revd. John James Majendie, D.D., relating to relief from England to Hungarian, French, and other foreign Protestants. Notes of them are given below.

A parchment roll, about 20 feet long and seven inches wide. This was sent to various religious houses in England by Agnes the humble servant (minister) of the Church of the Holy Cross and St. Mary of Henigeham, so that they might testify to their offering prayers for the soul of Lucy Countess of Oxford (wife of Aubrey de Vere, 3rd Earl of Oxford), foundress of the priory of Heningham, Co. Essex. The letter by Agnes to the religious houses is in Gothic characters. About four-fifths of the certificates by the religious houses are in corrupted Lombardic or Norman characters: some are in modern Gothic and some few in Lombardic small letters. There are three well executed drawings occupying the whole width of the roll. The first represents Christ on the Cross between Mary and John, and to the right hand are the Virgin seated with the infant Jesus. The second represents two Angels drawing up a lady in her shroud to heaven. The third represents the sprinkling and thurification of the lady in her coffin; monks and nuns are in attendance. At the top of each drawing are some Latin verses. The churches which certified their compliance with the request are as follows:—

Christ and Sts. Botolph, Julian, and Denis of Colchester, St. John the Baptist of Stoke, St. Mary of Colum, St. Mary Wicmsie, Sts. Peter, Paul, and Mary of Osyth, John the Baptist of Colchester, Sts. Peter and Paul of Hockel, St. Mary of Coggeshall, St. John the Apostle and Evangelist of Lega, St. Mary of Dunmawe, St. Mary of Hatfeld, Sts. Mary and Martin of

The form of entry for each Church is "Titulus ecclesie" (the name of the church) followed by a short prayer for the Lady.

In some cases the entry was perhaps made by one of the persons bearing the roll; but many are evidently made by the authorities at the different churches: and this roll is a most interesting and important document to shew the various styles of writing in the last decade of the 12th century. It is noticed in Morant's History of Essex and in Astle's History of Writing. A descendant of Mr. Astle presented it to Mr. Majendie.

22 Hen. VIII. Rental of Poris*. A roll about three feet long. Total annual rent, 27l. 6s. 11d.

3 Edw. VI. Rental, as well free as copy, of Hedingham. A roll about three feet long. Total annual rent, 35l. 10s. 11d.

1592. A folio volume. Extent of the Honour and Manor of Castle Hedingham, &c., parcel of the possessions of Lord Burghley and late of E. de Vere, Earl of Oxford, &c. 222 leaves including an index. The plans are very neatly drawn and they and the descriptions of the houses and lands are very numerous and precise. The volume was compiled by Israel Amyce.

A folio volume, paper, 17th century. La discipline Ecclesiastique des Eglises réformées de France. — Mémoire de tous les Synodes nationaux (from that of Paris 1559 to that of Alençon 1637).—Titles of the Chapters of "La Discipline Ecclesiastique" (fourteen in number; 1. Des Ministres et Pasteurs; 14. Des Reglements, et Advertissement pour les particuliers).

1644. Rental of the Manors of Hedingham upland, Hedingham Nunnery, Prayers and Grays (about three feet long). The names of tenants are placed alphabetically. The rental was 36l. 5s. 9d.

Folio, 16 leaves. Antiquities of Hedingham ad Castrum, and Sible Hedingham, and Colne Earles. It contains an account (5 pp.) of Sir John Hawkwood, born at Sible Hedingham.

A folio volume containing letters inlaid. 1753 and 4. Letters from Thomas (Herring) Archbishop of Canterbury to John James Majendie, on the subject of an application by Hungarians for aid. In the third letter he tells Mr. Majendie to thank Mr. Rimius for his letters, and particularly for the curious detail of his interview with Cossart, in which he thinks that Rimius conducted himself like a man of spirit.—In the fourth letter (Sept. 22, 1754) he acknowledges the receipt of the Hungarian representation of their case:—he will read it, and if necessary alter and submit the alterations to Majendie and others. Will answer Mr. Professor's letter and that of the President of Zurich. Would like to acquaint Mr. Professor that he approves and would encourage the publication of the letters which he mentions:—that he could get assistance from the Bench of Bishops, but they are all in the country and nothing can be attempted until they return. Nothing effectual can be done for the Hungarians until winter, and even then he fears nothing can be done but some present assistance. Asks Majendie to tell Mr. Kolmar that the reason why he does not answer the two letters is not from neglect or want of regard to the President and College of Zurich and Mr. Professor, but that he is disabled by the season of the year, which keeps London empty. Asks Majendie to return some letters to Mr. Duplan:—thinks his answer to Mr. Pomaret's letter very good. Is concerned at the appearance of the severe spirit in Languedoc, and particularly for the hard fate of Lafage:—he had the detail of that cursed execution some days ago, and thought it of moment enough to put it in the hands of the Ministry.

1754, Nov. 22. Says he is in earnest in desiring to assist the University of Debritzen in its present difficulties. Suggests that Mr. Wieszpresni shall go round with a petition to all the Bishops.

1754, Dec. 22. Says that Mr. Rimius does well to go on with his work, and having shewn the dirty nonsense of the Moravian enthusiasm, it will of consequence be demonstrable from facts that they have imposed on the Legislature, and that their principal assumes a power dangerous to the State. Is much concerned about the poor Hungarians;—hears that an annual subscription will not go down; doubts if they can hope for much aid at present. The Bench are pressed upon these applications from abroad, and many others at home, beyond their abilities.

1755, Jan. 8. Is despondent about aid to the Hungarians.

1755, May 4. Sends the Bishops subscriptions and his own. Thinks they should be placed in the Funds.

1755, Nov. 17. Thinks so well of the men and the sad case of Debritzen that if they return to England he will do anything for them he can.

1755, Nov. 30. Will set about getting aid for honest Rimius.

1755, Dec. 17. Ask Majendie to wait on the Bishop of London and Dr. Nichols at the Temple. Has 40 guineas for Rimius.

1756, Feb. 15 and March 2. In the last he gives a form certifying that the bearer, Mr. Stephen Wieszpresni of the University of Debritzen in Hungary, produced to him and the rest of the Bishops satisfactory credentials of his character; and being convinced of the low and compassionate state of that Protestant University they contribute to the relief of the Students there.

1756, June 7. Is glad that the poor people of Debritzen have had some success at Cambridge. Hopes they will have the same at Oxford. Is sorry that Rimius is disappointed: says that he did the best he could for him.

1758, April 17, Exeter. G. Exon [George Lavington, bishop of Exeter] to Majendie.—Says that Majendie's and Mr. Planta's letters came safe:—will take care to recommend him to his Grace of Canterbury. If there is a catalogue of the late Mr. Rimius's book he would like to have one.

1758, July 17. G. Exon to Majendie.—Is glad of Planta's success. His Grace of Canterbury told him (the writer) that the Lord Keeper and the Speaker had agreed to appoint Planta to be an Assistant. Mr. Planta says that Moravianism is dissipated at London. The writer, however, fancies that the Count abroad is renewing his attempts, and perhaps composing what he

* The name of Poris is in the margin. The contents of the roll seem to relate to the manor of Prayers or Preiers in Essex.

MAJENDIE, Esq. calls his great work to keep up or recover the spirits of his party.

1758, Sept. Copy of letter by Thomas [Secker] Archbishop of Canterbury to the Gentlemen of the Committee at Geneva for the relief of the distressed.

1758, Sept. 20. Thomas [Secker] Archbishop of Canterbury to Majendie, asking him to revise and translate the above.

1759. A letter about French Protestants.

1759, April 15. The Bishop of Winchester [Benjamin Hoadly] to Majendie, about the presentation to a living in Guernsey entrusted to him and Majendie by Lord Delawarr.

Two others by him and one by the Bishop of Exeter about a bounty to French Protestants, and one by the Archbishop about an application by German Protestants.

1761, April 24. Copy of a Message from the Protestants in France by M. Gibert. (3 pp.)

"Mr. Majendie and Mr. Muysan, two French clergymen, brought to me M. Gibert, a French Protestant Minister officiating in France, with credentials from several of his brethren and the Act of a Synod in the Upper Cevennes in 1758, all expressing that they would leave the country if they could not be relieved from the hardships which they now suffer on account of their religion."—The writer gives an account of his communication of the matter to the Duke of Newcastle, Pitt, and Lord Bute: they agreed that application to France might retard a peace and expose us to applications on behalf of Papists. If they left their country they should be received well in England, Ireland, or America. The King was visited, and he said he should like to help them, but could not interfere then without hurt to them; but that they should be well received if they came over.—Above 1,700*l.* was given by the King for French ministers: this was now more than sufficient; part might be applied to the ministers who came over. (This seems to be a Memorandum of some one who had an interview with the King.)

1761, Sept. 29. Thomas Secker, Archbishop of Canterbury, to Majendie. Hesitates to deliver Du Plan's letter to the King because he cannot affirm all contained in it. Du Plan says that in 1695 the Commons voted 15,000*l.* a year to the French refugees, and this is in M.'s book, Les Plaintes, &c. But the 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 30. § 31, only authorised raising any sum not exceeding 15,000*l.*, and that but for once. The writer thinks that the 15,000*l.* a year given afterwards was the voluntary bounty of the Crown. (3 pp.)

1761, March 13, &c. The same to the same. (3 letters.)

1762, March 1. Lord Ligonier to the Archbishop.—Acknowledges his letter about La Riviere and Causee; will recommend them to Parslow (the Governor of Gibraltar?), and thinks that the Archbishop's recommendation will get them an additional douceur.

1763, Jan. 7. Lord Egremont to the Archbishop.—Handed the Archbishop's letter to the King, who says that the same assurances which were given to Mr. Gibert should be repeated in the manner proposed.

Other long letters by him on the subject; and account of the King's opinions.

1763, Nov. 3. The Archbishop to Majendie. He has a Greek letter from one who signs himself Nectarius Protosyncellus to the Patriarch of Antioch; saying that he was a presbyter in the Greek and Russian Church at Amsterdam until he was convinced that they worshipped bones and wood like idolaters.—Makes enquiries about him.

Two more letters about Nectarius.

Nov. 22. Poor Nectarius is in despair and thinks of returning to Amsterdam. "Give him 5 or 10 guineas for me."

Other letters by the Archbishop (who seems to have been very charitable).

1767, March 4.—Mr. Sharpe, Clerk of the Council, says that the first step for the poor Vaudois is to have a Petition to the King in Council, signed by some one on their behalf.

1767, Sept. 5. Has received 206*l.* 5*s.* for half a year's pension to the Vaudois, due Oct. 10, 1766. Of this 134*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* belongs to those in Piedmont.—He saw the Queen on Thursday, and sent her two dozen of figs the same morning.

Letter by the Archbishop about the Vaudois.

Statement of or by the Community of Bobby or Bobbio, a valley of Luzern, sufferers from the overflow of Pellice.

Copy Petition to the King in Council by the Vaudois, a Protestant Canton in the valley of Piedmont (inhabiting the valleys of Luzerne, Perouse, and St. Martin), telling of their sufferings from persecution by Papists, from storms and floods; and asking aid by a Brief for Charitable Collections throughout England and Wales.

Particulars (in French) of the Expenses of a Pastor in the Valleys, who had six children, a servant, and a horse.

1771. Copy of a Memorial to Majendie by Samuel Chausépis concerning the application to be made of the interest on the sum collected for Piedmont.

Copies of two Letters by Majendie to the Commissaries of the Churches.

1763. Printed memoir about them. (7 pp.)

Letters in 1763 (2), 1768 (1), 1769 (3), 1770 (1), by J. Samuel Chaletain at Amsterdam about the Church.

Long letter by the Archbishop to Mr. Majendie about a paper by Majendie on the management of the Brief.

A few other papers on the subject.

I beg to acknowledge, with thanks, the hospitality of Mr. Majendie at Hedingham Castle.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE REV. H. T. ELLACOMBE, OF CLYST ST. GEORGE, DEVONSHIRE.

These comprise a great number of letters (chiefly of the 17th century) of the family of Newton of Barr's Court, co. Gloucester; but very few of them contain matter of public interest. A notice of Barr's Court and of the masters of that place was contributed by Mr. Ellacombe to the 4th volume of the Herald and Genealogist (1868).

There are some original Court Rolls and Hundred Rolls for the manors of Bitton, Oldelonde, &c., in the co. of Gloucester. An account of the manor of Bitton (by Mr. Ellacombe) is in the above-mentioned volume of the Herald and Genealogist.

A small collection of early Bristol deeds seemed worthy of the details which I have given below. The volume containing abstracts of Bristol wills is interesting.

There are a great number of papers relating to Kingswood Chase, and the trespasses, enclosures, and encroachments there in the 17th century.

Among the letters are—one by Charles II. regarding State Papers embezzled by the regicide Bradshaw; two giving news and reports shortly before and just after the flight of King James II.; and some of the time of Charles II. give notices of the Rye House Plot and the conspirators. Papers here show how Francis Creswicke, of Hannams Court, was thrown into prison on suspicion of communicating with Monmouth's officers when his army was at Keynsham, and how he got released.

A grant by the Abbess of Lacock 7 Hen. VIII. should be noticed.

The only papers and letters of general interest are the following:

Temp. James I. One page. Argument against giving parliamentary confirmation of grants of crown lands (to Scotchmen); and that even if such confirmation be granted, there should be a confirmation of leases therein made by the late Queen either for money, consideration or for good service.

1 p. 4to. The oath of a burgesse (of the city of Bristol). This is printed in black letter. At the foot is a written certificate by Thomas Pott the Chamberlain sealed with his seal of office, that Fraunces Creswicke was, on the 19th December 1608, admitted into the liberties of the city; Mr. John Butcher, Mayor, and Thomas Moore and William Yonge, Shreves.

1646, Dec. 15. A printed form of license, by the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall for compounding with Delinquents, to Henry Creswick, whose composition was not perfected, to continue within the cities of London and Westminster or elsewhere within the lines of communication or within 20 miles distant from the said lines, for attending his said composition. Signed by John Ashe, Robert Jenner, Antho. Irby, and four others.

1661, Aug. 8, London. Ossory to the Mayor of Bristol on his absence to Mr. Thomas Longton. He received lately advice of a writ directed to the coroners of Bristol at the suit of John Knight and backed by Robert Yeamans. Asks him to inquire about it and let him (Ossory) know the result and he will do what he can according to the mayor's directions. In a P.S. he offers to write to Knight and doubts not he shall easily take him of (off).

1665, Aug. 23, Hynam near Gloucester. George Lane to . . . acknowledges the addressees' joint letter of 22 Aug. and sends inclosed the Lord Lieutenant's letter to the Lord Chancellor on their concern, with a flying seal, so that when they have perused, they may seal and deliver it.

1670, Feb. 22, Whitehall. Copy of order in Council (the King, the Duke of York, Prince Rupert and 12 others present) on the petition of the Earl of Rochester, Sir John Newton, Bart., Thomas Chester, John Meredith and William Player, Esqs., lords of the several manors adjoining the chase of Kingswood, co. Gloucester, on behalf of themselves and their tenants and other freeholders, commoners within the chase, complaining that Sir Baynham Throckmorton, Kt. and Bart., instead of getting a patent for the rangership, had obtained from the King a lease for 60 years (contrary to all former example) of all the King's rights and oppressed the commoners and cottagers. Ordered that a copy of the petition be delivered to Sir Baynham Throckmorton, who is to return an answer in writing to the Board on the 1st of March, and the petitioners and he were then to attend and bring with them counsel learned if they pleased.

1683, Feb. 14, London. G. Newton to his father Sir John Newton at Barras Court near Bristol . . . On Sunday last there happened a sad accident to Esqre. Thynn who lately marry'd the Lady Ogle, as he was riding in his coach through the Pall Mall; three or four foreigners came up and one of them fired a blunderbuss and killed Thynn. He says the cause of the assassination was conjectured to be in respect of an outlandish Count, who they say had received some affront from Esqre. Thynn; the Count was formerly a pretender to the Lady Ogle.

1682, July, Bristol. Richard Towgood, Dean of Bristol, and Samuel Crossman, treasurer, to Sir John Newton at Barr's Court. They ask his assistance towards erecting "a great fair organ and other ornaments" in the cathedral.

16 . . Oct. 16. P. (Peter Mew, Bishop of) Bath and Wells to Sir John Newton at Harptry.—Is sorry he cannot comply with the proposition of Lord Grandison (with regard to a patent affecting the Forest (of Kingswood?). He will maintain the ancient custom.

1688, April 16. Will. Sacheverell to his father-in-law Sir John Newton at Barr's Court.—Understanding that Sir John is to have his trial on the 16th of May, he will be in London on the 10th. (Seal of arms, 6 quarters.)

1691, March 3. Jane Sacheverell to her brother (Sir John Newton) . . . Has not written to her brother Stringer to meet him. As for Will. Sacheverell going to Cambridge, they will discuss of that when the addressee comes.

1688, Sept. 9, Longleat. Visct. Weymouth to Sir Jno. Newton.—Not hearing that Sir John intends to stand for Knight of the Shire, he asks Sir John's support for his (the writer's) brother Thynne.

1688, Nov. 8. V.R. to Sir John Newton. Since the first account they had of the Prince of Orange's landing several expresses have come, but the matter kept very private; . . . 'tis believed the King will not go into the field until the apprehension of another landing in the north be over . . . Much fears that Bristol will be aimed at, and that near Sir John will be the seat of war. Most people hereabouts bury their plate and secure themselves as well as they can, tho' he fancies they have least reason to fear. Lord Peterborough's regiment marched to-day, and on Saturday or Sunday a train of artillery will go out. Report of the bishops being desired to sign an abhorrence of the Prince of Orange; they have all refused to do it, upon the account the King would not let them see the declaration, wherein they were told they as spiritual lords were mentioned.

1688, Dec. 13 (London?). Last night we were all alarmed about 1 o'clock. Nothing was heard in our street, but To arms, to arms, telling us that the Irish, &c. were committing all manner of outrages, as murder, &c. . . . it was a false alarm . . . The King left us on Tuesday last at 3 in the morning, and my Lord Chancellor went away about the same time; but the Lord Chancellor was taken yesterday at Wapping in a little ale house and was brought up to town and committed to the Tower; they have also taken 35,000 guynies besides a great deal of silver which he had sent on board a collier, that was to have transported him beyond sea. To-day, news that the King is stopped near Feversham: he was in a little hoy and with him

Sir Edward Hales and two priests. The King will be in town to-morrow. It is said that as soon as the news was brought that the King was stopped, the Lords here in town sent a petition to him to return back to Whitehall. The Prince's vanguards are at Brenford, and will be in town to-morrow, and the Prince is at Staynes, and is expected on Saturday.

1692, March 30. Certificate signed and sealed by Robert Fisher, Nicholas Beck, and Thomas Ireland, three of the commissioners for executing the Act of Parliament for raising money by a poll for carrying on the war against France, that Sir John Newton of Barr's Court is liable for a horse and horseman with arms for his lands in the county of Lincoln.—On the same paper, 1692 May 4, Certificate by the same persons that John Newton of Calverthorpe is liable for a horse, horseman and arms for his lands in the county of Lincoln. Both were for the militia.

16 . . Badminton, Friday night. (The Marquis of) Worcester to Sir John Newton at Barrows court. Finding by consultation with some of the deputy lieutenants that alarm is taken already by the disaffected, especially towards Oxfordshire, where they have searched already,—he thinks it best that they should all search at the same time, and asks Sir John to send his horse and friends and servants to Winterborne on Tuesday to accompany Mr. Burnell in the search. Asks him to send by the bearer two of the orders they signed and keep the other till he meets with Mr. Chester.

The Costs and Charges of our journey to London on the Lord Chamberlain's warrant (1 p.): from Saturday, 9 July 1692, until the following Saturday, 18. 13s. 5d. They came with a messenger; and had to procure bail and justify them. The taverns mentioned are the Raven and Three Tuns, the Cheshire Cheese, the King's Head, and the One Bell. They went by boat from Blackfriars to the City; on the Thursday they had to wait all day at the King's Head with the bail (being four) for Lord Justice Treby's return to his chamber; and they paid the messenger there for not confining them at all, 3l. 5s. One item in the bill names "Mr. Till Adams, and self."—The indorsement on the paper is "Wm. Prewetts account of cost of going to London before the Lord Chamberlain."

1695, Feb. 29, Pensford. J. Langton and Cir. Lyde to Sir Jno. Newton.—John Weekes, an Ensign in Sir Bev. Green's (Grenville's) regiment, with two sergeants, being taken up on suspicion against the government, were brought to them at Pensford. Weekes informs them that he is well known to Captain Newton, having a grandfather living near Barr's Court, to whom he has written the inclosed letter. They ask Sir John to return by the bearer a testimonial of the Ensign's reputation.

1696, July 16, Bristol. William Cox to Sir John Newton . . . Dyer in his letter, now as well as last post gives an account, that there is peace concluded between the French King and the Duke of Savoy . . . one of the reasons assigned was, that the Spaniard owed him 2,000,000l. of money, and the Duke of Savoy was to give the Duke of Burgundy the county of Nice, as a portion with his daughter. At the same time King William has published an order in the camp, that no person presume to talk of a peace on pain of a common soldier being hanged and an officer cashiered. But it is all the discourse at the Hague, and that it is proclaimed at France.

M. Cr. to Rochford (so indorsed).—Copy of a letter interceding for her husband's liberty; she having six children, who would have starved if Mr. Scrope had not given assistance. If her husband be at liberty he will doubtless put her in a position to perfect the agreement made with the addressee. She has begged Mr. Poley and Mr. Scrope to intercede.

1708, Jan. 19, Louth. Gervase Scroop to (his uncle) Sir John Newton.—Having made public profession of the Protestant religion, he asks Sir John to effect his reconciliation with his father; and to try to get him a post in the army; or in the fleet that is expected to go to sea next summer, under Lord Pembroke the High Admiral.

1704, Jan. 22, Gibraltar from on board the Siren (?), gally. John Euer to Mrs. Bridget Hort, at Temple Street, Bristol.—They intend to sail that night for Levorna (Leghorn) . . . That day they parted company with Sir Cloudesley Shovel and 125 sail of ships more bound up the Straits. They met with a hard storm the 2d of January, in which they lost their maintopmast and sprung the head of their mainmast, but the storm abated and they have their mast rigged again.

ELLACOMBE.

W. H. T.
MILCOMER.

1711, July 25, Bishopsthorp. Jo[h]n Sharp, Arch-bishop of York to Sir John Newton, at his house in Soho Square, London.—All he can tell of Mr. Claringhorn is that he was educated in the Popish religion and took holy orders in that Church; that afterwards having great scruples in his mind about that religion, he applied himself to the writer; and upon further reading and consideration being satisfied of the errors thereof, he, by the writer's order, made a public renunciation of it, and was received into the Protestant communion. About a year after (viz. in 1701) the writer bestowed the living of Conishorrough on him. The writer has not seen him for some years, but hears that he behaves himself as he ought, is acceptable to his parish and is a popular preacher, so that Sir John need not scruple to give him the living Sir John mentions, worth 60*l.* per annum.

1711, Aug. 3. W[illiam Wake, Bishop of] Lincoln, to the Rev. Mr. Archdeacon Rogers;—telling him that he may let Sir Jo. Newton know that until Mr. Stokes is well enough to come to him (the Bishop) for institution, he will, upon the archdeacon's account, take no advantage of any lapse that may occur to him. The writer says that he wrote a long letter to the archdeacon by the last post about the affair of Dadlington.

Copy of an address to a jury summoned to meet by virtue of an Act of Parliament of the 12th of Queen Anne, for making the river Avon, in the counties of Somerset and Gloucester, navigable from the city of Bath to Hannam's Mills. (The jury were impanelled to give compensation to persons whose lands were taken or affected by the works.)

1719, March 21, Berkeley Castle.—H. Berkeley to Francis Creswick, Esq., at Hanham.—Having been, at the Assizes, nominated for candidate at the ensuing election, he asks the vote and interest of Creswick.

A packet, of letters from Thomas Oldfield (a solicitor) dated from Bristol and London (1682–1700) addressed to Sir John Newton, chiefly relating to a suit about Kingswood.

1683, June 23, London. He says that there is a plot discovered of a design that was laid to kill the King and Duke as they came from Newmarket, wherein Mr. West, Mr. Nelthropp, and Mr. Wade, barristers of the Temple, Col. Romsey, Capt. Walcot, Goodenough and his brother, with divers others, are reported to be concerned, and it's certain all he has named are fled; but Mr. West last night rendered himself and was this day examined before the King and Council at Hampton Court, and hath discovered the design and the confederates, amongst which there were four of the King's and Duke's guards.

1683, July 5. It is generally believed the conspirators will be tried next week and found guilty, for Col. Romsey it is said has made a great discovery.

1684, June 12, London. Sir Thomas Armstrong was brought yesterday in the evening before the Council at Whitehall, but refused to answer those questions he was examined to, as I am told; and it is likely to be true, for he returned back to Newgate in a very short time.

1688, Dec. 22. It is said the King is still at Rochester, and the Prince's guards with him, but whether he is under a confinement by them is not certain, as I can hear, but I am told he has liberty to go where he pleases. There was a great Council at St. James's where the Prince is, Wednesday last, and another Thursday. The Princess of Denmark and Prince came to Whitehall Wednesday with the Bishop of London. The Chancellor has petitioned the Prince, acknowledging his crimes to be as numerous as his enemies, begging pardon and promising to discover secrets relating to the succession. It is said Sir Robert Atkyns the elder will be a great man in Westminster Hall. One letter I am told mentions that the King is gone to Calais, but the rest say he is at Rochester.

1687, Feb. 4. This day, our late Mayor, Mr. Lane, the sheriffs, with several aldermen and common councilmen, (in all about 28) were by the King's command displaced, and Mr. Day nominated Mayor, and Sanders, a haberdasher, and Hine, a grocer, sheriffs, and divers new aldermen and common councilmen appointed. Alderman Lawford, Alderman Crabb, Alderman Creswick, Sir Richard Crump, and Sir Wm. Hayman, continue aldermen. Sir William Meyrick, Mr. Yate, Mr. Blackwell, and six more of the former common council are left in. Mr. Wade is our town clerk.

1688, Oct. 13, Bristol. The letters say that the Bishop of Winchester has order from His Majesty to restore Dr. Hough and the rest of the fellows of Magdales College, and that the Dutch fleet was at sea, but driven in again by contrary winds.

1688, Nov. 30, Bristol. By a letter yesterday received, I was informed that the city of London refused to quarter soldiers, and it is said the bridges at Staines, Kingston, Windsor, and Maidenhead are to be broken down and stands to be raised. The Princess of Denmark, with the ladies Churchill and Berkeley, went privately away Sunday night, but it is not said whether the Duke of Newcastle, Earl of Derby, and Lord Fairfax have seized York and put out Sir John Beresby, the governor. The Earls of Devonshire, Derby, Rutland, Exeter, Chesterfield, Lords Delamere, Lumley, Cholmley, Latimer, and 6 or 7 more, are reported to be about Northampton with 7,000 men. Sir Edward Hales is out of the Tower and Skelton put in, who took the oaths Tuesday last, and that day was a great council, the king (who came to town the day before) and all the Bishops and Lords in and about London being present and many preliminaries to a Parliament were debated, in which they were to deliver their opinions the day following, as to a regulation of the Council, cessation of arms, and discharging of Catholic officers, most of which it is supposed would be agreed to; and no papists were at that council. It is said Sir Jonathan Guyse and Col. Trelawne with some regiments of the prince's will be here this day or to-morrow. . . . One come from Gloucester says that Lord Lovelace was carried off thence by five bold fellows, Wednesday last.

A great number of original depositions in the suit (Newton v. Creswicke) about Kingswood Chase, and a great number in the matter of a riot there. And a number of papers relating to the Chase and the claims of commoners. And a 12mo. volume (temp. Car. II.), containing a copy of a charter by Charles II., and numerous copies of, or extracts from records (from very early times) relating to the Chase.

A portfolio contains a large number of letters to and by Sir John Newton, Bart., and to his son. A few are by Col. John Seymour to Sir John Newton. All except those by Col. Seymour are on purely domestic or business matters.

1695, April 9. Jo. Seymour to Sir John Newton, Bart., at Barr's Court (franked by Edw. Norrey). . . . Most of our foot in Flanders are already encamped, on the enemies endeavouring to strengthen and enlarge their lines, and it is believed some action must ensue upon it.

1695, Feb. 22, London. The same to the same.—Sorry my honest comrade, Gervais, will be called away so soon; it being the King's positive order for all officers to go with the next convoy, and it will be ready for the 6th of March. . . . I am not yet assured of my stay this summer in England, but our great ones tell me I shall. Your old acquaintance, Ned Rowse, is made governor of Upnor Castle, near Chatham, and O. Wortley, one of Gervais br. (brother?), captains has his company in the guards.

1695, March 3. The same to the same.—Every hour brings in some of the conspirators, and I believe most of them will be tried this week. There are 17 French merchant ships taken by the Guernsey privateers, laden with brandy and wines, and we are in hourly expectation of some good news from Mr. Russell. It is credibly believed that 80 transport ships are passed towards Scotland with 8 men-of-war, and the Scotch noblemen are posted away thither, in case their assistance be wanted.

1695, Feb. 20. The same to the same.—Our friend, Mr. Blaithwayte, went hence this morning and intends to be at Dirham [on] Monday:—my cousin, Berkeley, has this morning lost his dear wife . . . Lord Portland has the Garter, being elected into the order last night.

1697, April 20. The same to the same . . . Lord Sunderland is made Lord Chamberlain; Sir H. Hobart and Col. Wharton, Commissioners of the Admiralty; and Mr. Pelham, Lord of the Treasury. There will be other changes, which are not yet public.

REV. H. T.
ELLACOMBE.

1697, Oct. 12, London. Jo. Seymour to Sir John Newton, Bart., at his house Barrecourt, near Bristol.—Sir, This morn we had a mail from Holland, which brought order for the disbanding five regiments of foot, three of horse, and two of dragoons, forthwith; these were last raised here about three years since; the peace is proclaimed in Holland, and my Lord Portland is hourly expected, who will bring directions to have it proclaimed here likewise. The King will be here in three weeks. God send him a good passage to his joyful subjects; we have a very ill account from poor Nevill and his squadrons, himself being dead, with a great many officers more, and 1,500 seamen of sickness and ill provisions. I wish the ships and surviving few were returned.

Several bundles of letters, to and from Sir John Newton and other members of the family, and letters on business. Out of these I could only collect the following slightly interesting passages.

1689, Nov. 9. G. N(ewton) to Sir John Newton. A letter giving parliamentary proceedings from the 4th instant.

1710, July 21. (Dr.) John Radcliffe to (Sir John Newton). A letter prescribing medicine for Lady (Newton).

A bundle of papers and letters of the Creswicke family. 1668. Inventory of the goods and chattels of Sir Henry Creswicke, late of the city of Bristol, merchant.—In the great parlour were (inter alia) one organ and virginals, and twelve pictures, valued at 6l. 2s. 6d. In the two long galleries were 51 pictures, valued at 2l. 10s. (these surely must have been prints). One of the rooms was called the Melancholy Chamber. The valuation of the goods at his houses in Bristol and Hanham amounted to 313l. 14s. 4d. He had besides plate of the weight of 754 oz..

Copy of will of Arthur Hathway, of Bitton, victualler, 1679.

A parcel of miscellaneous papers containing inter alia,—the names of the innholders and alehouse keepers in Easton, March 16, 1674. They were in number 44, and about three-fourths are marked as "not fit."

Names of the justices of the peace for the county of Gloucester (temp. James II.), 3 pp. folio.

Printed oath of a Burgess of Bristol, 1703.

Certificate (printed) that Henry Creswick took the oath against the Pretender, 1723.

A folio unbound of 69 written pages, containing, according to an endorsement on the cover, "Abstracts of wills, places of burial, names of streets, &c., from 1381." The first page begins with the words "Coll. out of the Great Book of Wills." The first will abstracted is that of John Wodrow, 6 Ric. II. At p. 13, is a short note of the will of William Rowley, 1479, stating that he gave several charities, particularly to the parish church of the Blessed Virgin at Dam, in Flanders, where he was buried, and to the nuns of St. Agnes, of the order of St. Austin, in that town, and to two places in Spain. (The reference is to p. 210.) At p. 7, the will of Simon Canynges is noticed (the reference is to p. 120). At p. 23, is an extract from the will of William Cannings, 1474, who had been five times mayor, and was the builder of St. Mary, Redcliffe. The latest will is of 13 Eliz. On the 55th page begin "other collections out of the Book of Wills and Enrolments of Deeds not before extracted by me." All the extracts relate to Bristol and Bristol people. The writing seems to be about 200 years old.

A parcel of early deeds (Latin).

John Huse, Lord of Charlecumbe, grants to Nicholas de Lyuns and his heirs, two marks of annual rent out of the four marks of annual rent which William de Paris pays out of land in Bristol, lying in Wynchestrete, between land of the said Nicholas and land of Walter de Tylli; he reserves by way of rent a pair of white gloves or one penny at the option of Nicholas. Power of distress. The consideration for the grant was 20 marks of silver. The witnesses were William Clerk, then mayor of Bristol, William de Beaumont, and Robert de Kilmein, bailiffs of Bristol; Thomas Long, William son of Nicholas, Walter de Paris, Amand Clerk, Robert de Leghe, Gibert de Merlberge, Elias Aky, Martin Bat, John Clerk.—Seal 1½ inches in diameter, shield of arms (seemingly three bars ermine), with inscription Sigillum Johannis Huse.

A rather later grant by the same John Huse (here written Hose) to the same Nicholas de Lyuns (here called de Leonibus), of (the other) two marks of annual rent which William de Paris paid out of the aforesaid land. He reserves a similar rent. The consideration was 20 marks sterling. The witnesses were the same as above (Kilmein being here written Kilmeynan), with the omission of John Clerk. Seal as before.

A.D. 1284, Michaelmas. Thomas de Lyons demises to Thomas de Westone, his heirs and assigns, a house in Bristol opposite the Pillory at the north end of Wynchestrete, for 600 years from Michaelmas then instant; the lessee is to keep the house in repair and perform all services and secular demands to the chief lord of the fee. Witnesses, Thomas de Hamedene, mayor of Bristol. (No other witness is named, and the label although prepared for a seal does not seem to have borne one. The conclusion is that the deed was not executed.)

A.D. 1286, Nativity of St. John Baptist. Thomas de Lyons demises to Thomas de Westone and Roysia his wife, and their heirs and assigns, two shops which Stephen Painter now holds, near the entrance to the mansion of the said T. de Lyons in Wynchestrete, in Bristol, thenceforth for 30 years. The lessor to keep the shops in repair, and the expenses of repairs paid by the lessees by reason of the default of the lessor he is to repay; and in default of his so doing the lessees may hold over beyond the term until they are indemnified. Witnesses, Richard de Manegodesfelde, mayor of Bristol, William de la Marine, who together with the said Thomas de Westone was bailiff of Bristol, John de Wycombe, Walter Young (Yuvene), tanner, Ralph Wyneman, Geoffrey Stote, William Dale, Roger Carpenter, tanner, John Boydin, clerk, and others. Seal of green wax. Device, a lion grappling with, I think, a dragon or serpent, of very beautiful execution. The legend, S. Thomæ de Lihouns.

Thomas de Lyons grants to Thomas de Westone, and his heirs and assigns, his house cum Cocks, which is beyond the gate and the land behind the house, which house is called Piscina, and is in Bristol, on the old wall behind the house late of his father, Nicholas de Lyons, in Wynchestret, between the messuage late of his sister, Alice de Lyons, and land of John de Pedertone (other abutments and the measurements are given). He grants a way through a certain gate, and a duplicate key. Rent, 4d. Consideration, a sum of money not specified. Witnesses, Everard le Franceys, Mayor of Bristol, William de Marina and John Clerk, bailiffs of Bristol, Richard de Manegodesfeld, Thomas of St. Albans, John of Kerdyf (Cardiff), Henry of Berewycke, Walter le Franceys, Richard le Ropere, Ralph Wyneman, John de la Leygrave, John de Wycombe, Roger the Fisher, John Boydin, clerk, and many others. Seal the same as the last.

Thomas de Lyons grants to Thomas de Westone, his heirs and assigns, a messuage in Wynchestret, in Bristol, nearly opposite the pillory at the north end of the said street, between land late of William de Parys and land of Master Robert Zeuare. Rent, to Thomas de Lyons his heirs and assigns, one silver penny, and to the King, 4½d. for landgavel, and to Sir Adam de Buctone, Kt., one silver halfpenny. Witnesses and seal (broken) the same as to the last.

Thomas de Lyons grants to Thomas de Westone, his heirs and assigns, a cellar (with right of entry and exit), in Bristol, behind the grantor's messuage in Wynchestret. Rent, one silver penny. Witnesses, Richard de Manegodesfelde, mayor of Bristol, William de la Marine, who with the said Thomas de Westone was bailiff of Bristol, Geoffrey Suel and Henry Hornecastel, seneschals of Bristol, Richard Draper the younger, Thomas of St. Albans, Henry le Waleys, Matthew le Packare, John Boydin, clerk, and others. Seal as the last.

17 Edw. I., Wednesday on the morrow of the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, Bristol.—Matilda relict of Thomas de Lyuns, late burgess of Bristol, releases to Thomas Nas, burgess of Bristol, and his heirs and assigns, all her right by way of freebench or otherwise in the tenement in Wynchestret, Bristol, in which the said Thomas de Lyuns lived and died, being between the tenement of the said Walter Nas and the tenement in which Walter called the Yunge lived. Witnesses, Richard le Draper, Mayor of Bristol, Geoffrey Agodeshalf and Simon de Boritone, prepositi of Bristol, Richard de Manegotesfelde, Walter Franceys, Adam Welischote, Ralph Wyneman, Stephen Painter, Matthew le Pakkere, John de Wycumbe, Henry Kam, Giles clerk, and others.

Thomas de Westone grants to his son John, and his heirs and assigns, the house in Wynchestret, Bristol, nearly opposite the pillory. Rent to the grantor a rose, and to Thomas de Lyons a penny of silver, rent of assize, and to the King 4½d. for landgavel, and to Sir Adam

REV. H. T.
ELLACOMBE.

Dr. H. T. de Butler id. of silver. Witnesses the same as to the last but two, omitting Richard le Ropere and John de Wycumbe.

Lucy Gray, relict of Walter de Kerdyf, grants to Thomas de Westone and Roysia, his wife, and their heirs and assigns, all her land and buildings in Bristol, in Wynchestrete, opposite the Jewry, between land late of William de Bruges and land late of John Gileberd. They were to hold of the grantor, but to pay the rents and services due to the chief lord. Witnesses, the Mayor, bailiff, and seneschals, as in the last but two, Ralph Wyneman, John de la Leygrave, Thomas de Lyons, John de Wycumbe, Adam de Wylisole, John le Mareschal, John Barry, John Boydin, clerk, and many others.

Roger le Heyr de Bartone grants to Ralph Leulance and William, his brother, and the heirs of William, three capons of annual rent wont to be received of Walter Hasting, of Wolleward, for four acres of land which he held of him in Farnberuhe. Rent, nominal. Consideration, 5s. of silver. Witnesses, Thomas Lord of Little Wolleward, William le Wayte of Bartone, Robert Oliver, Adam de Wolleward, Peter Oliver, and others.

Temp. Henry III. William the son of Walter of Budestone, grants to Reginald Cook and Edith his wife, and their heirs, all the land which he has or may have in the manor of West Kingeham, of the inheritance of Cecily his wife, middle daughter of Martin le May; with power to devise, sell, and assign, as well in sickness as in health; rent id. If he or they fail in warranty, they (the grantees) shall have exchange out of his best land in Budestone, and to the value of buildings according to the valuation of lawful men of the neighbourhood. Consideration, 10 marks sterling. Witnesses, Sir Richard de Ripariis, Adam Yne, Walter Dru, William Plusbel, William Gernon, Stephen Clerk, Henry Hereberd of Budestone, William de Aswell of Budestone, Herbert, of the church of the said vill, and others.

8 Edw. II., Wednesday before feast of Nativity of St. John the Baptist, Bartone.—Thomas le heyr. of Bartone Hentmersh, grants to John son of Walter le Kynth, of Tatlesthrope, and his heirs and assigns, all his piece of arable land, over against and next Blakethurne. Witnesses, Robert le Mareschal, Simon le Wayte, John le Wayte, Robert at Garden, Walter at Barre, Robert son of Ivo, Roger le Eyr, and many others.

12 Edw. II., Sunday in the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, Bristol.—John de Westone, son and heir of Thomas de Westone, formerly burgess of Bristol, demises to Richard de Bourtone, and Agnes his wife, their heirs and assigns, his cellar, with the appurtenances at Wynchestrete, in Bristol, lying in breadth behind the tenement formerly of Thomas de Lyons, and the curtilage, late of Agnes Dale; and extending in length from the tenement nowheld by John le Leche to the land which was of the said Thomas de Lyons, for the term of six years from the date; rent, 2s. of silver. Consideration in hand, a sum of money not specified. Witnesses, Richard Tylloy, Mayor of Bristol, Ralph le Wyte Irmanegere, Richard de Paynes, bailiff of Bristol, Symon Forstal, Thomas le Fourbour, John le Leche, Richard le Mareschal, Richard le Cartere, and many others. Sealed by lessor and lessee; but the seals are gone.

18 Edw. II., Feast of St. Leonard the abbat, Bristol.—John de Westone, son and heir of Thomas de Westone, late burgess of Bristol, demises to Richard de Bourtone, burgess of Bristol, and Agnes his wife, for their lives and the life of the survivor, the cellar above described: rent, and other consideration as in the last charter. Witnesses, Rog. [or Reg.] Tortle, Mayor of Bristol, John de Romeneye and Walter de Prentiz, bailiffs of Bristol, Simon Forstal, Thomas le Forbor, John le Leche, Richard le Mareschal, Richard le Cartere, William Gylomyn, clerk.

28 Edw. III., Tuesday, in the feast of the Annunciation of the B.V. M., Portesheved.—Richard le Carpenter, burgess of Bristol, and Elena his wife, grant to John Mareys the elder, co-burgess of the said town, and son of the late Thomas Mareys, of Salt Marsh, and his heirs and assigns, all the lands which they then had in the manor of Portesheved, and which Ralph de Webbe of Bristol, late husband of the said Elena, acquired from John son of John Richard of Portesheved, to them the said Ralph and Elena, and the heirs and assigns of the said Elena by charter. Witnesses, William Capel, William Kempe, John Specy, Richard le Rene, Richard Peche, and others.

12 Hen. VII., Sept. 12. Exemplification under the seal of the town of Bristol, of seven documents exhibited by John Bagot, late merchant of Bristol. The first is the will of Walter Stodeley, merchant of Bristol, dated in 1380, opened in 1390. The documents are fully set out. The seal is nearly perfect, 4 inches in diameter, and well engraved on both sides.

7 Hen. VIII. Feb. 11, Lacok Chapter House. Johanna, abbess of Lacok, and the convent of the same place, demise to John Tayloure, and Julia his wife, and William their son, a tenement and curtilage, &c., in the parish of Button, for the lives and life of the lessees and the longest liver, at rent of 13s. Oval seal, red wax, not quite perfect, nearly 3 inches by 2 inches. Virgin and child seated under a canopy, and underneath a single figure standing under a canopy.

1533, July 17. Prerogative probate of this date of the will, undated, and codicil 3rd of April 1533, of Thomas Yonge, of Bristowe, grocer. Red wax seal, not quite perfect, representing the murder of Becket.

2 Hen. V. Christine Frome, late wife of Thomas Frome, and Thomas Frome, her son and heir, convey to John Cokkes, son of James Cokkes, a tenement in Wynchestreet; and because their seals are unknown to many they get the mayor (John Droys) to append his seal of office. All the seals remain.

22 Hen. VI., April 3. A deed by David Brenan, rector of the church of St. Maria de Foro, is authenticated in the same way; and a conveyance to him also.

In the reign of Henry VIII. . . . Weston of Oldland seals with the arms of three fleurs-de-lis, and a mullet for difference.

1660, Jan. 8. Copy of council letter signed by Edward Hyde, C., Albemarle, and 10 others, addressed to the Marquis of Ormonde, Lord Lieut. of the co. of Somerset—authorizing him and his deputies to disarm persons of all principles or who have since the Act of Indemnity shown disaffection to the King or Government, and to administer to them the oaths of supremacy and allegiance and take security for their good behaviour and proceed against recusants.

PAPERS CONNECTED WITH MONMOUTH'S REBELLION.

(Notes.) Francis Creswicke stands indicted for talking with the rebels at Kynesham.—At the two following assizes he petitioned to be tried, but his prosecutors, Sir John Newton, &c., pretended not ready. The 3rd assizes Mr. Attorney-General gave him a certiorari and at the same assizes it was allowed and he then indicted a tenant of Sir John Newton for suborning 2 witnesses against him, which bill the grand jury then found. At the hearing before the King and Council the Duke of Beaufort declared to his Majesty that he did believe that Creswicke did not talk with the rebels with any ill intent, for that he gave his grace the best intelligence that he had in the west of England. To pray a Noli prosequi to free him from the malice of his prosecutors.

Petition to the King, of Francis Creswicke of Hannams Court in the co. of Gloucester now a prisoner in the castle of Gloucester.—In this he charges Sir John Newton with malice on account of a suit at law about Kingswood Chase, and prays that he may be heard before the King and Council, and that Sir John Newton may be ordered to attend.

Petition by Francis Creswicke to Sir William Gregory, one of the barons of the exchequer and judge of the assize for the county of Worcester.—After mentioning the device by which his trial had been delayed and noticing the malice of Sir John Newton and Mr. Player, two of the most violent opposers of his Majesty's right of chase in Kingswood,—he asks that the Judge will take bail for his appearance at the next assizes held for the county.

Another petition (at the back of the last) asks the Judge to allow him to remain in Gloucester jail till he can have his habeas corpus to appear at the King's Bench.

Petition to the King by Dame Elizabeth Davies, relict of Sir Thomas Davies, deceased, Lord Mayor of London in 1676 and 1677—asking that her brother-in-law Francis Creswicke may be bailed, and that his wife and relations may have access to him.—And another by her asking that Creswicke may be heard before the King and Council, and that Sir John Newton might be ordered to attend; or that he might be discharged or bailed.

Another petition by Creswicke to the King. Creswicke being then removed by habeas corpus to the King's Bench Bar.—Alludes to the malice of his neighbours by reason of his having got a decree in the matter of Kingswood Chase: and that they charged him with having had discourse with the rebels at Keynsham. Says that his house being half a mile from Keynsham, he went there to get intelligence for the Duke of Beaufort, but did not go near Lord Grey.—Asks that the attorney may be allowed to consent to his (Creswicke) being bailed, and that he and Lord Grey may be confronted.

1 James II., Aug. 31. Original deposition by James Phipps of Bitton, cole-miner, sworn before J. Lowforde.—Says that on Thursday 25 June last about 2 p.m. he was at a mead called Sydenham in the parish of Bitton near Keynsham, looking on the rebels there, viz., the late Duke of Monmouth and his army: he saw a trooper ride out of the said army towards Francis Creswicke, who was then walking in the path in the said mead, and alight, go up to Creswicke, and soon afterwards return. He saw William Hawkins, of Bitton, and the said Creswicke immediately come and stand by the wall there for the space of one hour about 60 yards from the place where the Duke of Monmouth was. When the rebels cried Horse and away, Creswicke and Hawkins were standing with the deponent. Says that Creswicke did not deliver any papers or speak to the Duke of Monmouth or Lord Grey. Says that there were near a hundred people looking at the rebels, and that Hawkins is a person of ill fame.

Draft affidavit by F. Cr. (Creswicke) that Sir Ric. Hart, of Hannam, is the son of a decimator, who decimated the deponent's father in the late usurper's times, and lately married a sister of Sir Wm. Jones, formerly Attorney-General to his late Majesty, and that Lady Hart declared, as the deponent is credibly informed, when the Duke of Monmouth and rebels were at Keynsham, that if the Duke had come a little further into Gloucester she would have given him some hundreds of cheeses, she keeping then a dairy on a farm called Filgrove, near that place. That soon after the last sessions of Parliament held at Oxford, Sir Richard Hart, a member thereof, declared that he was for the Bill of Exclusion, and after that made his brags ('tis reported) that he had opposed the delivering in the charter of Bristol to his late Majesty.

Copy of Sir T. Bridges's affidavit.—That on the 25th of June last when the rebels were at Keynsham, Creswicke came and (deponent's house being taken up for Monmouth's quarters) asked him to go and stay at Hannam. As they were going they met an old man whom the deponent sent to a place called Sydenham mead, to get intelligence that the deponent might send to the Duke of Beaufort. Creswicke thought the old man not capable, and offered to go himself, if deponent would go to Hannam alone. In about two hours Creswicke returned and gave deponent some account of what he had seen and learned there in the camp as he pretended. They both then went on to Hannam and lodged there that night. Next morning Creswicke came early to deponent and asked him to write to the Duke of Beaufort that the rebels were gone from Keynsham towards Bath or Warminster, as he, Creswicke, was informed, and the deponent did so, and sent the letter the same morning by his own servant from Creswicke's house.

A few short memoranda of what Thomas Harrison, Thomas Rose, and Anne Siswek had deposed (or could depose) about Sir R. Hart's sayings.

(Indorsed.) William Hawkins and John Isles, their testimony as T. Rosse gave me.—28 June 1685. "William Hakens made othe be fore the gostes apase (Justice of Peace).—He says that he saw the squire (Creswicke) in Sydenham give 2 papers to Lord Grey, one about a foot long, and the other about a foot and a half long, and that Lord Grey gave them to a man that was by him with a star on the left breast," &c.

1685, July 8. Thornbury. Copy (by Creswicke) of letter to the Duke of Beaufort.—He says what Bridges says in the deposition above:—"The contents of Sir Thomas's advice I know not: what I observed was that Monmouth's army consisted of above 1,000 horse and about 8,000 foot, 8 field pieces with some Drakes, and 30 ploughs, whereof 4 was teemes of good horses and the rest oxen: his men some well armed, others indifferent, and some not at all, only having an old sword or a stick in their hand; however, I observed many muskets and other ammunition in their carriages. Gray, Ferguson, Wade, Tyler, and Specke were there at Keynsham."—Defends himself against Sir John Newton's accusations.

(Indorsed.) Copy of the Kalendar, my affidavit, D. of Beaufort's Mitimus, and Sir W. Atkyns Mitimus.

John Stone to be hang'd, drawn, and quartered.
Elizabeth Lumbart to be hang'd, but after reprieved.

John Asplin to be transported.
Christopher Tilly remain as before.
George Martin, burnt in the hand and acquitted.
William Randle, the like.

Robert Peere, } To find bail for appearance
Thomas Stephens, } the next, and acquitted.
Hanna Gale, }

Peter Rivers to find bail for his appearance the next sessions of the peace for the county, and acquitted.

Philip Cambridge, to be sent into Somersetshire to be tried for high treason.

Francis Creswicke, } Accused for high treason,
Geo. Saunders, } to remain in Goale.

Tho. Skyn, to find bail before one of the justices of this county, to appear the next.

Copy of an affidavit by Creswick, regarding Sir Jas. Newton purposely keeping away a witness so as to delay Creswick's trial.

1685, July 1. Duke of Beaufort to Col. John Jefferyes.—Order to send two troopers to assist the constable in taking Francis Creswicke and Geo. Saunders to Gloucester Gaol. (Copy.)

1685, July 1. Rob. Atkyns to the keeper of ye castle of Gloucester.—Order to receive the bodies of Creswicke and Saunders. (Copy.)

1685, Nov. 30. Affidavit by Thomas Attwood of the Inner Temple, Gent., sworn before F. Wythens, that on 28th instant Creswicke attended on Lord Grey and asked him whether he had any conference with, or received any paper from Creswicke on the 25th of June, at or near Keynsham, and the Lord Grey declared the negative, nor did he ever see Creswicke before to his knowledge.

1686, Jan. 13. Whitehall. Sunderland to the Attorney-General.—Directs him to enter a Noli Prosequi on the record of the indictment against Creswicke. (Copy.)

1686, Jan. 17. R. Sawyer to Sir Samuel Astey, Kt., His Majesty's coroner and attorney in the court of K. B.—Says that an indictment was preferred at the assizes at Gloucester on March 3, 2 James II., against Creswicke for holding correspondence with the late rebels in the west; and that by virtue of the King's sign manual, dated 13 January 1685, he authorises Astey to enter a Noli Prosequi. (Copy.)

1686, Feb. 23. Stapleton. Tho. Stubbs to Capt. Seamer (Seymour?).—A challenge to fight. Seymour was to meet Stubbs at the sign of the White Hart at Hungerford, between Marlborough and Newbury.

With the papers relating to Creswicke is a copy (31 close folio pp.) of a paper indorsed Creswicke's Case, made by Mr. Ellacombe in 1823 from the original then in possession of a Creswicke. It gives a full account of the going to, and return from, Sydenham mead, above mentioned, and of what took place between him and Sir Thomas Bridges.

1664, March 8. Whitehall.—"Charles R." to the mayor of the city of Bristol. After stating that George Bishop then inhabiting within the city of Bristol, had therefore had the custody of the papers and writings of John Bradshaw, who (the better to carry on his execrable designs) took divers papers and writings out of the office of the King's Library at Whitehall, which could not yet be recovered.—The King directs him to call up and examine Bishop, and take measures for the recovery of the papers and writings, and to make a catalogue of any such found, and with a copy thereof together with the proceedings, to give a full account to Thomas Raymond, clerk and keeper of the papers and records of State.—Countersigned by Edward Nicholas. Wafer seal at the top.

1730, Aug. Bitton.—Berkeley Seymour to . . . In default of a satisfactory answer by the bearer about repayment of money, which he alleges that the addressee and Mr. Creswicke and the other scrub managers of Hannam took from his tenants,—"I will demand justice of you this afternoon at your door with my sword. If your neighbour, Mr. Justice Creswicke, has a mind to divert himself that way, my cousin Bowles, who is come from Bristol on purpose, has a sword at his service; and if the tall learned divine, Dr. Creswicke, the present worthy dean of Bristol, has any inclination to be of the party, the habit of a

(A note by Mr. Ellacombe says that the Bitton Seymours originated from a bastard brother of Lady Jane, and that the last of these Seymours was hanged at Gloucester for murdering his brother Berkeley, in Jan. 1742, and was brought home and buried under the communion table, Seymour at that time being the lay impropriator of the great tithes.)

Folio, 17 century, 25 pp.—Copy of the allotments on the partition (27 Jan. 21 Eliz.) of the estates of Robert Braine, Esq., deceased, between Dame Eme the wife of Sir Charles Somersett, Kt., and Anne the wife of George Winter, Esq., sisters and co-heirs of the said Robert Braine.

The manor place or mansion house of St. James in the city of Bristol was actually divided into eastern and western portions between the ladies. The property was nearly all in Gloucestershire; a little was in the co. of Monmouth. The items are very many. The manor of Staunton in Gloucestershire was divided. Of the manor house there, it is said that nothing but some broken old walls remained.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF WALTER CHARLES STRICKLAND, ESQ., OF SIZERGH CASTLE, WESTMORELAND.

For more than 600 years, by evidences in the Castle, and from remoter times, the Stricklands have been seated at Sizergh, and Mr. Strickland has, preserved in three large volumes, a very curious and perhaps complete series of the deeds relating to the property, commencing in the 12th century. Nearly 100 years ago Mr. Thomas West (the author of The Antiquities of Furness) made accurate abstracts of them, and these are in a single volume.

Among the early deeds are two relating to the Priory of Watter, and a grant to the Abbat and Convent of Bruer; and portion of a roll cartulary of the Abbey of Cokersand, and a grant to the Priory and Convent of Kertmell.

A deed of 8 Richard II. by John de Wyndesore has a note by Mr. West that one Wyndesore was engaged with Alice Perrers, and was privately married to her before the King's death. (But it was William de Wyndesore who married her, and Lowth, in his Life of Wykeham has shown that he did not marry her until after Edward III. was dead.)

In the 27 Hen. VI. are seen the terms in which Walter Strickland served as a military retainer to the Earl of Salisbury.

In the 15th century are two papal dispensations for marriage.

In the 39th Elizabeth is a list of the tenants on the Strickland estate, with the rents, fines, services, &c. And a list (temp. Hen. VIII.) of the servants and tenants able to bear arms, bowmen and billmen, horsed and unhorsed, and all harnessed: 280 in all.

There are a few civil war documents, and among them a letter asking Colonel Strickland to furnish fowl for King Charles's table at York.

There are large bailiff's accounts of the manors of Margaret Countess of Richmond (mother of King Henry VII.).

A folio volume. Abstract of the ancient writings belonging to Thomas Strickland, of Sizergh, Esq., made by Thomas West (author of The Antiquities of Furness), 1778. This volume consists of 188 pp. and an index.

No. 1, temp. Richard I. In this deed Sizergh is spelt Sigaritherge. W. de Lancaster grants lands to Gervaise de Ainecuria (Deincourt). One of the witnesses is Roger Dapifer.

No. 2. Gilbert son of Roger Fitzrenfrid, Baron of Kendal, grants to Gervaise de Ainecuria and his heirs that they shall be free of Noutgeld for all lands in Westmoreland and Kendal, which Noutgeld Gervaise paid for lands held by military service.

No. 6. A witness to this is John de Bellocampo, sheriff of Appleby (temp. John).

By another deed Sir Walter de Stirkeland grants to the church of St. Mary of York, and the Prior and monks of Wederhill, four acres of land in Great Stirkeland. Among the witnesses are Walter, Dean of Westmoreland, and Michael, Vicar of Moreland.

A witness to another is Thomas son of John, Sheriff of Westmeringland (Westmoreland) and Cumberland.

No. 9. Peter de Brus to William de Strickland and Elizabeth his wife. Release and exemption from service at the Baron's Court;—from the pultura of the land-serjeant, both in man and horse; and from the witnesma: in respect of all their lands in Hakethorp and Sizergh.

LAND, ESQ.

W. C.
STRICK-
LAND, ESQ.

No. 14. In this is named William de Daker, Sheriff of Westmoreland.

No. 15. Ralph de Ayncourt to John Gernet. Ralph obliges himself to find a mill and miller in Hencaster to grind John's corn culture-free when the bopper is empty, unless the corn of Adam Gernet or his heirs be in the mill. John Gernet and his heirs are to furnish the miller with reasonable entertainment while the corn is grinding.

No. 21, temp. Ed. I. W. de Stirkeland grants Cross-crake Chapel to the Priory and Convent of Kertmell. They were empowered to choose a chaplain and provide for him out of the revenues of the chapel, to celebrate divine service and pray for the souls of the founder and his successors, and to be exempted from receiving lepers and other infirm persons.

No. 23 (temp. Ed. I.). Lease from Sir W. de Sterkeland to Sir Richard de Preston and Anabel his wife, of land in Great Sterkeland for 12 years; rent 54s., and they were to grind the corn growing upon the said land at his mill, at the rate of the 13th dish. (Sir William held the land of Margaret de Ros.)

1642, Oct. 20th. H. (Earl of) Cumberland to Sir Robert Strickland, Kt. and Col.—Order to raise the regiment of which he, Strickland, is colonel, and lead it to York, where he is to receive further orders, to defend the country against marauders on horse and foot, who are neither authorised by His Majesty nor by the Earl.

16—, March 17th. Robert Strickland to his son Sir Robert Strickland, M.P. 'Tis sad news to hear the Lords and you should go contrary. God grant good; I fear it. 'Tis reported the King's a wise young man. In the name of God let him play Rex to God's glory, his own preservation, and the kingdom's good. (Sir R. Strickland was M.P. 1661.)

1666, Oct. 28, Ripon. Robert Strickland to Lady Curwen at Wakinton.—On business.

There are a few family letters on business.

16—. List of Her Majesty's [Catherine of Braganza?] servants and their wages. (Sir Thomas Orby and Sir Rd. Minshull are mentioned.)

1663, April 8th. Francis Neville to Sir Thomas Strickland, M.P. He hears that they are about to banish all Jesuits and priests; that may, probably, hinder the growth of popery. But surely if you could so educate priests that they would by their sound doctrine, good lives, and conversation become good examples to the people, that would [work] such a cure as would prevent all fears of relapse. But this will hardly be done so long as you suffer pluralities, by which it appears that some of our priests abound, others as good as those wholly want, which is as ill as banishment. For the excuse, if you could prevent the extortions and oppressions of the collectors, that revenue would never be lessened, altho' out of the matter a larger, surer, and more certain revenue may be raised to the Crown with far less chance and much less charge.—If you would take care to purge all electors of . . . governors or trustees for charitable uses, governors of money in lands or stocks, &c., all or most of them being now [such] as neither affected our last government (?) either of Church or State, nor this, it would much redound to the peace of this kingdom. I commend these things to your consideration.

1671; Nov. 16th. Jo. Kaye to his uncle.

1673, Dec. 1st. Jo. Hudleston to Madame Harper.

16—. Draft of a letter by Thomas Strickland to Lord Ar(lington P).—I cannot but acquaint your Lordship how the alterations made and making at Court are resented here by all those whom I ever esteemed the most passionate lovers of His Majesty's person, and the most faithful subjects to the Crown, every man being full of threats and the like discourses. Anglesey outed, Littleton and Osborne in his place, the Duke of Ormond out, Lord Orrery and Sir Robert Howard in his place, the standing forces to be disbanded, Henry Nevill and St. John daily expected. Whether all this be true or not I know not, but it fills many men with fear and wonder, and at least this conclusion is made by all that it will teach others to complain, and the complaining part will easily make an orator, if that be the way to gain favor and preferment. And if I mistake not in my measures, these alterations will not agree with the sense of the kingdom, if the people's sense be represented in their epitome, the House of Commons, but it's said the Parliament shall never meet. Yet if that were, I fear the King's occasions would occasion the calling of another, and I am confident many of the same would appear again, and I hope the same temper, I pray God not a worse.—He does not think these alterations have his (Lordship's) concurrence.

1748, April 16th, Whitehall. A pass for Thomas Strickland, Mary and Henrietta Strickland, and James and Thomas Brown, and two servants, to pass from Dover to Calais on board the James sloop; and to return. Signed by the Duke of Bedford.

The following deeds amongst others are in a small black box.

(n. d. Hen. III.) John de Fischer gave to God and St. Mary and the convent of the House of Watter, in free alms, a bovate of land which he had of the gift of John, son of Ankelin of Lokintun, for the souls of his father, mother, and self. Witnesses: Richard, chaplain of Watter, Reginald and Terri, chaplains of Killingwic, Stephen the deacon, Walter the deacon, Alan the clerk, Oyartin, clerk of Killingwic, &c.

15 Edw. I., Hockday. Emma, widow of Roger le Deveney of Myddelton lease to the abbat and convent of Bruer, one acre of meadow with the appurtenances in the Emede of Middleton, for five years.

15 Ed. I. Richard son and heir of Roger de Deveney of Myddelton grants a similar lease. Dated at Bruer.

A deed poll. Robert Talun, son of Robert Talin, with the assent of his heirs makes the cellarer of the House of Watter his steward to do foreign service to the superior lord of the barony, which was of W. Fossard, de feudo dimidii militis, videlicet de quinque carucatis terræ cum pertinentiis in territorio de Killingwic, whereof the canons and brethren of the House of Watre had his gift. (Therefore here 10 ploughlands made a knight's fee.)

1460. Brother Robert, prior of the order of Mary the Mother of God of Mount Carmel, to [blank]. Gives participation in the benefit of all masses, prayers, fastings, vigils, &c. as well in life as in death.

1291, Frid. Id. Aprilis 19, Ed. I. W. Michel gives to God and St. Mary, and the abbat and convent of Bruer, all that he had from Westharpetre, by way of exchange for his land in Westsipton. Witnesses, Sir Roger de Nodras and Sir John Galafre.

1333, St. Peter ad Vincula. Warton-in-Kendal. A deed by Robertus filius Roberti filii Radulphi de Pontefracto de Warton in Kendal.

1334, June 29th, York. Richard — to John the chaplain of —. Gives the sum of six marks to say divers services in the church of — for the souls of his three wives, Beatrice, Agnes, and Dionisia. Witnesses: Henry de Belton, mayor of York, Richard de Laycestre, W. de Grafton, W. le Sporer, bailiffs of the city (and others named). Seal of the grantors and the large seal of York. The secretum of Henry de Belton is a shield charged with a hand between two stars. The crest looks like a cross.

8 Ric. II., Dec. 20th, London. Letter of Attorney from John de Wyndesore to Sir Walter Strickland.—Appoints him guardian of his estates in Westmoreland and Lancashire. (About this time one Wyndesore was engaged with Alice Perrers, and was privately married to her before the King's death. See Aylliffe's Calendar under the article Irish Records.)

27 Hen. VI., Sept. 1st. Indenture of release from the Earl of Salisbury (Richard Nevill, 8th Earl), to Walter, son and heir of Sir Thomas Strickland.—Walter engages to serve the Earl against all men except the King.—The Earl is to give Walter yearly 10 marks in time of peace, and in war the same wages as men of his rank are accustomed to have; Walter to be well horsed and armed and arrayed;—he is always to be ready to wait on the Earl at home and abroad, and to be accountable to the Earl for one third of the profits made in war.—When any captain or man of rank is taken, the Earl is to have him, paying a reasonable reward for him.

(Walter Strickland slew the traitor Henry Talbot, and thereby gained the reward of 1,000 marks, which he released to the King, 18 Hen. VI., for which the King made him Master of his harriers and Keeper of Calgarth Park.)

1458, July 22nd. A dispensation from Vincent Clement, the Pope's Nuncio, for W. Redman to marry Margaret Strickland, being within the fourth degree.

16 Ed. IV. A dispensation for Thomas Middleton to marry Johanna Strickland, widow. It is directed to the Archbishop of York or his Vicar-General, and is dated from Rome, Nov. 9th, by Pope Sixtus IV.

5 Hen. VII. 6 kal. April (27th March). Dispensation from the Roman Penitentiary for Walter Strickland to marry Elizabeth Salkeld, being within the fourth degree of consanguinity, under seal of office, 7th of Pope Innocent VIII.

(About 38 Hen. VIII.) A book of Walter Strickland, Esq., containing the names of all domestic servants and tenants able to bear arms, with their habiliments of war,—

Bowmen, horsed and harnessed -	59
Bilmen, horsed and harnessed -	74
Bowmen, without horse, harnessed -	71
Bilmen, without horse, harnessed -	76

At this period Walter Strickland was Deputy Steward of Kendal.

39 Eliz. A book containing the names of all the tenants of Thomas Strickland, Esq., in the manors, &c., of Sizergh, &c., with their rents and services, reliefs and heriots. The fines were arbitrary; in the same hamlet some tenants pay nine or ten years' rent at the charge of the tenant. The gersuma sums were oppressive.

14 Car. 1, 1638, Sept. 18th. Commission from "Wentworth," Lord President of the Council in the North, to Robert Strickland, Esq., to command a regiment of 900 trained band soldiers in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

1640, April 6th. "Northumberland" to Col. Robert Strickland. Orders to march his regiment at Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

1640, April 4th. Copy order by the King to the Vice-President of the North to call together all the colonels of the county of York, or lieutenant-colonels or mayors, to give orders for marching six regiments of train bands to Newcastle; to have two weeks' pay in advance. The colonels are to be excused attendance in Parliament, and the Vice-President is not to move out of his presidency, though chosen a member. The regiment is to be relieved when the King's troops come up.

1640, July 17th. Copy of the King's commission to the Earl of Strafford to raise and array all men capable of bearing arms and of serving in the war. He is to appoint a deputy and put martial war in force. (This copy is signed by Strafford.)

n. d. A letter from Sir Edward Osborne to Colonel Strickland, acquainting him with the King's arrival at York, and requesting him to favour him with some fowl for the King's table. Desires him to wait on the King, who intended to speak with all the commanding officers of the North. (Sir Edward Osborne was Vice-President of the King's Council for the North, and Lieutenant-General of the forces raised in that part of the country. —He was father to Sir Thomas Osborne, the first Duke of Leeds.)

1640. Copy petition to the King from the Lords and gentlemen of the county of York, to be excused from raising two months' pay in the county for the support of the train bands, and offering one months' pay. It seems that the King promised, as an encouragement to the expedition against the Scots, that the heirs of all who died in it should be free from wardship. The petition is signed by the leading men of the republican party; amongst them are Philip Wharton, Fairfax, Bellasis, Falconbridge, and John Hotham.

Copy of the King's answer.—Council letter of the 17th August 1640.—Reproaches for passing by the Lord Lieutenant, whom they are desired to consider as their sovereign, and to apply to him before troubling the King.—The King charges them with a false return of the charge of last year's service, which they stated at 100,000*l*.—Says that the billeting of soldiers is the ancient right of the Crown, and that he cannot divest himself of it; and that he cannot march armies without it, provided that provisions be paid for according to Petition of Right. He promises that the army shall be duly paid, and shall require no more than free lodging and the debt contracted to be paid by the captain of the company, provided it did not exceed 6*d*. per day.

Copy of the petition of the Scotch army after the affair of Newborne-upon-Tyne, desiring leave to approach the King's person. They call themselves Commissioners of the late Parliament.

Copy petition for the redress of grievances, signed by eleven lords. On the resolve of the King to meet the nobles at York on the 24th of the month.

1640, last of Aug. Warrant from the Lord President at York for raising a supply of 2*s*. 8*d*. for each soldier. Signed by Edward Osborne.

W. C.
STRICK-
LAND, Esq.

1640, Aug. 25th, York. "Charles R." (and seal) to Col. Robert Strickland, to draw together the train bands under his command, and such others as he can, and to be at the rendezvous at North Allerton on the 29th.

1640, Aug. 25th. Order signed by Holland, Goring, and another, to all mayors, &c., &c., to furnish Col. Robert Strickland with ten carts for the use of his regiment marching to the Border.

1640, Sept. 3. Warrant under the hand of (the Lord President) Edward Osborne, to the King's messenger, to apprehend all to be named by Col. Strickland, who refused to join the regiment commanded by Col. Robert Strickland, to oppose the Scots who had got to Newcastle.

1640, Sept. 7th. Copy of Strafford's orders to the chief constable to tell the deputy lieutenants, justices of the peace, and other gentlemen, to attend the deputy lieutenant at York on the 11th of September, the day appointed by the King to be there.

1641, July 3. A sheet of vellum, signed by "Essex." The Earl of Essex and Ewe, Viscount Hereford and Bouchier, Lord Ferrars of Chartley, Lord Bouchier and Lovayne, Lord Lieutenant of the county of York, appoints Robert Strickland, Esq., to be a deputy lieutenant. Attached is a copy (signed by Essex) of the King's letters patent appointing the Earl to be lieutenant of the county.

1641, July 3rd. Commission from the Earl of Essex to Robert Strickland to command 800 train bands in the North Riding of York.

1642, May 14. York. "Charles R." and seal.—Commission to Thomas Strickland, Esq., to command a company of 114 train-band soldiers.

1643, March 25th. W. (Earl of) Newcastle appoints Walter Strickland to command a company in a regiment of foot under the command of Col. Robert Strickland, to be raised by beat of drum in the north of England.

1643, June 2nd. A captain's commission from the Earl of Newcastle to Sir Robert Strickland to command a troop of horse called the North Riding troop, to be raised by sound of trumpet.

1644, July 15, York. A safe conduct for Sir Robert Strickland, of Thornton bridge, and his family, to return from York, with a protection for his house and estate. Signed by the three generals for the Scotch and English army at York, viz., Leven, Fairfax, and Manchester. (The battle of Marston Moor was fought on the 3rd of July. Prince Rupert was beaten.)

1646, April 9th. "Leven" with his seal.—To the Lords and Commons for sequestrations.—Having taken into consideration the articles made upon the surrender of the city of York, and particularly the 11th article, namely, that all citizens, gentlemen, &c., should when they pleased remove with their families and goods, &c. yet, understanding that Sir R. Strickland, notwithstanding that he is within the benefit of the articles, has his estate sequestered. Tells them that if Sir R. Strickland hath acted nothing against the Parliament since the rendering of York, he might in justice possess his estate free from sequestration.

166-. A certificate signed by Castleton, Fra. Wortley, T. Fane, Henry Cholmeley, and about 20 others, including William Fairfax, that Sir Thomas Strickland would be a proper person to have the farm of the Excise of beer and ale.

1672, May 25th. The King grants to Sir Thomas Strickland a lease for 21 years of duties on foreign salt, imported into England from beyond seas.—The rent was 1,000*l*.

(1673.) A draft letter by Sir Thomas Strickland to a fellow M.P., thanking him for excusing his absence in Parliament. He says he would not "swear negatives" to speculative matters of divinity." He protests his loyalty.

1682, July 18th. A regrant of the lease of duties on foreign salt, &c., to Sir Roger Strickland, on his succeeding Sir Thomas Strickland. Rent 2*l*.

1685, Oct. 31st. Renewal of the lease by James II.

1745, Nov. 10th. Copy of Prince Charles' (Regent) letter to the Mayor of Carlisle. Seeing that the Mayor intends to resist the Prince, puts before him (the Mayor) the dreadful consequences of a town being taken by assault.

7 to 8 Hen. VII., Michaelmas to Michaelmas.—A roll of 12 skins written on the dorse also.—Accounts of all the Ministers of manors of Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of the present King. (This roll relates to Kendal.)

The moneys were paid to Sir Reginald Bray the receiver. On the 10th skin the total owed was

R. CHOL-MONTELEY,
Esq.

A roll of vellum 15 feet 3 inches long by 4 inches in breadth (14th century). It contains the English poem called the Stations of the Cross, in writing of about the end of the 14th century. The first 7½ inches of the roll are occupied with two paintings in colours; the lower one represents Christ crucified (between the two thieves) and V. Mary and St. John standing in either side of his cross. In different parts are seen the lance, reed and sponge, and ladder. Two embattled niches supported by three columns make a framework to the figures, the figure of Christ obscures the centre column. The picture above represents four persons, apparently two male and two female, with a diapered wall for background and arches over head; both paintings are much rubbed. Preceding the poem are the following sentences in Latin.* Quicumque intuebitur hec arma domini nostri Jhesu Christi de peccatis suis confessus et contritus habet tres annos indulgentie ex concessione sancti Petri primi. Item triginta fices dederunt quilibet dit centum dies indulgentie. Item centum viginti pontifices quilibet illorum de ginta dies indulgentie.

The poem begins—

He yat wil his soule leche list to, me i wil him-teche.

This edition of the poem is somewhat like that printed in 1866 at p. 113 of vol. 15 of the publications of the Early English Text Society; but there are many variations.

Quarto, vellum, 14th century, Latin. A Homily.—Augustinus de Spiritu et anima.—Liber Pastoralis Curæ. (St. Gregory to John Bishop of Ravenna).—Isidorus de summo bono.—Augustinus ad Comitem. (There is a note by an early hand saying, that the writer does not think that this work is by the Great Augustine). It begins, O mi frater, si cupias scire.—Liber Magistri Hugonis de instructione Noviciorum. Begins, Non preter solitum facere quosdam judicabo.—St. Augustine de similitudinibus.—The following note of ownership occurs, "Rowland Oseley owith this book."

Quarto, vellum, 14th century, Latin, 278 leaves. This is a collection of numerous alchymical, astrological, and medical treatises. The first begins, Magnifico principi et illustrissimo domino A. primogenito Regis Jerusalem et Sicilie Dei Gracia, Duci Calabrie ac in regno Sicilie vicario generali, A frater de ordine p'cl' capellanus ejus, &c. Cum prima causa est summa hic autem liber de Essenciis intitular. It contains two principal books; 1st, of real essences; 2nd, de intentionalibus. The first contains nine treatises (1. of the essence of the Creator, 9. of the being and essence of Accidentals).

Compositiones divinarum ignium. Suus suo Amiens amico Anselmus Ferario pro amore, &c.

A treatise compiled from a Latin translation of an Arabic work by Albubery Acazy, son of Sacharia, a philosopher of Damascus.

From a number of deeds three have been selected on account of their age, and a fourth because its contents are interesting.

Henry, son of Herbert, to all his friends and men. He gives to William de Aubenes, for his service, in fee (feodotale) and hereditarily, and to his heirs, the land of Rochude, free from all service, and the land of la blaques welle, and at Caen, denri quandam, near the mill of Gaimar. The witnesses are Henry, the lord's son, and Richard and John, clerks, Thomas de franco vallo, and Alexander, his brother. This charter was made at Caen in the house of Henry, the son of Herbert, on the last of the kalends of July, witness Duranne, the clerk who made it, and witness also, William de Terra Wasta, and John, son of Roger, and many others. (12th century. The seal is gone.)

Maurice, Lord of Berkeleye, gives to John Taber, in fee, for his homage and service, all that land which Eaditha, relict of Roger Roke, sometime held of him, with a messuage in the vill of Newport, viz., &c., &c.; and land in Reham between a meadow of the Abbat of St. Augustine of Bristol, and a meadow of Ralph Dole. Rent 30d. quarterly. Gersuma 20s. Witnesses, Sir (dominus) Maurice de Salso Marisco, Sir Roger de Lokintun, Robert de Hales, then seneschal, Andrew de Brokeslane, John de Egintun, Nicholas de Cranleye, Thomas Mathias, Adam Flambard, Robert Herde, Hugo, son of Juel, and many others. (13th century. Seal gone.)

Isabel de Longchamp, daughter of Henry de Mineris, grants to the church of St. Oswald and the canons there all her land in Culkerton, which came to her hereditarily; for the souls of her and her ancestors, to be holden in frankalmoin. She also grants other lands specified. Witnesses, Ralph Musard, John (P) de Eyton, Peter de Eggeswere, and others named.

1528, Aug. 18. Thomas [Wolsey] Cardinal, Priest of the title of St. Cecily, Archbishop of York, Primate of England, and Chancellor, and Legate de latere of the Apostolic See, to Richard Bromeley, monk of the monastery of Vale Crucis of the [Cistercian] Order, in the diocese of St. Asaph, a priest having professed a regular life.—Absolves him from the guilt, if any, of apostacy incurred by him by the not wearing his habit, and from all ecclesiastical penalties hitherto incurred, and from all excesses (except those reserved to the Holy See) hitherto by him committed, and gives him permission (because of his weakness of body) to use linen next his skin, and long leggings (caligis) of a decent colour, also under his hood during divine service as well in the choir as in the cloister, and to talk in a low voice in the dormitory and elsewhere, and in his chamber, after to eat and drink moderately, and on a journey to choose a fit confessor secular or regular, and to hear confessions from those who should come to confess to him, and to absolve them from all excesses not reserved to the Holy See, and to be elected abbat of any monastery of the said order, or take any other claustral dignity which he can conscientiously assume . . . Dated from his house near Westminster. Oval seal of red wax (about 5 inches by 3 inches) in case. Figures of Sts. Peter and Paul in niches under a Roman pediment. Underneath is the coat of arms of Wolsey surmounted by a Cardinal's hat. The legend is "Sigillum Thome Archiep. Ebor. Legati de latere, ad dispensationes;" portions of the inscription and coat of arms are lost. At the foot (left corner) is the name of John Hughes and (right corner) the name of Claibun the Datary. The document states Bromeley to be the son of a monk by an unmarried woman. (Latin.)

THE ABBEY OF KINGSWOOD, CO. WILTS [GLOUCESTER].

A.D. 1240. A skin of vellum, 2 feet 1 inch long, by 5½ inches in breadth. Reragia W. Cellerarii de Kingeswode ad festum S. Petri ad vincula, anno gracie m.cc.xl. xii. ixsol. 1d.—Recepta a suprascripto termino et deinceps usque ad festum Sancti Andree, viiik.—Summa totalis xixl. ixsol. 1d.—The accounts on the front of the skin are in 2 columns, under the heading, "Expense de "suprascriptis reragiis et receptis." Numerous items of payments occupy nearly the whole of the column, but a surplus of 3*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* was in hand. Then, from the feast of St. Andrew to the feast of the Purification, the cellarer received 7*l.*, and thence to the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula 1241, he received 17*l.*: total, with the arrears, 27*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* The second column of the front, and the single column of the back of the skin, contain other expenses; and the sum total of expenses on both sides of the skin amount to 24*l.* 1*s.* 5½*d.*, up to the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, 1241, and the Reragia were 3*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* (together 27*l.* 10*s.* 10½*d.*), against 27*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*, for which the cellarer was accountable.

A.D. 1242. A skin of vellum 14 inches long, by 5 inches in breadth.—Reragia Bursariorum Domus de Kingeswode, anno gracie m.cc.xli. ad festum S. Petri ad Vincula de omnibus receptis domus. vi xx. li. et xvli. vs. ob. tota lana et lok simul computatis et xx. libr de arreragiis lane anni xlii. The receipts to the feast of St. Andrew (for flock, rents, sale of sheep, &c., &c.) were 166*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, including the arrears. The expenses from the feast of St. Peter, 1241, to the same feast day of St. Andrew, were 153*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* The receipts from the feast of St. Andrew to that of St. Peter, A.D. 1242, were 290*l.* 7*s.* 3½*d.* with the arrears, and the expenses for the same term were 115*l.* 10*s.* 2½*d.*—The arrears (or surplus) were 174*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.* In the latter expenses are payments to the cellarer, the sub-cellarer, the shepherd, 10 marks to the use of the church, 18*l.* 0*s.* 0½*d.* for building a new inn (hospitium).

A.D. 1255. A skin of vellum 18 inches long, by about 7 inches in breadth. Stipendia domus de Kingeswode, anno gracie m.cc.lv. (Two columns in front, and one on the back.) The payments are to ploughmen, drivers, and others at various estates of the Abbey: the sum total of all the payments "tam in stipendiis quam "in messonibus" for the whole year was 77*l.* 9*s.* 11½*d.* The left hand column contains the Stipendia de Hoke-days.

The back of the skin contains payments for the same estates for the year 1256. The sum total is not given.

A piece of vellum 9½ inches by 7½ inches, being the lower portion of an account (for about this time) of the expenditure of the Abbey. One item is 8*d.* for the expenses of the Abbat going to Tintern. The vellum is of the same width as that next described, and the accounts are written by the same hand, and although it is clean and in good preservation, it may be assumed to be part of the second membrane of the account next described.

A.D. 1262-3. A piece of vellum 20 inches long by 7½ inches in breadth. An old English capital E. is at the head. It has lost, from damp, much of the left and some of the right column. It is written on both sides, and contains receipts for the year 1262-3.

A.D. 1288. A piece of vellum 10 inches long by 5 inches in breadth. Computus of brother William de Cumb. for the granges of Cherthull, Baggestone, Hull, Aldrinton, A.D. 1288. (Written on both sides.)

A.D. 1311. A piece of parchment 14 inches long by 5 inches in breadth. Account of the cellarer of Baggeston (sale of stock: the murrain is mentioned. It seems to be only the 1st membrane of the account.)

A.D. 1316. A piece of parchment 8½ inches long by (on an average) 4½ broad. Computus of the Cellarer from the feast of St. Lawrence, 1316, to the feast of St. Michael in the same year. Sum of receipts 28*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*, and of expenses 31*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* Below are other expenses amounting to 33*s.* 2*d.*

14th century. A piece of parchment 10 inches long by 3½ inches in breadth. The computus of brother Walter for the grange of Egge.

14th century. A slip of parchment, 10 inches long by 3½ inches in breadth, containing a series (in Latin) of questions to an inquest, and answers by them regarding the tenure of certain lands by and under the Abbey.

15th century. Two membranes sewn together, each about 9 inches long by 5 broad. The first entry is "Johannes Scoche dedit 1. vaccam operi ecclesie pressii "viii. s." Then come (on both sides of the first skin) names with sums of money opposite. It may be inferred that this is a list of donors to the church.

24 Hen. VI. A piece of vellum 13 inches long by 4½ inches in breadth. Rental of the Abbey of Kingeswood. (Torn at the bottom; it is evidently only the beginning.)

Robert de Berkelai, for the souls of his father and mother, and for the health of his own soul, confirms to God and the church of St. Mary, of Kingeswode, and the monks there serving God, the gift to them by Gilbert de Tudenham of seven acres of land in the fields of Niwentone, of his fee, to be holden in frankalmoinage. Witnesses, Roger de Berkelai, his uncle, Juliana, his wife, Oliver de Berkelai, Eustache de Camme, Thomas, his seneschal, William de Hesele, Thomas, parson of Niwintune, Thomas de Loventi, William de Seai, and many others. Circular seal nearly 3 inches in diameter. Man on horseback, sword in hand, on left arm a shield charged with a bend sinister; legend broken. Secretum 1½ inches broad; man on horseback; legend, Sigillum Roberti de Berkelai.

Robert de Berkelai, for the health of his soul and the souls of his two wives, Juliana and Lucy, and of his father and mother, and of all his ancestors and successors, gives to God and the church of St. Mary of Kingeswode, and the monks, &c. in frankalmoinage, one virgate of land in his manor of Wottune, at Sumheie, with the messuage and all appurtenances, viz., that virgate which Lulph Durant held, and all the land which Richard de Bisseford held with a messuage and mill, and all issues (sequelis), which the said mill used to have. Witnesses, Roger de Berkelai, Henry, his son, Philip and Oliver, brothers of the said Roger, Jordan le Ware, John de Craulega, Simon de Olapenne, William de laheseler, Alexander the chaplain, Hugh de Bradelega, William his brother, Maurice, son of Nigel, John de Eginton, Adam de Grava, William de Hagelega, Robert Disse, Richard lesbut, Robert, son of Master Alured, Hugh Pistor, Henry the clerk of Bradelega, Nicholas de King: and many others. (Seal gone.)

1230. 14 kal. Aprilis. William, by the grace of God, Prior of St. Oswald of Gloucester, and the Convent, with the assent of Walter, Archbishop of York, primate of England, in consideration of 100*l.* sterling, sell and quit claim to the monks of St. Mary, of Kingeswode, all lands and possessions which the vendors had in Cul-kertone. Sealed by the archbishop and the vendors. Witnesses, William de Putot, sheriff of Gloucester, Peter de Eggesworth, and five others named.

1243. Feast of St. Martin. John del Egge grants to K. all land which Gilbert, his father, held, and which descended to him (John), at le Egge, in the manor of Sunundeshale, in exchange for the land which the monks had at Rocwde, in the parish of Bisleye. Witnesses, Peter de Eggewoth, Oliver de Berkelai, William de Troham, Richard de Abbenessi, Robert de Mulecot, Henry de Strode, Roger Petipas, and others.

Nones of July (), year of Pope Gregory IX.
(1227-1241), Otto Cardinal, deacon of St. Nicolas in prison, legate of the Apostolic See, to all, &c. He has seen letters of Pope Honorius in this form, Honorius to the Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York, and the suffragans, &c. of the provinces of Canterbury and York: Whereas the abbats of the Cistercian Order, in the time of the General Council under Pope J., decreed that thenceforth the brethren of the Order, lest by occasion of their privileges, churches should be oppressed and pay tithes of property which they should cultivate by themselves or at their expense to the churches to which they were formerly paid, and that Pope J. wished to extend the rule to other Orders; and that disputes had arisen. Honorius says that abbats and brethren of that Order should be free from tithes as well of possessions, had before the General Council, as of newly tilled land (novalibus), whether acquired before or after the General Council, which with their own hands or at their own expense they cultivate; also of gardens, &c., &c. Dated at the Lateran, 7 kal. July, the 6th of his Pontificate.—The transcript was made at the prayer of the abbat, &c., of Kingeswode.

1280. Feast of St. Mark the Evangelist. Agreement between the abbat &c. of K. and brother Adam, prior of the Hospital of St. Bartholomew of Gloucester. The former give to the latter five acres of land in Acche-cumbe over against Olepenne (the parcels are minutely described.)

William Bretun gives to God and the Abbey of K.
one rotella of land in Osleworth, with the appurtenances which Alice Roke sold to him for five marks. Rent to Alice and her heirs of one white glove at Easter or one penny, and to the chief lord 1 lb. of cummin. Witnesses, Geoffrey de Chauai, Oliver de Berkeley, Bartholomew labanc, Nicholas Ruffus, John le New, Nigel de Osleworth, Henry de linez, Walter clerk of Hilleslege, William de Bradelege, and others.

Roger de Niwentune gives to the Abbey of K. land of Bollacok, between Ywolege and Egge, near le Ros, in the manor of Niwentune. Witnesses, Sir (Dominus)
Geoffrey de Chauai, Henry de Linez, Peter de Ywelge, Walter de Neylesworth, Hugh de Ryllecote, Robert de Uptune, and others.

Roger de Niwentun, son of Philip de Berkele, gives to K. an acre of land in Niwentun (the boundaries are stated).

Agreement between the Abbat of K. and Luke de Chirintune. The abbat, &c. gives to Luke land and a messuage in Chirintune, formerly of Walter de Brac-kele, which he gave to the monks of Bethlesdene, and which the monks of Bethlesdene sold to the monks of K. Rent 6s. sterling. The abbat asks Luke not to sell or pledge it without the consent of the monks of K.
Witnesses, Bartholomew labanc, Roger de Duchtune,
Thomas de Rodeburwe, William de Rodmertune, Henry Hardewine, Nicholas de Leppesete, Geoffrey Custance, and others.

Adam de Cherletune gives to K. one virgate of land in Cherletune, portions lying in Garstone, Carnetecrundle, Sepestalle, Hareburne, Hadenhulle, Cleihulle, Wensierd, Olledene, Froggaputtesforlong, Westlangforlong, Brodesierd, Buledene, &c.; viz., half which,
&c., and half which, &c.: the two half-virgates of land ita per campos jacent divise. Witnesses, William Came-rarius, Geoffrey de Chauai, Roger de Almundestre, William Scai, Adam his son, Robert de Dudim, Henry de Culcretun, John of Tetbiri, William Butevilain, Adam Barete, Alured Barete, Nicholas de Kingeswode.

(In this charter the acreage of the numerous portions is given, and all together amount to 32 acres.)

Alured Barete gives to K. two acres in Culcretune.
Witnesses, Henry de Culcretune, William Scai of Tresham, Adam his son, Henry son of Bernard, Nicholas de Kingeswode, Geoffrey son of Custance, Adam de Culcretun, William Butevilain.

R. CHOL-MORDELEY,
Esq.

Roger Barete gives to K. a messuage super fontem, with a curtilage and the appurtenances in Culcretune.
Witnesses, Bartholomew labanc, William de Rodmerton, Nicholas de Culcretun, . . . William de la Planke, Roger de Calfhage.

Agreement between Roger Barete and K. It states that in 1243 Roger Barete, on Michaelmas day, gave to K. one acre in the fields in Culcretun, viz., &c., for 10 years, until they should have received 5 croppos from one acre and 5 from the other, "exceptis inhokis si forte contigerint fieri in eadem villa:" that the prior took the first crop from the two acres in the autumn of 1244, and would take the last crop in the autumn of 1253, besides crops de inhokis quotiens contigerint. For this they gave Roger 6s. After the term the lands are to revert to Roger. Witnesses, Walter de Rodmerton, Lawrence de Lasceles, Robert Passelewe, G. Custance, Nicholas de Culcretune, Walter, Henry Bernard.

Agreement between Thomas the Abbat and the Convent of K. and Adam son of Henry of Chirintun. They grant to Adam the land which the said Henry held of K. in Chirintun, and an additional croft which they had of Walter de Burton and land in Smalecumbe.
Rent 8s. Witnesses, William de Rodmertune, Robert Passelewe, Ralph Hereward, Lawrence de Laceles, William de Westrop, Hugh son of Nigel, Henry, parson of Rodmerton, Henry de Culcretun, Roger Barete, Geoffrey son of Constance, and others.

The following five deeds are tied together:—

Henry Bernard, of Culcretun, releases to K. (his lords) all his right in certain land upon Littledune, near the way leading to Rodmerton, at the north part of Culcretun, so that the monks for ever may cultivate, plough, and reap; together with the field of Littledun, in which the aforesaid land lies; notwithstanding any common right of him and his heirs; saving, however, to them common pasture of the said land after harvest (messem), with the beasts of the monks. Witnesses, Roger de Duchtune, Walter de Uptune, Henry the servingant (serviente), Com. Ric. de Tetebur: Master Robert de Segrei, . . . Robert de Passelewe, Lawrence de Lasceles, and others.

Walter son of Henry Bernard releases to K. the same lands as last above, in the same woods. Same witnesses.

Geoffrey Custance, of Culcretune, releases to K. the same land in the same woods. Same witnesses.

William Mansel releases to K. the same lands.
Among the witnesses, Henrico serviente Comit. Ric.
de Teteburi.

Elizabeth, who was the wife of William de Gammages, releases to K. the same lands.

The following nine deeds are tied together:—

Alice Toky, in her widowhood, releases to William Bretton in fee, for a gersuma of 5 marks of silver, a she gave to K. one cotella of land in Oslewrthe, paying to the chief lord of Oslewrthe what she did, viz., one pound cimini at Bristol fair, and regal service. Witnesses, Geoffrey de Chauai, Oliver de Berkeley, Richard Burgeis, Walter le escriven, Walter Tisun, and other witnesses, as in the preceding.

Henry de Belesby grants to K. a tenement in Oslewrthe, and all right in the vill which he has or may have from William de Rocheford, brother of Thomas de Rocheford. Rent, a pair of gloves, price 1d., or a silver halfpenny. Witnesses, Lords John le Brun, Richard de Cromhale, William le Maunsel, and John de Wanton,

Maurice de Berkeley, son and heir of Sir (domini) Thomas de Berkeley, releases to K. a rent of 10d. out of lands at La Egge, in his manor of Symundeshale, which they had by gift from Thomas de Berkeley, uncle of the said Sir Thomas his father; and a rent of 3 capons out of land in Pokhampton in the manor Hynetun, given by Sir (dominus) Robert de Berkeley, brother of Sir Thomas, grandfather of Thomas, his father. And he grants that if they move their water conduit from his park of Hairemare, he will do certain works. Witnesses, . . . Thomas de Berkeley, son of Sir Thomas de Berkeley, and others.

John del Egge grants to K. the land which Gilbert his father held and came to him hereditarily, situate at le Egge in the manor of Symundshale (see ante, 1243).

Nigil de Kyngescote grants to K. (for the souls of himself and Petronilla, his wife, and Walter de Wotone), one acre* in the field of Newentone, abutting on the road from Cullicote to Kingeswode.

Ralph Mercator, of Sowire, grants to K. the burgage, with the appurtenances in the burg of Sowire, near the bridge, against the house late of Ralph de Rupe. Witnesses, John de Actune, W. de Fromptone, Adam Pistor, and others (named).

Jordan de Budeford confirms to K. the gift of his father, Geoffrey de Budeford, which was in hæc verba, viz.: Geoffrey grants to K. one load (unam carratam) of hay from his meadow of Avekesbury; so that when Geoffrey or his heirs cut hay, the monks may come to fill one wagon with the best, and carry it off. Witnesses, Sir (dominus) de Maunsel, Sir John de Wantone, Sir Robert de Veel, knights; Elias de Cumbe, Yvo de Cumbe, Thomas le Archer, Richard de Colewiche, and others.

Henry Passelewe, of Rodmerton, gives to K. 3½ acres of arable land in the field of Culcretun (described in pieces). Witnesses, John de Hanekyntone, Elias Bokerel, Roger de Blez, James Folioth, John Neel, Roger de Couwesmere, and others.

William le Engleys, of Chiggelewe, son and heir of Simon le Engleis, gives to K. four acres of land in Culkerton, which W. Butevilain the elder gave to the said Simon, with Alice William's mother. (13th century, much damaged).

Brother W., called Abbat of Kingeswode, and the convent, make known to all that they have granted to the Lady Warebrugge, of Bristol, their friend and intimate, that they will every day celebrate one mass for her soul specially, and the souls of Vitalis her husband and Elias her son, and the souls of her other children and of all the faithful dead, at their old abbey, in the chapel of St. John the Baptist, by their secular chaplain, to whom they will supply all necessary food and raiment, or by one of their monks, if they have not a secular chaplain; and if not, then by the said chaplain, or a monk, in their abbey.

5 Edw., Oct. 11, London. Edward, King of England, Lord of Ireland, and Duke of Aquitaine, to all, &c. License to Adam de Smetheleye to grant a messuage and virgate of land in Culkerton to the abbat and convent of Kingeswode and that they may take it to them and there successors for ever, notwithstanding the Statute; saving to the chief lords, &c.

In this volume are the following letter and papers; the first being probably the cause of Mr. Smyth obtaining the volume.

1661, March 14. Ludlow Castle.

"Carbery" (Lord President of the Marches) to the High Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of the county of Gloucester.—He notices the bad state of the roads in that county, and calls upon them to put in force the statutes relating thereto.

1662, March 25. Draft of a declaration by the Justices of the peace, alluding to Lord Carbery's letter, and denying that the co. of Gloucester was within the Marches of Wales or within the power or jurisdiction of his Lordship's Commission. It has the autograph signatures of 21 Justices of the Peace.

Copy of a presentment by the Grand Jury to Lord . . . that processes were issued out of the Court of Marches of Wales against some inhabitants of the county of Gloucester, for matters arising within that county; and that the Lord President had sent the letter noticed above and praying him to present the matter to the King, that redress might be had.

Form of a Bill in the Court of Marches.

Small 4to, paper, 206 pp., end of 17th century.—Fair copies of letters between Ant. Pagi and Wm. Lloyd, Bishop of St. Asaph, on Roman Consular Chronology. These end on p. 123. The remainder of the volume contains copies of letters on the same subject between Father Noris and the Bishop, with the interpolation at pp. 145–156 of a letter by Henry Dodwell (at Cookham) to the Bishop. All the letters except Dodwell's are in Latin, and are dated in the years 1686 and 1687.

Small 4to., paper, 42 leaves, c. 1600.—Collection of all the offices of England, with the fees and allowances belonging unto them in the King's gift. (This is similar to that described at p. 404 of the Appendix to the Fourth Report.) At fo. 36. The valuation of the several livings of all the Bishopricks of England, with the tenths that every of them payeth to his Majesty yearly. At 37b. The valuation of the several livings of the Deaneries with their tenths ut ante. At 38b. The Nobility of England according to their degrees, with a list of Barons created by King James. At 41b. The descent of Queen Elizabeth. At 42b. The number of parish churches in England (the number in each county).

Small 4to, paper, 72 leaves.—Journal of a tour abroad in the years 1682 and 1683. The first leaf is absent. The journal opens imperfectly with a description of Canterbury Cathedral (April 1682). The writer thence went to Dover and crossed over to Calais, where he "saw Count Coningsmark, talked of much in England "for being an accessory in the murder of Mr. Thin." He travelled through France and went into Switzerland; the last place mentioned is Fribourg. On a leaf at the end of the volume is the name of George Smith (the writer of the journal), and there are bills of exchange drawn by him on his uncle, James Smith, of the Red Lion, in Fenchurch Street. Probably there was a second volume of the journal, as one of the bills of exchange shows him to have been at Rome in Feb. 1684. In 1683 and 1684 are several bills of exchange drawn by Richard Blackmore on James Smith, dated respectively from Nismes, Montpellier, Geneva, Venice, Strasbourg, Rotterdam, and Rome.

Small 4to, paper, 17th century, 123 leaves.—A Breviary or Collections of the most anchant Cittie of Chester, reduced into these chapters following, by the Reverend Mr. Ro. Rogers, Bachelor in Divinity, Archdeacon of Chester, and one of the prebends (sic) of the Cathedral Church in Chester; written anew by his sonne, D. R., a well wisher to that anchant Cittie. (See p. 416 of Appendix to the Fourth Report.) The 10th (and last) chapter is headed "Certain commendable deeds done for "the wealth and estimation of the Citti of Chester by "certain that have bene maiores of Chester, by some "others that have bene borne there, and other good men "dwellinge there." The 2nd page of this ends, "is not "so trulye employed as it ought; thus farr Da-Rogers, " &c." Then follow statements of various gifts by mayors and inhabitants of plate and money. The volume ends imperfectly in the statement of the 15th, viz., Mr. Hugh Oflay's gifts.

Quarto, paper.—A summary of the Life of St. Werburgh (by Wm. Cowper).

Summary of the Life of St. Werburgh, &c., &c., by a citizen of Chester [William Cowper, Esq.]. 4to. Chester, 1749. pp. 31. This copy is interleaved and has large additions by Mr. Cowper.

A new paging (1 to 41) contains A collection of certain passages and occurrences in the Civil War began A.D. 1642, concerning Chester and other places mostly within the distance of a day's journey from that city. *Begin*s, Several of our English writers. It ends with a letter (6 pp.), dated Pulford, 17 March 1642, signed by Thomas Aston (the contents certified by 10 other signatures) about the conduct of Aston in the affair of Middlewich. It is addressed to Earl Rivers and Viscounts Cholmondeley and Kilmurrey, and others.

Quarto, paper, 18th century. Villare Com. Cestri. 342 pp., besides tables at the end. It is headed, "Dr. William's Collections from Holme's MSS., with 'some additions and annotations.'" The names of places are in alphabetical order, one name to each page. The last date is 1701, when the book was compiled. (It is said to be "out of the library of Dr. William Cowper, of Chester.") Folio, paper, 18th century. Statuta Ecclesie Cathedralis Cestri. 54 pp. and 1 p. of index to the Statutes. The Latin text is on one page, and an English translation on the opposite page. Book-plate of [Dr.] E[dward] Harwood, M.A.

A square folio, written A.D. 1764. 38 pp. An account of the siege of the city of Chester, 1645. *Begin*s, 1642. The war between the King and the Parliament, being now begun, it was thought necessary to fortify Chester. Ends, with an account of the demolitions during the siege, "to the full sum of 200,000l." At the end of the volume (loose) are some letters and papers. Letter from the Rev. Dr. T. Gower at Chelmsford to E. Harwood, and letters from Thomas Falconer, of Chester, and others on Chester matters. This volume also has the book-plate of E. Harwood.

A folio volume, bound, with the arms of Cholmondeley on the sides. It is lettered on the back "Dr. William's Collection of Cheshire Evidences." MSS. by William Cowper, of Clutton, ludimagister. There is a reference from Dr. Gower's Sketch of materials for a new and completed History of Cheshire. 4to., London, 1800. This volume is described at fo. 90; it was lent to Gower by the Rev. William Stones, of Chester, whose father was a historical collector.

A thin folio volume of 54 pp., contains official extracts (signed by J. Cayley, Keeper of Records) from Ministers' accounts, 32 Hen. VIII., for Vale Royal Abbey, preceded by extracts from Tanner's Notitia Monastica. There are a few loose papers in the cover.

Folio, 212 leaves, preceded by a copious Index of names. Extracts from Inquisitiones post mortem, for Cheshire, from 1 Hen. VIII. to 12 James I.

R. CHOL-MONDELEY,
Esq.

And first of the names of the city of Chester 1. Neomagus, (11 names in all). Ends, with a chapter on the Antiquity of the Gabel Rent.

A paper-covered folio, wrongly labelled A Visitation of Cheshire, by Glover (formerly belonging to E. Harwood, of Chester). It contains Notices of the Antiquities of Chester:—Foundation of the Abbey of Vale Royal:—Abstracts of the Chronicles of the Earls of Chester:—Abstracts from Domesday, and the Red Book of the Exchequer:—Account of St. Werburgh. (Down to this point the contents are in Latin.)—Abstracts of charters in Latin and English, with arms neatly tricked in the margins:—Pedigrees from Inquisitions and charters:—Gentlemen of Cheshire knighted by the Earl of Hertford at Leith.—Names of persons disclaimed by Richard St. George, Norroy, 1613. (1½ pp. in 2 columns.)—Index of names.

A quarto volume of about 80 leaves.—History of Chester and lists of the Mayors and Sheriffs. It begins temp. Edward III., A.D. 1335. "King Edward, by the charter before mentioned, dated at Pomfret, granted to his son the Black Prince."

A quarto volume contains Brief Notes of the Antiquity of the famous city of Chester. (31 leaves.) It deals with the Bishops, Earls, Mayors, and Sheriffs.

A quarto volume of 87 leaves contains some Collections relating to the Ecclesiastical Affairs of Chester. Begins, "So many authors." The last date is 1422, at p. 87. It deals with Bishops, Prebendaries, Deans, Archdeacons. (This is numbered 13 of Cowper's Collections.)

A quarto volume of 68 leaves, seems to be a continuation of the last volume. The last 18 leaves contain an Account of the Abbey of St. Werburgh. (This volume is numbered 11 of Cowper's Collections.)

A quarto volume contains Account of the Mayors and Sheriffs of Chester. (This is numbered 7 of Cowper's Collections.)

A quarto volume of 89 pp. contains Collections concerning the City of Chester. Antiquam exquirite matrem. Begins, Chester the Metropolis. It ends with the death of Charles II. (This is No. 12 of Cowper's Collections.)

Folio, unbound. The proper Qualifications of a good Governor in the management and conduct of a young Nobleman or gentleman in his travels through foreign countries.—Vita beata in virtute posita.—Written in the year 1693 by T. M. The Introduction begins, The Almighty Lord of the whole universe.

A quarto volume contains a List of Gentlemen who appeared at Chester in the Grosvenor interest at the election of Geo. Johnson to be Mayor in 1732. And the following, apparently by W. Cowper:—

Poetical translation, Book 1, of Silius Italicus.

Some Memoirs of the first Duke of Ormonde, by the Earl of Longford. (28 pp. of note paper.)

Historical Catalogue of the Bishops of the Isle of Man.

Some Collections from others, and observations of my own, being a small sketch of the Isle of Man, wrote during the few days which I staid in that Island, July 1729. Begins, Dear Sir, when I took leave of you. (81 pp., small quarto.)

An Essay. The Conflagration, partly extracted from Dr. Burnet's Theory of the Earth. (English poetry, 43 pp.) This volume has the book-plate (of arms) of W. Cowper, of Colne, Esq. 1728.

Another quarto with a like book-plate. On the fly leaf is the Note, "Nov. 9, 1701. Dr. Humphreys, Bishop of Bangor, gave me this book. R. D. The former part of Alfred's History was not thought worth copying, because Bishop Lloyd judged it but a transcript of Jeffrey, as appears by his letter annexed."

Copy of part of Alured of Beverley; beginning, Finito regno Britonum, Britanniae regnum ad Anglos est translatum.

Bishop Lloyd's letter to Thomas Price of Llanvyllen, concerning Jeffery of Monmouth's history. (12½ pp. 4to.)

Selden's answer to Sir John Sempill, transcribed out of a MS. in the Ashmolean Library, No. 830. T. 6. (25 pp., 4to. About Tithes.)

A Latin play with the title "Sanctus Tewdricus sive Pastor bonus, Rex et Martyr," in 9 scenes, composed respectively by Richard Simons, William Parry, Richard Smith, Frances Simons, Daniel Gifford, Henry Chamberling, Charles Peeters, Thomas Beveridge, and Nicholas Tempest. The personages are St. Tewdricus, Maurice, King of the Silures, and Arthur his brother, and Malcolm and Ulfadus, Mauricio et Arthuro chari proceres. At the end is a song with music, by Beveridge. The title page was written by Henry Matthew Chamberling.

About 35 leaves of copies of letters, in 1744 and 1745, on naval and military affairs. (Many and perhaps all are from newspapers.)

A tract of 96 pp. (pp. 1 and 2 are absent) by Hend. Toren, giving an account of transactions during his stay in the Island (of Man). It relates to a quarrel between Thomas Wilson, Bishop of Sodor and Man, and Alexander Horne, Governor of the Island. It seems to be about a slander on a Mrs. Hendricks, wife of an inn-keeper of the Island, and other cases which led to quarrels between the Bishop and the Governor.

Folio, paper, 18th century.

Latin poem on the death of Thomas Hesketh, of Rufford, by W. C[owper], with translation into English on the opposite pages (ends pp. 15 and 16).

VIRGINIA AND THE SOMER ISLANDS.

1616, July 14, Somer Islands.—Bryan Cave to Mr. Thorpe, one of the Adventurers for the Sommer Islands. Understanding that Thorpe was discouraged about his share and held back from supplying money until he heard the truth, Cave encourages him, and doubts not that if he supplies plants and other necessities, his commodities shall be greater. Their great enemies are the rats, which threaten the subversion of the plantation. The Governor, whose industry he praises, has given orders that the inhabitants shall work their confusion by poison and traps.

In the margin is a short note by Daniel Tucker to Thorpe, saying that not having leisure, he has got Cave to write; recommends Thorpe to send supplies to his land and provisions for two or three men, and says that to that effect he has written to the Countess of Bedford.

1620, July. Mr. Russell's project touching artificial wyne in Virginia. (1 p.) It was to be made from a vegetable which grew there; it could be made cheaply, easily, would keep well, and would not intoxicate. Russell asked that upon demonstration of it here to the Company he might have 1,000*l.*, besides the benefit in Virginia of serving the colony. At the foot, Smyth has written that it was agreed, with some little variation, with Mr. Russell, the acmunist and chimist; and that Sir John Brooke, 2 April 1621, told him that of his own knowledge the wine was made of sassapras boyled in water; he had of the drink.

1620, Sept. 20. Copy of the Account which Smyth sent Mr. Thorpe into Virginia. (½ p.)

1620, Dec. 19. Southampton Hund. George Thorpe to John Smith, at North Nibley. Is busy examining witnesses concerning Captain Argoll. Will write more by the next [ship], against which time he hopes Captain Woodleeffe's tobacco will be ready. Says that the country is very healthy, and that they have found a way to make a good drink from Indian corn, which he prefers to good English beer. Recommends Smyth to send over his second son.

* With the above noted manuscripts relating to Virginia are some printed books and papers which for their rarity are worth mention.

An engraved map of Virginia, about 18 inches broad and 14 inches deep, said at the foot to be "Discovered and Described by Capt. John Smith, Graven by William Hele." In the left hand top corner is an engraving, below which it is said that "Powhatan held this state and 'fashion when Capt. Smith was delivered to him prisoner.' Powhatan is on a raised seat, with an attendant on each side of him; on the floor is a smoking wood fire between two double rows of seated natives. On the right side of the map is a well engraved figure of a native armed with a bow and a club.

A large broadside, headed "By the Treasurer, Councell and Company 'for Virginia,' addressed to the Governour of Virginia and the Councell of Katato there residing. It is dated the 17th of May 1620, and contains directions and rules for the management of, and works in the colony. At the head are engravings representing both sides of the seal of the Company; one side representing the King in his robes, with crown, sceptre, and ball, and the legend, "Sigillum regis Magnæ Britanniæ," "Franciæ, et Hiberniæ;" and the other side containing the royal arms, with the legend, "Pro consilio suo Virginiam."

A tract in 4to, called "Virginia's God be thanked." The title is wanting. (Lowndes states that it is by Patrick Copland, and was published in 1622.) Sheet 4 is of four leaves (the 4th blank), containing a dedicatory letter to Sir Thomas Smith, Governor of the East India Company, dated 24th April 1620; two letters to Capt. Martin, Pring, Commander of the Sea Navy of the E. I. Company in India, dated respectively the 22nd January 1619 and 20th May 1620 (all dated from the Royal James), and repetitions in Latin of the same letters. The text follows on 38 pages, but pp. 1 and 2 of the text are absent; p. 3 is on the first leaf of signature B. The lower half of the back margins of the tract are destroyed by damp.

Declaration of the State of the Colonie and Affaires in Virginia, with the names of the Adventurers and summes adventured in that Action.—By his Majesties Councell for Virginia, 22 Junii 1620. After noticing a proclamation of the war and license by another proclamation to all their subjects "to go to the seas and take their vantage upon the "enemye," and not doubting that they (the Mayor and Aldermen) have furnished such ships as they were able for keeping the seas quiet and annoying the enemy;—Require them to see Sir H. Sydney and the treasure and munition safely conveyed over the seas.

2 Eliz. Oct. 12, Hampton Court. "Elizabeth B." to the . . . brethren . . .—Since the proclamation for the decay of base testons, inconvenience arose from the inability of some persons to distinguish one from the other, and the marks first added to the basest testons are worn out; she has therefore appointed persons to be at certain places to inform the people and stamp the said testons, and directs to appoint a justice of the peace, and another to use for stamping the testons the two stamping irons and a round plate of steel, which she sends, one of the irons bearing the print of a greyhound and the other a portcullis. She gives particular directions for the use of them. She trusts within a month to send down a quantity of fine money. (2½ pp., torn and damaged).

1590, May 1. Court.—W. (Lord) Burghley to Sir Henry Winston at Standish.—The late Earl of Warwick has left certain lands in Gloucestershire to his widow for payment of his debts. She is anxious to use Winston's friendship in her causes there. Burghley is overseer of the Earl's will, and he asks Winston's lawful assistance to Lady Warwick's tenants and affairs for the redress of any disorder or indirect dealing offered them by any others, so far forth as he being in the commission of the peace may give. The Lady will be willing to requite him with any office there belonging to her or with any other good turn. (Endorsed, "The Lo. Burghley's "letter to Sir Henry Winston about entering into the "Countes of Warr. Business against the Lo. Berkley.")

1593, July 9. Court at Otelandes.—W. (Lord) Burghley to Mr. John Fetter, Mayor of Chester.—Acknowledges the receipt of a letter from the Mayor to the Lords of the Privy Council dated the 1st instant, whereby it appears that according to their direction, this Mayor had, with the help of the Vice-Admiral, made provision for the transport of 600 soldiers to Ireland; prays him to cause the same shipping to be staid until further direction. With the Mayor of Chester's letter, he (Burghley) has received the letter from the Mayor of Liverpool, who has provided shipping for the like number. The present letter is to be sent to him in answer thereof. (An indorsement signed by Burghley, directs that this letter shall be sent over directed to the Lord Deputy by the first passenger.)

9 James I., Jan. 10, Westminster. "James R." to the Emperor of Japan, &c.—Has written several times but has received no reply; this he attributes to the distance; he renews his offers of friendship, as he is confident that his people will behave well, so he doubts not they will be protected by the Emperor. (A short letter beautifully written on vellum, about 18 inches by 15. Three sides have a beautifully ornamented gilt border, and the many capital letters and some words of the letter are gilt. The address on the outside is also ornamented and gilt.)

Copy (5½ foolscap pages) in English of the King of Morocco's letter to the King of England.—He has had success in the Conquest of Sullie, and hopes for the like success in war against Tunis and Algiers; and asks if the King of England will assist him with such forces by sea as shall be answerable to those he provides by land.

James I. M . . . 3, Westminster. "James R." to the Mayor and Justices of the city and county of Chester. (The letter has been torn and the right half is gone. It is indorsed "A letter of King James the 1st "against Alehouses.") n.y. Aug. 7, Chiselhurst. William Camden, Clarendon, to Sir Michael Stanhope, Kt.—Right Worshipfull Sir, I cannott warrant all that is sett down in your note for the Lord Berkley, although for the most part true. It maye be sufficient when you have not particulated all the titles of the Earle of Sussex to add no more than this and Elizabeth married to George L. Berkley, lineally descended from the Mowbraies- Dukes of Norfolk. I know that the Lords Berkley have used the said titles as well as the Howards Dukes of Norfolk, but not without some repining, and in my opinion may be very well spared in this your epitaph.

1636, March 16. Receipt signed by Francis (Earl of) Bedford for 30*l.* paid by Mr. Smith, officer and receiver of Lord Berkeley, for the use of the poor of Chenies, by virtue of a grant made to them by Ann, Countess of Warwick, deceased, at Lady Day, 1637.

1640, March 23. Roger Kirkbie to Sir Gilbert Hoghton, Bart., and the rest of the Commissioners appointed for the assessment of 4 subsidies within the county Palatine of Lancaster.—He says that, that day in the Parliament House, Sir Roberts Pye gave him a certificate directed to him and his fellows, appointed by the House of Commons to be the receivers of the four subsidies granted by the last Act. Sir Gilbert has some doubts by reason of some mistakes in the Bill. Kirkbie says that they have passed a Bill amending the mistakes and it has gone up to the Lords. He thinks Hoghton may go on with the business, although the Act has not yet come to his hands. (Copy.)

1641, Feb. 8. William Brereton to Mr. Cooper, Mayor of Chester.—This day he read to the House Cooper's letter and the warrant enclosed, and moved that if they thought fit to discharge Sir George Hambleton, his warrant might be restored, which was not assented unto, but they determined he should be brought up by Habeas Corpus. It would have been sent by that post, but for the mistake of one who should have delivered it to Brereton.

1642, May 20. William Lenthall, Speaker [of the House of Commons], to Sir George Booth, Sir Richard Wilbraham, Sir Thomas Delves, Sir Richard Grosvenor, Thomas Stanley, Richard Brereton, Harry Bunbury, John Greive, and the rest of the justices of the peace of the County Palatine of Chester, and to the Mayor of Chester, and to Charles Walley and William Edwards, Aldermen of Chester.—Notices complaints received from persons in the county and city of Chester that they have suffered much from soldiers billeted on them without their consents, and who had committed outrages, and had departed without making satisfaction either for themselves or their horses. He then gives the particulars of the orders of the House of Commons on the subject of troops passing through the county on their way to Ireland.

1642, Sept. 18. Court at Stafford.—"Charles R." to the Mayor of Chester.—Announces his visit to Chester on Friday next, and bids him have the Train Band ready, and provision for him and his retinue.

17 Car. I., Jan. 4, Whitehall.—"Charles R." to the Mayor of the town and port of Westchester, the Searchers, Comptrollers of the passage, and all other his officers there whom it may concern.—Whereas Mr. Denzill Holles, Sir Arthur Hazelrigg, Mr. John Pim, Mr. John Hampden, Mr. William Strode, having been by the Attorney-General accused of High Treason and of high misdemeanors, have fled, and they will probably endeavour to escape into foreign parts; he tells the addressees to use diligence to arrest and keep them in custody till (having advertised the Privy Council) further orders.

18 Car. I., Sept. 26, Court at Chester.—"Charles R." to Thomas Couper, Mayor of Chester, James Earl of Derby and John Earl Rivers, Robert Vire Cholmondeley, Robert Brerewood, Recorder, William Gamul, Charles Walley, and Thomas Thropp, Aldermen of Chester.—Tells them, with the assistance of the Sheriffs and others, to search the several houses of Sir William Brereton, Bart., William Edwards, Alderman, and Thomas Aldersey, Alderman, the Red Lyon and the Golden Lyon, situate in the said City, and to seize and take for the use of the King all arms and ammunition found there which they shall suspect to be intended to be used against the King.

1644, June 19. (The Earl of) Derby to all His Majesty's loving subjects whom it may concern.—Protection for William Farrington, of Werden, Esq., and his wife (and his goods, chattel, or cattle), who had been taken prisoners by the enemy, and released by the garrison at Lathom.

1648, Aug. 1, Gray's Inn.—Jo. Bradshawe to Mr. Robert Wright, Mayor of Chester.—Has received a letter from Wright and three other Aldermen. They know why Chester was omitted the last time, and if the like or other sad impediment do not happen, they may be sure he will not alter from the usual place of holding the grand Sessions. He promises attention to the welfare of them and their city conditionally on their constant compliance with the directions of Parliament.

1650, Sept. 19, Council of State at Whitehall. Jo. Bradshawe, President, to the Mayor of Chester.—Sends 10 Acts of Parliament for a Thanksgiving, &c., and tells him to cause them seasonably to be distributed into all the parishes of his jurisdiction, so that none may pretend ignorance thereof, of which a strict account will be required. (Wafer seal of the Council of State.)

1662, May 27, Cockpit.—Albemarle to Thomas Earl of Ossory.—Recommends the bearer, Thomas Monck, for an Ensign's place in one of the Companies in Ireland.

1662, Sept. 30, Whitehall.—(Prince) Rupert to Lord Bradshawe. Recommends a business of the bearer, Sir William Carr (long a servant in the Prince's family).

n. d. (Sir) Matthew Hale to Mr. Smith.—Opinion as to the liabilities of the county at large to the repairs of Ower Bridge, near Gloucester. (2 pp.)

16 Car. II., July 5, Office of Arms in the City of London.—William Dugdale, Norroy King of Arms to the Town Clerk of the City of Chester.—A printed form signed by Dugdale, and having his large wafer seal of office, whereby he denounces certain persons, whose names are annexed, as having usurped Arms, Cognizances and Crests, and the style of Esquire or Gentleman, and directing that they shall not be addressed as esquires or gentlemen until they shall justify the same by the law of Arms. (The names of 30 persons in Chester, and their places of abode, are given.)

15 Car. II., Dec. 10. The King's warrant under the seal of the Council of the Marches of Wales to apprehend James Bridgeman, and attach him as a rebel to answer to such contempt as shall be objected to him by Thomas Dewxell and Margaret his wife.

1681, Nov. 6, Albemarle House.—(The Duke of) Albemarle to (Duke of Ormonde).—Sends a petition, on which the King declares in his favour. Hopes to find favour from him (Ormonde), like as he gratified Albemarle's father on former occasions.

n. d. M. (Duchess of) Ormonde to the Duke of Ormonde.—She expected to have seen him last night, because his coach went to Wicomb the day before, and everybody has been at London; the Duke of Grafton, Lord Clarendon, Lord Churchill, and in short everybody but him. Sir John Mead wrote to him the last post from Ireland, and said there was great need of making a sheriff, for the prison had been broken twice since last Assizes. She says she has made Mr. Gascoine send him a blank Warrant, which he will please to sign and fill up, if there be no hopes of his coming soon, which she hopes he will do.

1684, Nov. 4, Whitehall. "Charles R." to the [Archbishop of Canterbury].—Seeing that many who served his Royal Father and then followed him (Charles II.) abroad are reduced to poverty, and that in his guards and garrisons others may become unfit for service, he has resolved to found and erect at Chelsey a perpetual hospital, in which more than 400 aged or otherwise disabled soldiers might then (and so successively the like number for ever) be lodged and supplied with necessary supports of life. He has already expended great sums of money on the fabrick. But as his particular bounty is not sufficient, he calls on other of estate and quality, particularly the Clergy, and asks [the Archbishop] to send circular letters to all the Bishops of his province, inviting them to get subscriptions from the Clergy.

1684, June 14, Convent of St. Saviour at Jerusalem. Latin Certificate by Brother Petrus Antonius Grassus, &c. &c., and keeper of Mount Sion and the Holy Sepulchre, that John Juatt, an Englishman and a Londoner, had been to Jerusalem and visited a number of Holy Places (specified). Oval wafer seal of the Guardian of the Convent of Mount Sion. On it are represented a large assembly and a man seated having his feet washed by another (probably Christ washing the disciples' feet), and above them a number of beatified saints surmounted by the Holy Ghost.

1685, June 30. Arlington to the Duke of Ormonde, Lord Steward, and to the Treasurer and Controller and rest of the officers of the Board of Greencloth.—His Majesty, having commanded that the ancient service and allowance of All Night,* heretofore served up in the King's Presence Chamber, should now be again revived and served as formerly, he (Arlington) desires the Duke will give order that the same be served up as formerly.

LEY,
Esq.

1686, July 12, Windsor. "James R." to the Duke of Ormonde, Lord Steward of the Household.—Order to admit the bearer, Sir Winston Churchill, into the place of Second Clerk of the Greencloth in Ordinary, vacant by death of Sir William Boreman.

1688, Sept. 24, Dublin.—William (Bishop of) Kildare to the Duke of Ormonde.—Congratulations on the Duke's accession to the honours and patrimony of his great ancestors. Commends the care and industry of Dr. Hinton, the Master of the School at Kilkenny.

1689, April 9, Chester. Charles Thompson to Henry Gascoigne, at his Grace the Duke of Ormonde's, in St. James' Square.—People arrived yesterday who left Dublin on Saturday, and say that King James had set up his Standard on the Castle of Dublin, whose motto is Now or Never. Now and Ever; he was to march on Monday last to Carrickfergus and thence immediately to Scotland, where they say are many thousands to join his force. . . . There were some highland lairds with King James in Dublin to receive his commands whether they should come to Ireland or not; he thanked them and ordered them to stay in Scotland where were many thousands more; they said they had 5,000 men in their neighbourhood ready; King James told them he was going to the North in order to go to Scotland, where he would be in a few days.—Movements of the Duke of Berwick and Lord Tyrconnel.—Poor Londonderry and Coleraine it is feared cannot hold out long, having no relief; the ships and men designed thither were in this port yesterday; there are some frigates that came from France left in Ireland, and, it is said, are to bombard Derry. King James is to be in Captain Hercules Davis's house in Carrickfergus. . . . The Queen is to lye in in Ireland, who they say is big with child. All things in Ireland are governed by the French Ambassador, as if Ireland were the French King's, and King James under him. . . . This morning is discovered that the well in the Castle of Chester is poisoned. . . . Sends a list of those who came with King James into Ireland. (This list is inclosed, giving the names of 45 persons, French, English, and Irish. Among them are Col. Kenan, Simon Luttrell, and Marshal Boufflers with 500 officers, and 1,500 English, Scotch, and Irish, all coming from Brest with all speed.

1689, January 30, Westminster. Peter Mew, Bishop of Winchester, to the Duke of Ormond.—Recommends the bearer, Alexander Denton, as a person fit to continue the employment for which he petitions.—Enclosed is an unsigned letter by the Duke of Ormonde to the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, saying that Alexander Denton, a Cook at Oxford, had brought to him his own petition and the Bishop of Winchester's letter, and recommending him as having (as he is informed) kept a civil orderly House, and requesting that he might have leave to keep up his Billiard Table as long as the V. C. might judge it reasonable, according to his good behaviour in the management of it without prejudice to any of the members of the University.

1609, Feb. 26, Whitehall. Copy of Council letter (to the Sheriff and Justices of the Co. of Gloucester), complaining of the incorrectness of the returns made by the Sheriffs of the counties, of the lists of freeholders, and commanding them to send true and perfect certificates; and also directing the Sheriff every half year to send up a true calendar of all such returns of panels as well concerning trials as inquisitions as he had made of the two terms and assises next precedent; and also requiring him not to omit returning for Jurors such as have procured writs de non ponendis in assisis, except they be manifestly from age or impotency within the meaning thereof.

1613, Aug. 24, Stoke. (Sir) Edw. Coke to Lord Berkeley. Is glad to hear of his Lordship's return to his castle of Berkeley, and that he is so free from harm where there was so eminent danger. "But it hath pleased God to preserve us to see the comfort and fruit of this so much applauded and happily begunne marriage . . . Diverse judges and others are with a large commission to doe justice and punish oppressions, &c. sent over into Ireland; my brother that was joined with me in circuite as one of them

"that is gone; my Lord Russell and Sir Thomas Denny are lately dead. Sir Patrick Murrey has married Sir Francis Vere's widow. The Prince yesterday went from his hunting in and about Windsor to Richmond, blessed be God, in great prosperitie and good health." Thanks him for remembering Sir William Throckmorton's matter, and promises to do his utmost to proceed in it.

1618, Oct. 24, Oldburie. Henry Townshend to John Smith, in London. Says he was commissioned to appear at Wickwar to inquire for concealed lands. The Commissioners were Sir John Poyntz, Sir John Stafford, Sir Richard Hill, and an old gentleman whose name he did not know. How he (Townshend) was left out he does not know; but the Jury found the land for the King. Some friends of his that served in the Jury told him that Smith had made sure word before hand, or else they should have no verdict. Smith's adversary, Clookhay, pleaded very hard to have them found 36 tenements with land for charitable uses, but could not prevail.

1660, Feb. 9, London. Baynham Throckmorton to John Smith, at Nibley.—Understands that Sir Thomas Overbury has lately, at Gloucester, declared that he will not stand to be Knight of the Shire, and that the Ld. Lieutenant will be one, and Mr. John How makes himself sure of the other. The cost deters the writer from standing, but he dislikes the thought of How coming in, because he thinks himself above all men. Asks Smith to use his endeavours with others to have two persons selected without going to the poll. Asks that any reply may be directed to him at the Crown below Charing Cross, over against Stanhop (Stanhope) House.

1625, Oct. 24, Clowerwall. Sir William Throckmorton to John Smith. He is in trouble about his son, Baynham, who has gone off, and he fears that he is with his enemy, Sir Richard Catchmaye, and intends to go abroad. Asks Smith to endeavour to get some deeds (which he sends executed by himself) executed by his Son. (There are several other later letters by Sir W. Throckmorton, and one in 1606 by John Throckmorton, on business matters.)

1633, June 8. Robert Poyntz and two others to John Smith, at North Nibley. By virtue of their Commission under the Great Seal, they ask for a contribution towards re-edifying St. Paul's Church, in London. (An indorsement by Smith says that he sent 20s.)

1630, March 9, Whitehall. (Copy of) Council letter to 19 Gentlemen of the County of Gloucester (John Smith of North Nibley is one), directing them to appear at Whitehall and compound for not attending at the King's Coronation.

1638, Feb. 18. R. Berkeley and Mau. Berkeley (Deputy Lieutenants) to John Smith, directing him to furnish for the trained force of the Co. of Gloucester a man, horse, arms, and furniture, as understated; they charging him with a Cuirassier instead of a Light Horse as formerly.

1639, Feb. 18. Barbican. G. Berkeley to John Smith, Steward of his lands in Gloucester. At the instance of the Lord Chamberlain, he asks Smith to vote for and get support for Sir Ralph Dutton, to be one of the Knights of the Parliament for Gloucester.

1641. Copy of form of a warrant, dated at Chorley, to the high Constable of . . . Co. Lancaster, to collect a Benevolence for the relief of the distressed subjects of Ireland.

1641, Feb. 7. Francis Creswicke (Sheriff of the County of Gloucester) to John Smith, of North Nibley. In obedience to a letter from the Speaker and a letter from the Knights of the County he appoints a public meeting at Cirencester, at Mr. Portlock's, to take and publish the protestation and petition therewith sent.

Petition and remonstrance of the knights, gentry, freeholders, and inhabitants of the county of Gloucester whose names are subscribed, with several Schedules thereunto annexed (the schedules are not there).

It is a petition in favour of Episcopacy.

(1642). Petition to the King by divers of the true Protestant religion in the County Palatine of Lancaster.

1642. Saturday, Alveston. Tho. Veel to (John Smith). Incloses a letter, which he says he received that morning; the gentleman that brought it told him that Lord . . . received letters on Thursday last that the King would be as that or the last night at Warwick with considerable power, and he conceived he would come amongst them.

1642, June 8, Euxton. Hugh Anderton to William Farrington, Esq., at Werden.—Has received by the bearer a letter from Captain Somner for money behind to him and his company for pay. Complaints of this kind are common; but he has no money in his hands, as appears by his account delivered yesterday evening to Sir William Gerrard and the General Major. . . . Is surprised that in their hundred, out of so much money taxed, there should not be sufficient to maintain 30 men at half pay. Begs Farrington, if he have any of the money, to let Capt. Somner have 20*l*. or 30*l*. upon account, that he may keep his men together.

1642, Aug. 11, Sudeley. Chandos to Captain Veale. Notifies a public meeting at the Ram at Cirencester on Monday next, to consider the course to be taken in the distracted state of the kingdom.

1642, Aug. 29. John Thomas (High Constable) to the Petty Court or Tithingmen of North Nibley. The Parliament has appointed Visct. Say and Sele to be Lord Lieutenant of the County of Gloucester, and he has appointed Sir Robert Cooke, John Fettiplace, Edward Stephens, Nathan Stephens, Thomas Morgan, and others, to be Deputy Lieutenants. He directs them (by virtue of a warrant to him) to summon all captains, &c. of trained bands in the tithing, &c.; and also 6, 8, or 10 to supply defects in the train bands to appear at the Riding, near Sudbury, on the 1st of Sept. next; and the captains are to bring in their muster rolls.

1642, Sept. 26. Na. Stephens and Tho. Hodges to John Smyth.—They met on Thursday last at Gloster (being the day appointed at the 1st meeting of the gentlemen, it being agreed they should meet once a fortnight). Very few were there: hopes that Smyth and others will come on Thursday next, to advise what is best for the good of the country in these times of extremity and danger.

1642, Oct. 3. Jo. Seymour, John Codrington, and Edw. Stephens, to John Smith.—The gentlemen in other parts have subscribed according to the propositions set forth by the Parliament, and have taken the subscriptions of others, what money, plate, horse, and arms they will lend or furnish to the Parliament. In pursuance of a warrant 300 are summoned to meet on Saturday, and other 400 on Monday. Smith is on Friday to send in to the Ridings at Chipping Sudbury such horse of service as he is taxed at, there to be trained and exercised.

1642, Oct. 19. Ro. Cooke, Na. Stephens, and Edw. Stephens, to John Smith.—Intreating him to meet them and the rest of the gentlemen at Gloucester at the Boothall on Monday the 14th (sic.) of the present month to consider what is best to be done for the common safety of themselves and the County.

1642, Nov. 25, Chipping Sudbury. Jo. Seymour and Edw. Stephens to John Smith and Anthony Kingscote, or either of them. Dangers are near approaching; therefore they think good to call in the Dragoons that they subscribed that they may have them in readiness for the safety of the county. They ask Smith and Kingscote to cause the Dragoons subscribed before them in the hundred of Berkeley to appear on Saturday at Chipping Sudbury with horses, armour, and a month's pay.

1643, Aug. 15, Barkley. (The King's Commissioners), to the high Constables of the hundred of Berkeley. (Copy.) The King's army under the command of Prince Rupert has entered the County of Gloucester and subdued Bristol and other places, and the King intends to settle garrisons in the said City and other places. He has fixed 6,000*l*. per month as the proportion of the County of Gloucester for maintenance of the garrisons, on payment of which the county shall rest secure from prejudice; the payments are to begin on 8th of August 1643. The High Constables are to assemble the inhabitants of the hundred and exhort them to pay the sums underwritten, which sums when collected are to be paid to Thomas Walter of St. Nicholas parish in Bristol, merchant, within 10 days after the date of the letter.—Annexed is a list of 22 villis in Berkeley Hundred, with sums of money opposite each, amounting in all to 497*l*. 5*s*.

1642, Aug. 10, Youghal . . . Henry Rugge to John Smith . . . Will give, though briefly, yet true intelligence of those occurrences which have happened in these parts since the beginning of the late universal insurrection of the Irish Papists in this kingdom. The province of Munster is the most southerly quarter in Ireland, lying opposite to Devonshire and Cornwall, under the government of a President with the Council of the Province.

This part remained 2 months quiet after all the rest had revolted, and we conceived good hopes of its continuance till about 12 days before Christmas, when certain rebels out of Leinster came in and disturbed our hoped security. The Lord President was not idle all this while, but having secured Cork (the most remarkable place of his Province) the best he could, in the extreme want of men, money, [and] ammunition, with 3 troops of horse and 50 musketeers (a bold attempt) he fell upon that enemy which has foraged in the counties of Waterford and Tipperary, and within a few days destroyed about 600 of the rebels without the loss of one man; and having visited the cities of Waterford and Casshel, with the townes of Clonemell and Carrig, &c., he returned to his house at Donneraile, Dec. 23. But ere the holidays were half spent, Richard Butler, brother to the Earl of Ormond, Purcell Baron Loughmah, Philip O'Dwyer, great men in Tipperary, revolted; the city of Casshel, townes of Clonmell, Fodder, Carrig &c. did the like; and suddenly the Lords of Dumboine and Cahir, with that whole county, turned rebels; the Lords of Brettus and of Castleconell did the like in the county of Limerick. In Kerry McFinan, with the rest of the Irishry there rebelled; so did O'Sydnam in the west of the county of Cork; Waterford revolted, city and whole county, save a few places which lie on the river of Youghal. Thus, on a sudden, all things were become desperate; robbing, stripping, murthering of the English Protestants in every quarter; we who by God's great mercy escaped with our lives, fly some to Cork, some to Youghal, some to Bandon; others betake them to castles in the country. The Lord President draws all the force he could make into the field in January; expecting the approaching of the enemy, he encamped near Kildarerrey, in the County of Corke; the rebels approach, but are affraid to come down into the plains, fearing our horse; the rebels were 14,000, we about 700 foot and 300 horse. The enemy dares not fight; ours much desire it, being weary of their bad winter quarter in the open fields. About the second week in February the Lord President made an honourable retreat to Cork from the great army of the rebels, not having lost a man, and then not being able to doe any more provideth only for defence. The Erle of Corke is at Youghal to guard it with the Viscount of Dungarvan, the Erle of Barrimore at Castle Leghan, the Lord Braughull, at Lismore, the Lord Kinallmely at Bandon, the president with the Lord Inchiquin at Corke; the Lord of Rery is sent into England; and so stood the present condition of the English in Munster untill Shrovetide; the Irish revolting in every quarter. Shrovetunday, Sir Charles Valvasor, with 1,000 foote landeth at Youghal; on the next weeke the Lord President brings such forces as he could spare out of Corke, and they both march to Dungarvan; they take the towne and receive the castle on composition; while they ly at the seige of Dungarvan, the Lord of Muskry revolteth, drawes 4,000 men within 3 miles of Corke, the president by hard marches getts to Corke in 2 dayes; about the 23rd of Aprill the Lord of Inchiquin and Sir Charles issue out of Corke with two troopes of horse and 300 muskettiers; they assault Muskry, rout his army, take . . . tent and wagon, kill Captain McFinan, the stoutest of all those rebells, with 400 others, the rest fly; Muskry himselfe goeth to Limerike, wher the others of his faction meet him. The President groweth weake of body; and yet on the coming over of the two last regiments he removes into the field; they take many castles from the enemies; the enemy about June draws towards our forces, on St. Peter's days they fight, God gives us the victory, a handfull of our men routs the rebels' army; we there tooke from them five ensigns; the same weeke the president dieth. The next weeke the Lord Braughall went to releive Sir Richard Osborné nere Dungarvan, and in his returne, having with him a troope of horse and 300 foot, was encountered by 800 rebels neere Cappoquin, but by God's blessing he slew almost 300 of them with the losse of one man onely. Verely God hath done great things for us, but we are defective to ourselves, our new soldiours are half dead, and yet ther hath not bene 20 slaine in all the skirmishes against the enemy. Things are not right with us, the soldiours want pay, our army is made weake, not by the power of an adversary, but by ourselves.

1643, Nov. 4 (P). Berkeley Castle. George Maxwell to Mr. Smith of Nibley.—The reason for not waiting upon him that day was that he heard the enemy was abroad and had been at Beerston (Beeston P) Castle.

1643, Nov. 17. Berkeley Castle. The same to the same.—Has written to Sir Francis Haly concerning the state of the castle. Has suffered as much as he can with his credit and has trusted to their very fair promises, but he thinks they only want to gain time. When the King raised the siege of Gloucester he sent Maxwell four pieces, but he could not then get them into the castle and he cannot now have one of them. The King gave him an order at Gloucester for 320 men to be in garrison in Berkeley Castle, of which 320 men, the Prince's Company was to be 200; now they have taken away the Prince's company. Complains that he has neither victuals nor money. Hears that Sir Francis Haly has ordered that he shall have no entertainment for his soldiers. Lord Hapton's company there is duly paid and has victuals besides. His own men are for the most part run away. He cannot withstand the enemy if he thinks the intention is to put an affront on him. Says (in confidence) that he has sent his lieutenant to the Prince, with his commission.

1643, January 3, Bristol. John Smyth to Sir Edward Hyde (a signed Draft).—He acknowledges Hyde's letter to him, and one enclosed to Lord Berkeley, of whose fidelity and allegiance to the King Hyde may rest assured, but his long illness and failure of almost all his revenue may defer that assistance in person or purse or both that might justly be expected. He (Smyth) will send a message rather than the King's letter, which in the condition he (Smyth) is in is almost impossible. Lord Berkeley may be heard of at his house in Great St. Bartholemew's; the Earl of Clare and Lord Conway are his chief friends.

1634, Feb. 22, Whitehall. Copy of Lord Deputy Wentworth's propositions for the kingdom of Ireland read and approved at the Council Board the 17th of Feb. 1631, and of the King's orders thereon. There are nine propositions. 1st. That his Majesty may declare his express pleasure that no Irish suit by way of reward be moved of any of his servants or others before the ordinary revenue there become able to sustain the necessary charge of the Crown, and the debts thereof be fully cleared. 16. . . Dec. 6, Cirencester. Letter signed by Ro. Cooke, Na. Stephens, John Fettiplace, John Stephens, and John Georges, addressed to John Smith at Nibley, saying that it was agreed that 300 Dragooners should lie in garrison at Cirencester; that none of the dragooners of his parts or hundred had come for the guard thereof; and desiring him to issue warrants to summon them to come in to garrison for the safety of the town, and to appoint the officers of every parish to bring in the moneys that are for the payment of the dragooners to three persons (named), who had been appointed receivers thereof.

16. . . Dec. 9, Cirencester. John Georges to John Smyth at Nibley. In reply to Smyth's letter he says that if the horses which Smyth mentions are sent with an allowance of 2s. per diem, if Capt. Peyler cannot find riders for them he (Georges) will do it there; and all that come are to be under the command of Lieut.-Col. Carr and his officers, till there may be a fit number to distribute into several companies, and then fit captains will be placed over them. Attributes the mutinous language of the people to the dilatoriness of those who have been specially employed and relied on by the Parliament, the Lord General, and the Lord Lieutenant.

1642, Oct. 21. Warrington. (Copy.) At a meeting at Warrington, by the Earl of Derby the Earl Rivers and divers other Lords, Knights, and gentlemen of the counties of Lancaster and Chester, whose names are subscribed, it is concluded and agreed upon as follows:—Twelve heads, for calling out the trained bands and freehold bands and horse of the two countries for the defense thereof; for fixing places of rendezvous; for payment of the troops (every soldier to have 12d. the day, out of which the captains and officers to have 4d. the day for their pay and the provision of powder, bullet and match); to bring about an association with the counties of Salop, Flint, Denbigh, Cumberland, and Westmoreland. Signed by the Earl of Derby and 23 others, among whom are R. Cholmondeley, Tho. Cholmondeley and John Davinport.

1666, Oct. 2, Gloucester. Wm. (Bishop of) Gloucester to Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace now met at Gloucester to keep the quarter sessions. A long letter with Biblical and classical quotations, urging them in strong terms to put in force the Acts against Conventicles.

1661, Jan. 23. Copy return of the Constable of Wotton under Edge unto his Majesty's commission at their sitting, of those who have subscribed and paid and those who have subscribed and not paid. (27 persons are in the former category and 26 in the latter.)

1672, Dec. 23. Copy of the King's license, countersigned by Arlington, for a room or rooms in the house of Mary Tovy, of the parish of Vly in Gloucestershire, to be a place for the use of such as do not conform to the Church of England, who are of the persuasion commonly called Presbyterian, in order to their public worship and devotion.

1696, Aug. 20. Council order under seal and signed by Wm. Bridgeman, directing George Smith, Esq., J. P. for Gloucestershire, to send to the Council Board all such informations upon oath and examinations as had been taken relating to Captain William Wintour and the other persons proposed by Smith to be named in a proclamation. (Smith had written to Mr. Newton, Warden of the mint, about several persons accused of clipping and counterfeiting the current coin of the kingdom.)

1708, April 29, Drumlanrig. Philip Davies to George Smyth, Esq., at North Nibley. . . . The only true news is that they have 15 of their nobility in the Castle of Edinburgh, and that very day part of them were ordered for London, a second part on Saturday, the other part on Tuesday. Wishes them a safe deliverance, but does not expect to see them all back in Scotland. He mentions a preacher on the mountains who caused great disturbance, having congregations of 700, 800, or 1,000, and was at the point of writing four or five sheets of paper against the Union; but an order of council was issued against him last week and proclaimed him a rebel at the Cross of Edinburgh; hears that three parties of horse are after him, and that he has 18,000 men with him in the mountains; the paper he wrote was in the nature of a roll; thinks it was near five yards long; he brought 100 or 150 men in arms, horse, and foot, and nailed [it] to a cross in a place called Jankers belonging to the Duke, about six miles from Drumlanrig; he (Davies) saw the taking of it; this was done in December. Davies does not like the Scotch houses; the only windows are those to let out the smoke; the fire is made in the middle of the house, and they sit round it and talk, but cannot see each other for the smoke.—He finds fault with the bread, the beer, and the women of the country. He seems to have recently left England, and at the time of his letter to be employed as agent to the Duke of

A short account of the methods used by the Irish for the importing of their wool and woollen yarn from the southern coasts of that kingdom into France. (1 p.)

Petition to the King by Robert Gower and Edward Harle; setting out the abuses in the supply of drugs for the army and navy, and suggesting the appointment of one or more apothecaries general, from whom all surgeons are to procure their medicines, the price to be paid by the Treasury and deducted from each surgeon's stated allowance; and praying that the petitioners, on sufficient testimony of their ability, may be established in that Employ.

1660, March the (), St. Johnes. Lord Berkeley to Mr. Edward Smith, at Nibley.—Intends to be at the next meeting of the Committee at Gloster, for settling the Militia. Lord Bruce is returned from Bedfordshire Commander-in-chief of all the forces there:—He (Berkeley) will take it kind if his countrymen give him leave to command a regiment of horse, without having any superior commander over him in the country.

1664, Sept. 15, London. Sir Edward Fust to John Smyth, at Gloucester. . . . Prince Rupert is preparing with 22 good ships for Guine, and another fleet preparing to follow, which makes some think there may be [an] engagement on our seas before. There is a daily pressing of men for sea. Col. Massey goes with the Prince with 1,000 foot, as 'tis reported. Some say the King of France mediates, but not yet that I hear of publicly. The packet boat, by accident or design, is stopped, as by the news book: if no good account, the D. of York will send his Mercuries to Sir G. Dowings for intelligence. The King and Council sit close, and a great hum in the town about the Dutch affair.

1665, March 17, Southw[arke]. Edward Smyth to (his father) John Smyth, at Nibley. A long letter; from which it appears that Edward Smyth and Sir Thomas Clarges were contending candidates for a seat in Parliament. On Tuesday the bailiff at 10l. charge, divided the Artillery Ground, at Horsey, (Horsley) Down, intending to make the election there the day following. This was the same night countermanded by a letter from the Lord General. The next morning two companies of foot were sent over; one took possession of the hall where the writ was to be read, and the other the artillery ground. Sir Thomas Clarges by riding about got together about 2,000 men from Newton, Lambeth, Westminster, &c., of which only 500 were thought to be able to poll. The crowd was so great that Smyth and his friends could hardly get up; but they numbered a little over 1,530, so that when the other party were garbled of all their unpollable men, Smyth must carry it by great odds. Lord Craven, Sir P. Howard, and others of the Court were there. The Lord Mayor who came to read the writ was forced to stand in the street in the crowd. The writ was read; Smith demanded a poll; the Lord Mayor appointed St. George's Fields; Smyth insisted that Horsey Down was the fit place. The Lord Mayor went to the Council, and got an order to adjourn to St. George's Fields. On Wednesday they went there; Sir Thomas Clarges and he have a parley; Smyth perceives that his supporters do not come up so strong as formerly; the end of it is that he agrees to give up to Sir Thomas: and they both went together to the place appointed to take the poll; he made a speech to the people recommending Sir Thomas, and persuaded his friends to vote for him, which was done; Sir Thomas and he naming 20 of each other's parties to seal the indentures.

1666, June 9, Badminton. Lord Herbert to John Smith, of Nibley. Notices the backwardness of many in payment of the weekly tax lately assessed, and of the arrears of the three months tax theretofore rated. In order to prevent the necessity of proceeding with rigour, he asks Smith to explain to the people their duty and the necessity of paying. In pursuance of the King's orders, Smith is to have it ordered at the present sessions that Beacons be provided in the usual and convenient places of the county, and that they be duly watched whereby notice may be given of any approaching danger.

1666, Oct. 4, Fort Bellaugh. Thomas Smyth to Mr. Edward Smyth at the Bridge House, near the bridge foot in Southwark, London. . . . Thanks for making Col. Cooke his friend. Says that his garrison is the remotest in this kingdom, 120 miles from Dublin, 32 miles from any post office, a mile from any market town. He is governor of the fort, where he lives, praised be Jove, in great plenty. The place stands in the middle of a bog, 10 miles every way; without it as much wood, and beyond it mountains. Wishes he had the convenience of a painter, for he believes the whole world does not afford the like landscape.

1666, Dec. 14. Sir Edward Fust to John Smyth at Nibley.—Directions to tender the oaths of supremacy and allegiance to Popish recusants, or those suspected to be so; the names of those who refuse to take the oaths to be sent to Fust.

1662. Copy of certificate by Thomas Smyth, that one William Vizer served Charles I. as an officer under his (Smyth's) command, and died in service, leaving a wife and six small children; and of an order by Sir Gabriel Lowe and John Smyth, Esq., Justices of the Peace, co. Gloucester, that the widow should have 4*l.* per annum from the Treasurer of the county in pursuance of the Act of Parliament authorizing them.

1666, Jan. 12, Gloucester. William (Bishop of) Gloucester to John Smith, Esq. Alludes to Smith's declaration at Todbury (Sodbury?) that excommunicate persons are liable to the penalty of the Statute for their absence from the Liturgy, notwithstanding they are excluded by the church censure. It is so powerful a way to reduce many refractory persons that he (the Bishop) will endeavour that it shall have its effect. He likes it better than the Significavit, which is chargeable and troublesome.

1669, April 26, Gloucester. Henry Ockold, Mayor, to John Smith.—Assures him that a person named had not been arrested, and that the serjeants are and have been commanded to forbear to make any arrests in the time of the Assizes or Sessions, so that that no just occasion should be given for the removal of the Assizes or Sessions.

1678, Feb. 6. Copy of the King's answer to the address of the House of Commons. (About the proposed treaty offensive and defensive with Holland against France.) This is followed by a copy of the Commons address on Feb. 1.

1694. April 2, London. William Stephens to George Smyth at Alderman Man's house.—Is glad that Symth is so well employed; doubts not that what he has written is very honest and useful and necessary at this time. . . . He never knew any time when the Church was more caressed by the Court than now, so that if Smyth is anything but sweet upon the Church, his book will not be licensed, nor will Sir Robert Atkins like his dedication. He says that his own sermon gave great offence to the church because he did not speak honourably enough of Conquest and Passive Obedience, and for want of a sufficient quantity of railing upon the Dissenters; and he believed it would not have passed the licenser's approbation and therefore was printed only by virtue of the order of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen.

1706, March 25, Council Chamber, Kensington. (Copy.) Council letter to Charles Earl of Berkeley, Castos Rotulorum of y^e co. of Gloucester, but in his absence to the Justices of the Peace. Urging the exercise of the "Act for the encouragement and increase of "Seamen and for the better and speedier manning Her "Majesty's fleet," by finding out and impressing such seamen and able-bodied landsmen and prisoners for debt as are intended by the Act.—It was with a view to a fleet against the common enemy (France.)

1706, June 4. William Loup to George Smith.—He doubts not Smith has heard of their noble champion's second glorious victory (Ramillies). He gave them a Jeroboam stroke, and the Danes did not forget how their poor natives were sacrificed at Calcinado (Calcinato) in Italy; so that when their generals bid them halt, they drove on, Jehu like, giving no quarter, and cutting the enemy all to pieces for several miles; but our brave English boys who, with their horse quickly routed their (the French) right wing, were more merciful and granted quarter to the regiment Du Roy, who laid down at their horses' feet their arms and begged for their lives. Is loud in praise of Marlborough, says that last Friday he received two letters from his dear friend Capt. Butler, the first dated 30th of April by which he gave the following melancholy account;—On the 27th April they anchored in the bay of Barcelona with five sail of ships of battle, Monsieur Thoulouse having timely notice of their coming, and they being becalmed, gallees towing them, they escaped very narrowly, but to their great surprise they found that Fort Mountjoy was not only taken but demolished 15 days before their arrival, and the Lord Donegall killed when the enemy entered, and most of the English and Dutch. The enemy having intrenched themselves close to the foot of the town bastions fired from six several batteries, and several bombs at the same time fell into the town, and had been taken in two days if our fleet had not come so happily to their relief; the inhabitants were tired with extraordinary duties, and many killed, and poor King Charles had got into a boat to save himself, but went ashore immediately after we had landed our forces, we being about 10,000 strong; afterwards, by night, several deserters came over to us telling us that the Duke of Anjou looked very sorrowful altho' it is computed he had about 15,000 men, yet in all likelihood has besieged himself not being able to look round him without seeing a sad passage of ruin, being surrounded with 40,000 Mucqueletts; the only deliverance they expect is by taking the town, having not above four days' provision. The Mucqueletts are resolved to revenge the cruelty the French treated them withal when they came hither; and if they enter the wall they certainly [will] be cut in pieces, we having raised inward works and are all resolutely bent to defend it sword in hand, and our brave King also. As matters stand to-day all things promise to our success, for they cannot get any advantage, all which must have an end in a short time.

The 2nd letter.—May 1st. At 3 this morning the enemy went off in great confusion leaving behind them 27 mortars, 140 brass canon, 40,000 cannon balls, 5,000 barrels of powder, with shell of all sorts to a great number, pickaxes, spades, about 10,000, with great store of other warlike necessaries, sacks of meal for 12,000 men for 8 months, and great quantities of other provision, and 3 large hospitals of sick and wounded, being it is thought about 5,000. They are pursued by the Macqueletts, from which we expect a miserable account of such an army going off in mutiny and disorder; they went away offering no attack to the . . . ne. Although governed by the Duke of Anjou, Marshal de Thosse and Count Noilles, being attacked all the way by the Macqueletts, and, as we believe, making towards Provence, Count de Thessie at his going away wrote in short to Lord Peterborough that the glory of the day was his; that the French fleet was gone, and the English gained the victory; but prayed his Lordship to use humanity and kindness to preserve the sick and wounded. Accordingly he ordered a guard for their security; but the Macqueletts had destroyed some of them before they came . . . I expect the whole monarchy is, or will be in a short time, devoted to King Charles. We are all in good condition and hope this will not be the last stroke we shall give them this summer. This account I took at the King's Palace, being the very same he had himself. The letter is dated from "The Dorsetshire, Barcelona." Loup adds that when the army marched off the sun was totally eclipsed in those parts.

1706, July 27, Whitehall. Jos. Tily to John Smyth. . . . Here is more life than ever in the business of Lorraine; therefore pray think of it; for upon a peace, the barriers of Europe will come first into consideration . . . Sends an inclosure [not with the letter] concerning the sending of wool from Ireland to France; against which pernicious practice the writer inveighs, and recommends Smith to get such of his neighbours as are clothiers, to join with the Backwell Hall in an address for the purpose of stopping the practice. He says that there is a post come that afternoon, and it is said that the French in a Council of War had agreed to raise the siege of Turin; the forces designed for the descent are all shipped, and only wait for a wind to carry them to France.

1706, Sept. 3, Lambeth. William Loup to George Smyth.—Has received two letters from Capt. Butler, the first dated June 28th brought by Lord Chalemont (Charlemont) and another to the Archbishop, giving an account of the taking of Carthage on the 13th of the same instant, without the loss of one man, and Le Conde de St. Cruise came to our fleet in two galleys, equipped and manned with 1,000 men and 48,000 dollars, which he had on board to pay off the garrison of Oran, on the Barbary Coast belonging to Spain; and I have formerly been there; it [has] a strong garrison, but the Conde, a great grandee of Murcia, suspecting him to be in King Charles III.'s interest, designed to imprison him; but he was too cunning for them. The Miquelets have destroyed 3,000 of Count Tessi's army since the raising of the siege of Barcelona. They likewise expect Sir Clowesley (Sir Cloudesley Shovel) daily and hourly to join, them which is a mystery to us at home.—In his second letter he gives us an account that Brigadier Gorge came from Valencia with about 500 foot and 300 horse, and there was drawn from the fleet 500 seamen and 800 marines; with these forces they lay before the suburbs of Alicant five days, taking and retaking some small outworks, whilst 8 men of war laid to batter the City, suburbs, and 3 fortifications under Sir George Bings, which reduced the place to a bad condition, and made several breaches through the walls; and Sir J. Leake, my intimate acquaintance and good friend, ordered all the boats to be manned with 500 seamen, and armed with the rest of the marines entered with sword in hand into the city through the breaches. An Irishman, General Mahoney, stood the last man to oppose but was forced to fly, with those people he could get, up a mountain into a castle; but they hope in a little time to have him and his castle. Sir, The wind proving contrary and being late in the year, it was hazardous for our capital ship to go to sea, so that all our first rates and second rates, except two or three, are returned home, but the whole fleet continues still at Torbay and Sir Clowesley and my Lord Rivers are aboard of the "Association"; no person knows where they are to go, but they have alarmed all the seaports of France, and all from 16 to 60 are to bear arms. It is my opinion that they will cross over the Bay to Bayonne or Caronna (Corunna) to hinder the communication between France and Spain, and to intercept Anjou. Our great General has taken Manin, which Mons. Vauban calls the flower of his garden, and the mighty Vendosme, who came from Italy, durst not venture a battle for so important a fortress.—We expect to be masters of Dundermund in a short time, and our army lays before Manin till the breaches are repaired. Prince Eugene goes on successfully, and it is thought will join the Duke of Savoy; if so, the siege of Turin must be raised. We are sending a great fleet of men-of-war to the West Indies, to look after the Spanish Flota. Lewis le Grand was never so perplexed and put to his trumps as now . . . He gives a list of ships under Sir George Byng, which commanded the city and suburbs and castles of Alicant, July 29, 1706. (8 ships carrying 586 guns).

CHESTER IN THE CIVIL WAR.

1641, Nov. 4, York House. A. (Earl of) Northumberland (Lord High Admiral) to the Mayor of Chester.—The Lords have had information that divers officers of Flanders and others are going towards Bristol, Chester, Holyhead, and other places, with intention to take ship for Ireland to join the rebels there.—The Mayor is directed to stop the port of Chester and the members thereof, and not to suffer any to pass over sea unless they can show they are not of the number of these Flanders commanders or soldiers.

1641, Nov. 23, Chester. Thomas Cowper, Mayor, and Thomas Mottershead, to the Lord High Admiral.—In pursuance of his order of the 15th of Nov. they send to him the body of Arthur Progers: and complain of the expense of conveying him and other delinquents.

1641, Jan. 14, Carnarvon. Jo. Griffith, Vice Admiral of North Wales, to the Mayor of Chester.—In obedience to the Lord High Admiral's orders, Griffith had stayed Col. Butler, who was about to take ship at Holyhead. Butler went to stay with Dr. Griffiths, Judge of the Admiralty, and then went to Beaumaris, where he pretended to make a journey to Carnarvon to see Jo. Griffiths, but instead, went to Chester. Whyte the Mayor of Beaumaris sent word, and the Mayor of Chester attached him (Butler) and wrote to Jo. Griffiths to know the reasons for his detainer: in answer to that letter Jo. Griffiths wrote the present letter.

1641, Jan. 17, Beaumaris. Henry White to Thomas Cooper (Cowper), Mayor of Chester. On the same subject.

1641, Jan. 19, West Chester. List taken from the Muster Rolls of four troops, viz., Viscount Lisle's, Sir Rd. Grenville's, Capt. Vaughan's, and Capt. Marrow's. 1 p. signed by Dudley Wyatt, Commissary of the Musters.

Same date. Another list of the same, with the sums of money to be paid on their account added.

Same date. Receipt for 1,000*l.* from the Mayor of Chester, in part payment of one month's entertainment for four troops of Horse, consisting of 300 besides officers. Signed by R. Grenville, Dan. Treswell, Will. Vaughan, and John Marow.

1641, Jan. 23. Receipt to the same for 100*l.* for Sir Richard Grenville. Signed by Francis Hope.

1641, Jan. 22, Chester. Copy of letter by the Mayor and two others to the Earl of Leicester, Lt.-Genl. of Ireland, at Leicester House.—They acknowledge his letter of the 14th, and the two Bills of Exchange accepted by Mr. Pinder, one of which has been paid, and they have paid the amount to Sir R. Grenville, &c. (see the receipt above). Hope to receive the other 1,000*l.* the beginning of next week, and then will pay the remainder of the month's entertainment. At the pressing request of Lt.-Col. Monk they have let him have for the Earl's regiment of foot then in Chester 100*l.* They have assisted Sir R. Grenville in providing ships to transport troops to Ireland. Say that the Citizens suffer, provisions being scarce and dear by reason of the troops quartered there, and the influx of 700 English fled out of Ireland then resident in the city, besides many hundred of distressed Irish that daily resort to the same. Ask that if any more troops are to be embarked they may be billeted in the country and in the town of Liverpool.

1641, Jan. 22, Chester. Copy of letter by the same to Sir Robert Harley, K.B., about receipt and payment of money as in the letter last above.

1641, Jan. 22. Copy of letter from [the Mayor of Chester] to the Lord High Admiral.—Acknowledges his letter about bringing up Mr. Nettervill to the Lords in Parliament. In accordance with the contents of a letter from the Mayor of Beaumaris he has arrested Col. Butler, an Irishman, as reported of great experience in military affairs, and he is in the custody of one of the Sheriffs. As the Sheriff is much busied about the troops (there being four troops of horse and the Lord Lieutenant-General of Ireland's own regiment of foot then in the City) the writer begs that Nettervill and any others that may be stayed, may be delivered by the Sheriff of the City to the High Sheriff of the County Palatine of Chester, and so be passed from County to County up to London. Complains much of the expense to the City.

1641, Feb. 1. Copy (signed by H. Elsynge) of the Order by the House of Commons that Sir W. Brereton should write to the Mayor of Chester to send the examinations of suspected persons staid at Chester.

R. CHOL-MONDELEY,
Esq.

1641, Feb. 2.—Receipt by Capt. John Boys for 132l. 6s. from the Mayor and two Aldermen of Chester.

1641, Feb. 8, Covent Garden. Tho. Smithe to the Mayor of Chester.—As the Citizens feel aggrieved by the intention of their apprentices to go for Ireland as soldiers, he puts the Mayor in mind that by Statute four Justices may compel an apprentice to serve his time. He and Franc. Gamull attended the Lord Lieutenant yesterday, who promised them that it should not be so (i.e. that apprentices should not be taken). (1 p.)

1641, Feb. 19. Copy of Order of this date of the House of Commons referred to in the next letter.

1641, Feb. 21, Covent Garden. Tho. Smithe to the Mayor of Chester.—Incloses copy of order of House of Commons, so that now having an order of either house the Mayor and the Sheriff may (notwithstanding any habeas corpus) convey prisoners who may be stayed at Chester from Sheriff to Sheriff. Will obtain an Order that no soldiers shall have arms delivered until they are ready to be shipped. "Those members of our House that have the Protestation are not put to take it again."

Thinks the Mayor may, like his predecessors, use his discretion in conniving at slaughtering and eating of flesh when fish and white meat is scarce, especially at this time, considering the great confluence of soldiers and others to Chester.

1641, Feb. 4 and 9, and 10, and 16, and 18, Puddington; Feb. 18 (no place); Feb. 20, New Key.—Seven letters of these dates by Sir Richard Grenville to the Mayor of Chester, about supplies to men and ships being transported to Ireland. And an account (signed by Grenville) of 100l. received by him from the Mayor to pay for provisions for four horse troops to be transported from Chester to Dublin.

1641, Feb. 22, Yorkhouse. A. (Earl of) Northumberland (Lord High Admiral) to the Mayor of Chester.—The Mayor having given a pass to one Connell, servant to the Recorder of Dublin, notwithstanding the Mayor knew he was a Papist, the Earl warns him to be cautious how he gives passes to Papists, as an ill construction may be made thereof.

1641, Feb. 24. Certificate signed by Will. Cope, that Thomas Prenton, Master of the Grace, of Dublin, had safely landed in the haven of Dublin the Company of Capt. William Cope, in number 100 soldiers and 10 officers, with 10 soldiers belonging to Capt. Sidney.

1641, Feb. 26. Copy of letter by Thomas Cowper, Mayor of Chester, to the Earl of Northumberland, explaining the circumstances under which he granted the pass to the servant of Mr. John Byssie, the Recorder of Dublin.

1641, Feb. 28, Dublin Castle. Council letter to the Mayor of Chester, requesting that as coals are scarce at Dublin, he will order all ships coming from Chester to bring some coals, which shall be paid for at once. Signed by W. Parsons, Jo. Borlase, La. Dublin, Ad. Loftus, J. Temple, and four others.

1641, March 2. Receipt signed by Edward Dymocke, Lieutenant to Capt. Biddulph (by order of Parliament and direction of Sir W. Brereton, M.P.), for 60l. 4s. 8d., paid by the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester, for pay due to Dymocke and others.—Attached is a copy of the order of the House of Commons dated 16 Feb. 1641.

1641, March 7. Similar receipt and certificate for 12l. 12s. for 120 horse of Lord Lile's troop. The vessel was the Edward, William Johnson, owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt for 12l. for Capt. Shirley Snellings company, consisting of 110 soldiers and 10 officers. The vessel was the James, of Larges, in Scotland, David Boyle, owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt and certificate for 11l. 8s., for 19 horses of Capt. Treswell's troop. The vessel was the Swan, of Liverpool, Richard Harrison, owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt and certificate for 9l. 12s., for 16 horses of Sir Richard Grenville's troop. The vessel was the Mary, of Liverpool, William Rimmer, master and owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt and certificate for 21l. 4s., for 200 soldiers and 12 officers, being his Excellency's company under the command of Capt. Guy Moldsworth. The vessel was the Grace of God, of Battan Wyme. Robert Cooke, owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt and certificate for 15l. 12s., for 26 horses of Capt. Marrow's troop. The vessel was the Mary Flower (May Flower in Grenville's certificate), of Helbree, William Wright, owner.

1641, March 8. Similar receipt and certificate for 14l. 8s., for 24 horses of Capt. Vaughan's troop. The vessel was the Katherine, of Fornby, Thomas Gilberson, owner.

1641, March 11. Similar receipt and certificate for 18l., for 30 horses of Capt. Marrow's troop. The vessel was the Hopewell, of Liverpool, Thomas Andowe, owner.

1641, March 17. Similar receipt and certificate for 21l. 12s., for 36 horses of Capt. Vaughan's troop. The vessel was the Fortune, of Leighton, John Houghe, master.

1641, March 8. (Indorsed, Copy of a letter sent to my Lord Lieutenant, 12 March 1641). The writer (the Mayor) defends himself from the charge of inhospitality to the soldiers at Chester.

1641, March 11. Information of Thomas Knowles and William Bromfield, prisoners in the Northgate of the City of Chester, about Lieut. Cole coming to the prison with some of his company and forcibly liberating two soldiers there. On the same sheet of paper is a deposition, dated 10 March 1641, of Rose Johnson, wife of Edward Johnson, of Chester, Chapman, about two soldiers coming at night to their house and their violent behaviour, they coming as they said to search for a rogue that had killed a man.

n. d. A paper (½ p.) signed by Lieut. Lawrence Cole, and witnessed; confessing fault in and expressing his regret for having of his own authority set at liberty two soldiers who were imprisoned. He had returned the prisoners to the same place till satisfaction might be made.

1641, March 12. Chester. Draft or copy of certificate, or intended certificate (by the Mayor), that one Pagett had not, as was reported, nor had any other deposed before him that the Earl of Clanrickard had turned rebel. Made at Dr. Donellan's request.

1641, March 15. Thomas Smithe and F. Gamul to the Mayor and Recorder of Chester.—Acknowledge their letters, and will have an eye to anything that shall be offered in the House touching the proceedings of Mr. Edwards; think he would better end the matter at home than bring the matter before Parliament. Sir William Brereton seems desirous that the matter may be composed in a fitting way.—On the outside F. Gamul has written, "Since the enclosure the Attorney-General is acquitted."

1641, March 16. Receipt signed by Thomas Crosse, of Chester, for the use of Thomas Prenton, master of the grace of Chester, for 21l. 12s., from the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester, for transporting from Chester to Dublin 16 horses of the officers of his Excellency's regiment, and 100 soldiers and 10 officers under the command of Capt. William Cope, and 10 soldiers belonging to Capt. Sydney.

1642, March 26. Copy of a letter by Thomas Cowper, Mayor of Chester, to Sir Thomas Smithe and Mr. Francis Gamul. Refers to an order of the House of Commons made 9 Sept. 1641, for removing scandalous pictures from churches; he says that he believes the order has been observed in all churches in Chester, except the cathedral, where he is informed there are several scandalous pictures. Mr. Bispham, the sub-dean, to whom he sent a message on the subject, said that he could not move without the dean and the rest of his brethren. Incloses the sub-dean's letter, and asks that it, and if necessary the writer's letter, may be laid before the House.

1642, April 12. Covent Garden. Thomas Smithe to the Mayor of Chester.—Acquainted Mr. Pim with the examinations, and divers others of the House; they are delivered to the Chairman of the Committee for Informations. Tells him to advise with the Recorder and indict Mr. Codford for his words; but there is no evidence against Mr. Bruen, but that scandalous minister's, who, he (the mayor) knows, denies what three or four have deposed . . . so advises him to inflict such a punishment on Mr. Codford as may rid him out of Chester.

(1642, April.) A statement of and signed by John Mason, a Lieutenant in Captain Sidney's troop, of the movements of his troop while waiting for embarkation to Ireland, and the reasons (for want of shipping) of the delay. (1½ pp.)

mission directed to them, they tell the sheriffs to warn the train bands and inhabitants of the city, able to bear arms, to appear before them on the morrow at Pentice, in the Rood dee.

1642, Aug. 14, York. "Charles R." to Thomas Cowper, Mayor of Chester.—Being informed that some goods of the Duchess of Buckingham are arrived out of Ireland and landed at Neston, not far from Chester, he requires the Mayor, for greater security of the goods, to take them into his own house or other place in the city where they may be secure. (Large wafer seal of the Royal Arms.)

(1642), Aug. 31, Rock Savage. (The Earl of) Rivers to the Mayor of Chester.—Tells him that he hears that some horse are come into Chester under the name of Lord Leicester's men, but they say troopers to lie here upon the country; likewise that there is many horse come to the Northwick in the same manner. Gives him timely notice, so that he may take the best way for the peace of the city.

1642, Sept. 27. Memorandum signed by Thomas Cowper, Mayor, and William Ince, Alderman and one of the Treasurers of the city of Chester, that they did deliver unto Geo. Bennett, of the said city, merchant, the office of keeper of the Common Hall, by delivering to him a waight in name of possession of the said office.

1642, Aug. 23, Whitchurch. Tho. Hanmer to the Mayor of Chester.—Understands that the Mayor has committed one Lophlyn Ameloone for some words that he had spoken, and is informed that he was fair in drink at that time and is sorry. He was entertained a week since by the writer's brother, Capt. Hanmer, for the King's service, and is in pay. Asks that he may be released.

1641, Oct. 30. Deposition at Chester by Thomas Cremer, of Gray's Inn, in the county of Middlesex, gentleman, before Thomas Cowper, the Mayor, and other Justices; that on Tuesday last he met one Magenes, brother to Lord Magenes, who said he was going to Ireland (being lately come from Spain), to see Lord Macquere, and that he hoped that ere long the Irish would drive the Scots out of Ireland, and that he had returned 800 or 900 out of London into Ireland, to raise forces for the King of Spain; and that there was another in his company who called himself Readman, who drank a health to the confusion of the Protestants in Ireland. That Magenes said that since the business was discovered he would go to London with Cremer if Cremer would lend him some money. Signed by Tho. Cremer and by Thomas Cowper, mayor, and others, one is Randle Holme.

1641, Oct. 30. Examination at Chester of Arthur Magneis or Magenes, who said he came from London to Neston, in Woorall, where he had been about six days, intending to go to Ireland, but determined to return to London and then go to Flanders, when he heard of the rebellion in Ireland. He feared to go to Ireland because he, as a cozen german of Lord Mackquere, might be suspected. He was to go to raise a company for the King of Spain, in Flanders; had neither a commission nor money, but was promised by his Colonel, Owen O'Neale, a patent of a Captain's place if he brought over a company. Denies that he returned money to Ireland, but says that there was 800*l.* returned by one Captain Con O'Neale now in Ireland, which he had from the Spanish Ambassador in London; denies that he was sent for to Ireland; denies saying that he hoped to see the Scots driven out of Ireland; admits he heard it reported that the Scots demanded leave of the King to conquer Ireland; says he has been a soldier for three years in Flanders, but without office or pay. Signed by Arthur Magneiss and by the Mayor and three other Justices.

1641, Nov. 1 (at the foot of the above). On further examination he says he has been a student some 3 years in Doway, in Flanders; has not entered into orders; will take the oath of allegiance, but not the oath of supremacy, that being against his conscience in some things. Signed by Arthur Magneiss, and by the Mayor and other Justices.

1641, Nov. . Copy of a letter by the Mayor and Justices to the Lords of the Council, enclosing copies of the information by Cremer and the examination of Magneiss. On searching Magenes they found nothing, but on his footboy they found a false beard, near the colour of his master's hair, which was something red-dish. While this was doing, Magenes took out a letter and burned the name and part of the postscript thereof, and tore the remainder, which shows that he meant to go to Ireland, notwithstanding he said he intended to return to London. The man Redmond, an Irishman whom Cremer mentioned, is out of their jurisdiction. They have bound Cremer to appear before the Lords.

1641, Nov. 2, London. (Sir) Henry Bruce to his nephew Lieut.-Col. John . . . ad. —Bruce had not long before landed [from Ireland], and he wrote from Chester. . . . Expects the King's coming.—Supposes his nephew has heard of the Marquis of Argyle's retreat from the King and Parliament. The King is very violent against them; they would gladly be back again, but the King will have their cause examined in open Parliament. . . . The Marquis hath written two (two) letters to Mr. Murrey to make his peace with His Majesty; but Bruce thinks it will not do; so much doth appear, he will never be courted any more. Hears of some stir in Ireland; "some report it is Magyre, and that sort of the old rebels; there is not the less damage, for he is but a drunken fellow of no importance, and it will not much harm you that I think. I pray you send me the true relation of every thing of that business, and let not Arthur stay."

1641, Nov. 5. Copy order by the Lords in Parliament that Arthur Magennis and Redmond Comyn (then under restraint at Chester) should be brought before them:—and below, 1641, Nov. 10. Copy Order of the Lords that Magennis and Comyn were to be brought apart one from the other, and not be allowed to have commerce together; and that such suspicious persons as were in their company were to be pursued with Hue and Cry, and when apprehended, be sent up to the Parliament.

1641, Nov. 6. Three several depositions before the Mayor of Chester, by and respectively signed Thomas Whitstone of Tredagh, Matthew Spell of Tredagh, and John Johnson, sometime servant to Thomas Westropp, of St. Martin's in the Fields, Esquire.—The effect is that that day they were in company with one Progers (servant to Col. Sir Henry Bruce), who told them he was going to Ireland for news. Whitstone told Progers that such letters as he had brought from Ireland for the Lord Primate (whose servant Whitstone was) were searched in Chester. Progers said he had 2 letters, and rather than any should peruse them he would burn them. Progers told Spell that his letters should not be opened, because he was employed by Col. Bruce on the King's behalf unto Col. Reade, living in Tredagh and a great Papist. Progers told Johnson that he was going to Dublin to receive hundreds of money for his master's use. Spell and Johnson said that Progers said that England and Scotland had been together by the ears, and that then Ireland was in rebellion, and that they kept the King in Scotland, and he thought that the Prince would be crowned very shortly.

1641, Nov. 7. Examination of Arthur Progers, servant to Sir Henry Bruce, Kt., Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to the King.—Upon Tuesday last he left London and reached Chester on Thursday. Says he is to go to Dublin and thence to Tredagh to receive 600*l.* or 700*l.* from one Lieut.-Col. Read for his master's use, as appears by his master's letter to Read. Denies saying that he had 2 letters which he would rather burn than have opened; denies having any other letter than the one delivered to the Mayor, except one which he delivered to Mr. Alderman Walley from his master. Admits saying that the King had sent for his winter clothes to Scotland, and for English beer, and that the Parliament had sent for the army from Outland to London. He will take the oath of allegiance, but says the oath of supremacy is not for one of his religion. At the end are 2 short supplemental examinations of Progers, the last being on Nov. 8. All are signed by Arthur Proger and by the Mayor and several other Justices.

Provisions to be embarked for 4 horse troops from Chester to Dublin for 360 men for 4 days' provision, horse and man. (1 p.)

For 28 days' pay for the 4 troops of horse now at Chester as underwritten, being the 3rd of January. Lord Leslie's troop, 123 horses and 100 men and 10 officers; Sir Richard Grenville's troop being 103 horse and 80 soldiers and 6 officers; Capt. Vaughan's troop being 83 horses, 60 troopers, and 6 officers; and Capt. Marrow's troop being 83 horses, 60 troopers, and 6 officers; and wagons for each troop. Total, 1,405*l.* 18*s.*) 1 p.

A fair copy of the last. The several amounts have been three times added up; after two failures the total is made 1,406*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*

1641, Jan. 29. Copy of letter by the Mayor of Chester to the Lord High Admiral.—Will observe his Lordship's directions contained in his letter of the 25th, with the order inclosed therein. As to his Lordship's directions concerning the stay of Flemish Commanders and others suspected of fomenting the present rebellion in Ireland, the Mayor says, that yesterday being the 28th, he was informed that Sir George Hamilton was in the City expecting a passage to Ireland. As he was a papist and might be suspected the Mayor sent for him. Sir George was willing to take the oath of allegiance but refused to take the oath of supremacy. On the Mayor saying that he could not suffer him to pass to Ireland until his Lordship was certified thereof, Sir George produced the King's warrant for his passage to Ireland, dated Windsor, Jan. 19th. But the Mayor stays him in the hands of a private man of good quality until directions from his Lordship, whom he prays to acquaint the King or the Lords in Parliament with the matter.

1641, Feb. 2. Receipt by Tho. Parramore, Captain of a company of his Excellency's regiment of foot, consisting of 100 men besides officers, from the Mayor and Aldermen of Chester of 132l. 6s. in full of one month's pay.

1641, Feb. 2. Receipt by Hercules Hannay, for the use and by the appointment of Algernon Sidney, captain of a company of his Excellency's regiment of foot, consisting of 100 men besides officers, for 132l. 6s. in full of one month's pay.

1641, Feb. 19, Chester. Copy of a letter by the Mayor of Chester. Mr. William Gamull and Mr. Walley to the Lord Lieutenant.—They wrote to him on the 20th of January, telling him how far they had proceeded on his further directions. They understand he has received it from his Secretary Battier's letter of the 21st, wherein he intimates to them 3,000l. sent by Mr. Loftis, which they have received; and with that and the remainder of the first 2,000l. they have paid both the regiments of horse and foot, together with the 400 firelocks, and all their officers, for one month's entertainment, and have paid for the provision put aboard for transportation of both the said regiments of horse and foot into Ireland. They have engaged themselves to the owners of the ships for their freight, which they suppose will amount to as much as the remainder. Tempestuous weather has done much hurt to the shipping and spoiled much provision: &c.

1641, Feb. 19. Copy of letter by the Mayor of Chester to Sir Thomas Smythe and Mr. Thomas Gane; requesting them to get the House of Commons to say whether they mean the Protestation to be tendered to such as had already taken it; and to move the House that inasmuch as they had no provision of herrings or other fish to furnish the City for that Lent season, the House would grant him power to appoint 6 butchers out of the City, or otherwise out of the County, to slaughter and kill victual towards the maintenance of the citizens and others that might in that season be billeted in the City.

1641, March 2, Dublin Castle. Council letter to the Mayor of Chester, telling him that John Clearke, owner of the barque the Gift of God, of Calburne, in Scotland, had received 16l. 4s. for the freight of 27 horses, 27 horsemen, and their boys from Chester to Dublin.—Signed by W. Parsons, Jo. Borlase, Ad. Loftus, J. Temple, and four others.

1641, March 19. Copy of letter by the Mayor of Chester to Sir W. Brereton.—Mr. Edwards, one of the aldermen, had complained to Sir W. B. of the Mayor's proceedings against him. The Mayor acknowledges Sir W. B.'s letter of the 15th, and justifies his own proceedings. (The letter was sent to Sir Thos. Smith and Mr. Francis Ganell; to be delivered to Sir W. B.)

1641, March 24, Chester. Copy of letter by the Mayor of Chester to Sir Thomas Smyth and Mr. Francis Gamull, sending a list of all such as have taken the Protestation within the city (of Chester), none to their knowledge having refused.

1642, March 25, Dublin. Thomas Sandford to the Mayor of Chester.—Certificate that the bearer John Davice (Davies), owner of the barque Gift of God, of Culberne, in Scotland, had landed at Dublin 105 soldiers and 3 officers, and that he had also brought with him 2 men of the company of Capt. Dimock.

1641, May 2. Receipt by John Davies for 10l. 16s. for the transport of the above men, under the command of Capt. Thomas Sandford.

1642, April 1, Chester. Copy of the Mayor's letter to the Justices of the Peace at or near Stone, co. Stafford.—Encloses copy of a letter dated 26 March to him from the Irish Council for the apprehension of two suspected persons who had taken away certain of the King's moneys. Asks them to search for those persons, and obey the orders of the Irish Council.

1642, April 2. Examination of Robert Lanan, late of Hollowaydrath, near Dublin, Shoemaker, taken before Thomas Crompton, Esq., J.P. for the co. of Stafford.—Lanan says he knew one Patrick when in Dublin, but did not know until lately that his surname was Carvan (Garvan?), or that he was servant to Mr. Peter Beaghan, one of the Remembrancers of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer; denies that he had any part with Patrick in robbing Beaghan, or any part of the money supposed to be taken out of Beaghan's chest, &c.—Signed by Thomas Crompton.

1642, April 2, Stone.—Warrant under the hand and seal of arms of Thomas Crompton to all mayors, bailiffs, constables, and other King's officers in the direct from Stone to Chester.—Patrick Garvan and Robert Lanan are charged by the Council of Ireland with having robbed Peter Beaghan of 70l. 19s. 6d. In accordance with the Mayor of Chester's letter, he has arrested Lanan, and now desires the addressees to pass him on from constable to constable direct to Chester, so that he may be brought before the Mayor there.

1642, April 2, Stone. Copy of Crompton's letter to the Mayor of Chester, on the occasion of sending Lanan.

1642, April 6. Copy of the Mayor of Chester's letter to the Lords Justices of Ireland, telling them of Lenon's (Lanan?) being apprehended, and that he was in the Northgate, and that the other (Garvan) should likewise be committed to the Northgate.

1642, April 15. Declaration by Dudley Wyatt, Commissary of the Army, before the Mayor of Chester and John Moore, Esq. (signed by all three), that the money ordered to pay the troops at Chester arrived not until Monday was seignight; that he then signed their books, and they were paid one month's pay; that soon after they marched to the seaside; all except one troop are gone, and the rest are imbarcking.

1642, June 11. Copy of letter by the Lords Justices and Council of Ireland to (the Mayor of Chester).—They have employed and do require and authorize the bearers, Capt. Henry Smith, Lieut. John Bernard, and Lieut. Arnold Cosby, to convey to London as prisoners the traitors Lord Macguire and Hugh MacMahowne, and also Lieut.-Col. John Read, and deliver them to such person as the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland shall appoint. And they require all Mayors &c. to furnish horses a strong guard and all necessary assistance.

1642, June 26, Dublin Castle. License to William Fitzwilliams, Esq., son of Thomas Vice-count (Viscount) Fitzwilliams, of Merion, to go to France. Signed at the head by W. Parsons and Jo. Borlase, and at foot by Ormond Oserye, Cha. Lambart, Ad. Loftus, Roscommon, J. Temple, Tho. Rotham, Ja. Ware, Rob. Meredith.—Below is a certificate by David Lloyd that William Fitzwilliams took the oath of allegiance before the Mayor and Robert Brerewood, Serjeant at law, Recorder of the City of Chester, on the 15 of Aug. 1642.

1642, July 2. H. Rigby to the Mayor of Chester.—Advising him to look well after a prisoner in the Northgate charged with having stolen a mare, because he had "an art to dissolve anie boltes laid on him."

1642, July 7. The accounts of Thomas Cowper, Mayor, William Gamull and Charles Walley, Aldermen of the City of Chester, for 2,000l. charged by Sir Job Harvie and Sir John Nicolls upon Mr. Peter Pinder, Collector of H.M. Custom House at Chester, and ordered by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for the payment of one month's pay for 4 troops of horse mustered at Chester, according to a list of pay, received from his aforesaid Excellency, as also for the transportation into Ireland. (4 pp.)

n.d. Copy Petition to the Right Honourable Court of Parliament of the nobility, knights, gentry, and freeholders of the County Palatine of Chester, whose names are subscribed. (The names are not copied. The Petition is in favour of Episcopal Government in the Church.)

n.d. Copy of a Petition intended to have been presented to His Majesty for the fortification of Chester.

Two papers about negligence of ships engaged to transport troops to Ireland.

of Wilhenshaw, county Chester, has submitted to a fine, and paid and secured the same according to order. They are to forbear all further proceedings in the sequestration of the estate of the said R. Tatton, compounded for according to the particular annexed. If further estate is discovered, the same is to be sequestered until compounded for.—Directions concerning his estate.—Signed by John Ashe, Ed. Ashe, Richard Vennar, and four others.—The particulars of Tatton's estate are on the following leaf.

Aguste 1601. Orderes set downe by my lady to be observed by the gentle men in every respects, the which direcones shall remayne in the gentleman ushers hands to thende that none of them shall for theyer excuse plead ignoraunce upon the breach of these appointed orderes by for geatinge any of them but to cufe of that inconvenience I do here appointe that every one of the gentellemen may at any time resorto to the gentle man usher and such as can rede may here see from time to time what those orderes bee where by they may be the better instructed of theyre duties and orders appointed to be observed by them.

Derecones for the gentelmen. The gentellman usher to see my gentlemen in housholde to live in desente order to be diligent and reverent in theyer services to my lo: and me and to obay all othere good orders sette downe by me in the yomens booke with out any brech or contempte of any of them where by both you shall greatly contente my lo: and me with your obedience and wele behavuyour and tractableness and besides be an ocasion to procuer the meaner sorte of my servaunts in cawlinge to amend theyer faultes by your good examples; and though I do referre you for the moste of them to those ordres all redie sett downe for brevetye yet I thought it not good to passe over with out derectinge some orders unto you as the chiefeste to be observed.

To come every morninge to see the dining chamberes in good order. The gentleman usher to come every morninge in to the dyninge chamber and with drawinge chamber in the winter season at viii of the clocke and in summer at vii of the clocke. If straingers be there then at more earlyer howres and to see that the yomen of those chambers do kepe fyres there in the winter and order well and dresse uppe every thinge in those chamberes accordinge to my former direcones sete downe. And if you find any lacke in them to see those faltes presently amended whereby this place shalbe kept orderly to the contentement of my lo: and me, and besides shall be in decent order at all times for the enterteinenge of straingers; likewise in the summer time to see the chimneys trimed with grene bowes and the windowes with herbes and swete flowers and the chambers strowed with greene rushes.

To atende at service tyme. The gentleman usher all the service dayes appoynted to come upp dalye with the residewe of my gentlemen to here the service saide before my lo: and me, and to come upp som what before the yomen; and after service he and reste of the gentlemen to remaine in the dyninge chamber and not to go downe with the yomen, which is moste disorderly; for as the hall is a fyfte place for the yomen so is the dyninge chamber most conveniente for the gentlemen to make theyer moste abode in.

For wearing theyer livery Cotes for a time. Further when any straingeres be here, though but one in number, if thaye be of that calinge that they do come into the dynenge chamber, then my pleasure is that the gentleman usher and all the reste of gentlemen shall presently put on theyer livery cotes for the firste nighte and all the nexte day folowinge, unless it be sunday or holiday, then to put on theyer cokes but the nexte day that it is a working day to were theyer livery cotes then after howe longe so ever any straingeres do tarye, unless newe straingeres do come before the olde be gone, then agayne to were theyer livery cotes the firste and the nexte day after theyr cominge, and all the time after they may with my likinge were theyer cokes, so the former appointed times be observed; and from hensforth neither my gentleman usher nor the reste of my gentlemen to depard either with their winter liveryes or theyr sumer liveryes till newe cotes be geven them; and I do further appoynt that neither my gentlemen usher nor anye other other of my gentlemen shall, at anye time when my lo: or I ride abroade durenge the time of our benge in jorneye, were anye other upper garment either cloke or other wiese, but only his livery cote; and when there liveries be firste given, though no straingers be here, yet to were them two dayes together unless it happen to be one holy day or sunday, at what time they do weare theyer livery cotes to keape them on all day with out usenge to were any other garment for that time.

Not to come in to the dining chamber with cotes or cokes. Further my pleasure is that neither my gentleman usher nor any other of my gentlemen shall come into the dyninge chambers nor sitt at play with my lo: and me in his girken or doublett, but either in his livery cote or in his cloke; and I do licence from hensforth the gentleman usher and the residewe of my gentlemen thoughte no strainger be here to come in to the dyninge chamber at any time whene my lord and I am at play there at any kinde of game.

To atende in the grete chamber. And when straingeres be here, then my pleasure is that they both after dynner and supper and at all other times, bothe the gentlemen usher and the reste of my gentlemen, shall kepe moste in the dyninge chamber to make showe of themselves both for the honor of my lo: and me and to be redie to do such other service as shall be comanded then.

My lo: walk- inge abroad. Further when I shall walk any way out of the parke, as into the fyldes, as more or any of my out warde groundes, then would I have the gentleman usher and the reste of my gentlemen be in a redynes to wayte upon me.

In the parke. Further when I do walke in the parke then I do licence the gentlemen either to walke, bowle, shoote, or use anye other pastime or a . . . where I walke in this order If do walke in the hye walke then they may be in the lower walke; if I do walke in the lower walke then they may be in the uper walke. I do not set downe this as an expresse comaundment that I would have them be there only; I do licence them to be there or to be absente as they shall thinke good.

Licence to com in to the garden. And at any time when I am in the great garden my selfe, I do for the time of my beinge there, as well when no straingers be here as when anye be here, licence the gentleman usher and the reste of my gentlemen to com into the garden and there either to bowle or remayne there as longe time or as shorte as they will, or to com in or not to com in they are disposed; for I do not sette this downe as an expresse comandmente I would have them to be there at such times as I walke there, but rather do geve them leave with out my mislike to come in wher they will duringe the time of myne abode there or to be absente as they shall thinke good.

Diligent attendance diner and supper. And duringe the time my lo: and I am at dyner and supper and do sitte a brode, my pleasure is that the gentleman usher and the reste of my gentlemen shall with due reverence and grete diligence wholly geve theyr attendance to wayte upon us, and non for those times to go to reste themselves in other places or to be absente, but to wayte diligently and not to go to any bye places to eate mete in corneres, nor to take or geve away anye mete but by the gentlemen usher's soffreance and licence, but to geve good attendance till they go all together to take our revercion, and therein All to behave themselves cively like gentlemen without makeinge anye grete noise or usinge anye other unseviell orders, to use no playenge fence nor disorderly pastimes in the hall, which causeth great disorder and geves cause of offence by the grete noise that comes by that meanes.

Not to breake dayes having leave to go forth. At what time that either the gentleman usher or any other of my gentlemen craves leave either to see their frendes or to dispatch erneste busines, none of them in any wise but uppone grete occasion and apparaunte cause to breake the day appointed of theyr returne, and besides not to go unles they do obtaine leave of myselfe.

For grete play Further my pleasure is that neither the gentleman usher nor none of the reste of my gentlemen shall use grete play neither at dice, tables, nor cardes; for excese of gameninge ympoverisheth your estate and causeth maney disorderes and contencions to be amongst fellowes; but in stede of this games to exercise yourselves in all manner of activity, as bowlinge, and chiefflye exercise of your longe bowe where in I take grete delighthe.

Intertaininge of straingers. The gentleman usher to see all straingers well entertayned for my lo: honor and myne; every man accordinge to his callinge likinge and estimacion that is to be made of him; to see those that are of creadite to be dulye served with livery; none to have anye in my house under the degree of an esquier (1688) Dec. 17 . . . Dongan to Col. Fitzpatrick, Park Place, St. James' Street. He was going for Ireland, disguised as was necessary, otherwise he should be stopped both by parties of the Prince and their own. He left London the night the King did, and came through to Wales near Denbigh, when the country unfortunately was up for fear of a party of the King's army, which they said was making their way to Ireland. He was recognised by Sir Richard Middleton and sent to Chester Castle. He desires Fitzpatrick to solicit a passe to go to Ireland, or to be sent on to London decently out of hand.

BERKELEY CASTLE.

1642, Sept. 23. A paper expressing the desire of Lord Berkeley's tenants of the county of Gloucester, that they may have his leave to man and guard Berkeley Castle and the parks there, for his Lordships use and benefit, and their own safety, against all violence that should be offered; they promising to obey the commands of him or his deputy. Mr. William Thorpe, Mr. Thomas Smythe, and four others are named, each of whom was to have the command of six others then chosen and agreed upon, and those six were to take their directions from one of the first named persons.—Regulations for absence of any.—In case any on watch are distressed, then on ringing of the Castle bell, the country have promised to come to the defence.—Signed by John Smyth and eight others. (1 p.) On the other leaf of the sheet are the names of the six, and of the six others who are to be under each.

1642, Feb. 11, at 6 o'clock in the night. Articles for surrender of Berkeley Castle by John Smyth, Esq., to Lieut.-Col. Arthur Forbes, in the name of the King and Parliament.—All goods belonging to Lord Berkeley were to remain there without pillage. The arms to remain for the use of Lord Berkeley and the county. Goods of any person in the Castle who has assisted the King and Parliament, to be on requiry delivered to him. Will. Wright, the usual servant of Lord Berkeley, to remain to look after the goods of Lord Berkeley. All soldiers and gentlemen in the Castle may march out without harm. "All which the said Lieut.-Col. Forbes doth promise on his part faithfully to perform, as he is a souldier and a gentleman." Signed by Ar. Forbes and John Smyth. (1 p.)

1642, Feb. 11. Fair copy of the above as altered, also signed by Forbes and Smyth.

1646, Aug. 26. Thomas Morgan to Capt. Mathews. Tells him to issue warrants to the chief constable of the hundred of Berkeley to summon a sufficient number of men to meet at Berkeley, to demolish the works about the Castle, the gates, and some part of the walls, that an enemy may not on a sudden take any advantage thereby; according to the ordinance of Parliament. (Copy.)

1646, Sept. 9. Order of the Committee by ordinance of Parliament for Gloucester, Hereford, &c. to Capt. Richard Mathews and Capt. James Bailey.—As by order from Parliament, the garrison of Berkeley Castle is to be taken off, and the works about the Castle to be slighted and demolished, they are required to summon sufficient men within six miles of the Castle, to repair thereto with spades pickaxes, &c. to work in demolishing the works and walls in part about the castle. The guns, ammunition, and drawbridge are to be taken to Gloucester. Signed by Sil. Wood, Jo. Fettiplace, Jo. Seymour, and six others. (Copy.)

1646, Sept. 17. John Smyth to Sir John Seymour. Says that report has cast him under the censure of Sir John and the Committee at Tetbury for opposing the slighting of Berkeley Castle; a thing contrary to truth; he refers them to Mr. Richard Stephens and Mr. Fowler: "with this request, not to suffer for decency, a peere to see that damage in his castle under pretence of servis, the like not don to any other, no not a delinquent, which is wholly contrary to the members of parliament of this county's undertaking with my "Lord Berkeley." (Draft by John Smyth.)

Draft or epitome (in Smyth's writing) of a warrant (by virtue of an order of an order of Parliament) to Col. Berrowe to make search for goods taken from, and to cease from further spoil of the castle, and to bring back the goods, and to enforce obedience to the order.

1646, Oct. 22. Joseph Hatch to Col. Berrow, at Berkeley. . . . For discovery of the goods of Lord Berkeley. He never to his best remembrance had or hath or knows where is any of the said goods; for they were all left (for his part) with Major White, and what he did with them he (Hatch) does not know.

n.d. Deposition of John Hathorne (or Fathorne).—That being by order from Col. Berrow summoned to appear before him at Berkeley this 23d of October, concerning the goods of Lord Berkeley sold out of the Castle and conveyed away, says it was done before he came there or had any command there; but after he came the gentry came, by virtue of the order of the Committee for Gloucester, to slight the castle, and committed abuses, and he, being summoned at Gloucester for the soldiers pay, was not able to preserve the said castle, &c.

1646, Oct. 23, Berkeley. Letter by Robert Stevenson to Major William White, Capt. George Raimand, Capt. Joseph Hacke, Capt. Robert Stevenson, Capt. William Brotherton, Capt. John Davies, Capt. Henry Pegler, L. Godfrey Elles, L. Gey. Silcookes, and Chap. (sic) John Hollford. As for my part at the taking of Berkeley Castle where I commanded in chief, Col. Ransbrowe and Col. Morgan having given to the soldiers the free bowte of what was in the Castle, I had a share in bringe of the goods to satisfie the soldiers 5s. a pece, which goods was the Ennemies. As for the defacing of the Castle or any of my Lord's household rooms, I left all safe as I found them with Major White, who commanded when I was commanded to Monmouth by my Colonel, Thomas Morgan, &c.

Notes of names of a number of captains, colonels, and other persons, of whom certain specified enquiries are to be made regarding the goods taken from the Castle. (1 p.)

he had received several orders from Sir Thomas Fairfax to march towards the West, and he thought that the plundering and the consequences would delay his march, and feared that his soldiers and the Gloucester forces might quarrel about the division of the plunder. The men were at last induced to accept 5s. each in lieu of plunder. Thereupon, Halford returned to Mr. Margett's house in Berkeley, and in lieu of 545l. deposited to satisfy his brigade and Col. Morgan's soldiers, he sealed and delivered a bill of sale of all the moveables in the Castle to Major William White, Capt. Robert Stephenson, Capt. George Raimond, and Capt. Joseph Hatch, who took in others, viz., Capt. William Brotherton, Capt. Jo. Davis, Capt. Henry Pegler, Lieut. Godfrey Ellis, Lieut. Guy Silcox, and Halford, as sharers with them in the sale of the said moveables, to make unto them satisfaction for several sums of money which they had laid down to make up the sum aforesaid. Halford took some old goods which he believes to belong to Lord Berkeley, towards repayment of a great part of the sum (20l.) lent by him, and of which he is ready to give an account. Denies that the Castle was defaced by any of the gentlemen above named, or that anything mentioned in the order of the House of Peers was embezzled or taken away by any of them.—At the foot is a declaration testifying the truth of Halford's declaration, and signed by Henry Pegler, John Davis (his mark), and Godfrey Ellis. (3 pp.)

1646, Oct. 23. Deposition by Henry Knowles, brazier, of Gloucester, that for any part he bought of Lieut. Ellis, a citizen of Gloucester, bought in the open market of Gloucester brass of him, that came to 5l., where the Lieut. had it he cannot tell.

1646, Oct. 24. Draft (by Smyth) of a letter saying that in obedience to their Lordships' order of the 2d of October instant, the writer had been to Berkeley Castle and found that the spoil and destruction mentioned in Lord Berkeley's petition was true in a high measure.—Further particulars.—The evidence house broken open and near 700 material pieces of evidence taken thence, some hundreds more cast into the dirt and wet, many of the ancient charters torn and their seals broken for benefit of the silk strings to which the seals were fastened, and the rest being many thousands confusedly cast together for gain of the bags and boxes wherein they were placed, in contempt of their Lordships' order for their preservation.

1673, June 30, Bruxelles. The Earl of Castlehaven to the Duke of Ormond. (Enclosed is a news letter in French, dated Liege, 28 June 1673, giving news from the seat of war and of the King of France's doings.) He says all accounts agree with the letter, only the King's loss was in the Sunday attack more than the letter says, when Sir Larie Johns was killed Thinks that Maestricht will soon be the King's, for when the outworks are gone the body of the place is of no strength, &c., &c.

1673, July 4, Bruxelles. The same to the same. Acknowledges the Duke's letter of the 19th, Maestricht being over, we here know not where the King will pitch next. 6,000 of his men are towards Breda, yet we fear here as those in Holland. For the Duke of York, I never was much in his favour, nor ever understood his ways; but I suspected no good issue, knowing some of his counsellors. What his meaning is in this last action of quitting, the world will make many judgments, but I can think of none to his advantage, or to the end that people say he would be at: the wiser sort of my religion in England never liked the declaration nor the carrying it on, and so I believe may as little approve this action of the Duke and my Lord Treasurer. I hear that you are advanced from the gallery to the cabinet I am an unlucky man; for many years I have been persecuted for having been of your party, and now I am as bad here for justifying the King in many things untruly said of him, and by it I have made myself so uneasy with this governor that I am thinking to quit this service for his sake only; my judgment being still, as ever you knew it, for a good understanding between England and Spain, and in the interest of the King to maintain this country in the Spaniards hands, which will necessarily fall shortly to the French, if the King have not a care in time. I have all the reason in world to quit, for no gentleman hath ever been so unworthily used as I have been by this proud ignorant governor, who really is by his folly likely to be the loss of this country in having given so much reason of offense to the two Kings. You would do me a favour truly to let me know the King's and your own sense on this matter, that if I quit, I may write to Spain for my discharge; for I being a general must have it from the Queen.

A packet of letters relating to the Earl of Derby while abroad in 1673, 1674, and 1675. The Earl was a minor under the guardianship of his grandfather, the Duke of Ormonde, and a gentleman named James Forbes was, by appointment from the Duke, in attendance on the Earl as his governor. Forbes from time to time wrote to the Duke. His first letter is dated Paris, 2 Sept. 1673, in which, after giving foreign news, he hints at the great expenditure of money by the Earl, as do also his letters of the 9th and 20th of Sept. In a letter of the 11th of Oct. he alludes to Madame de Brinvilliers and her poisonings. The Duchess of Ormonde was also in correspondence with Mr. Forbes; for on the same 11th of October he wrote to her a letter, in which he states how he impressed on the Earl the necessity of not consorting with his own countrymen if he was to learn the French language; and mentions a quarrel which the Earl had had with a servant. On the 18th October Forbes wrote to the Duke that he had taken the Earl to see the French King at Versailles, where he had just returned. They saw the King in his caleche, with a mistress on each side of him; he seemed much altered and very chagrined and out of humour. He says that Lord Derby begins to ply his exercises and language more than he did at first. Forbes' letter of the 22nd Oct. to the Duke is filled with foreign news. The Earl took offence at Forbes's remonstrances against his course of life; for on the 25th October Matthew Portley, servant to the Earl, wrote from Paris to Mr. Knollys, that in consequence of Forbes not countenancing the Earl's companions, they had plotted against his life, and that though he had escaped death for the present, he was dangerously wounded in three places by one Merret, who with his boy had assaulted Forbes. He adds that Merret and his boy were in prison; that the Earl would not allow him (Portley) money to carry him home, and threatened him with death if he went near Forbes. The Earl got Forbes committed to prison, and on the 13th of Nov. Bi. Mulys wrote a long letter to the Duke on the matter, and the differences between the Earl and Forbes, and sends a copy (inclosed) of the Interrogatories to and Answers of Forbes made and taken by Claude Lefebvre conseiller du Roy, bailli, juge ordinaire civil et criminel du baillage de St. Germain des Pres pour messieurs les Religieux prieurs et couvent de Labbaye du dict lieu. On the 12th of November the Earl wrote to the Duke, complaining violently of Forbes's rude behaviour, and saying he could bear him no longer; and on the 18th of November wrote another letter, saying he had been obliged to tell him to quit the room. On the same day Forbes wrote to the Duke his account of the affair. He says that a person named Merret, son of a physician in London, had made the Earl's acquaintance, and had led him into dissolute behaviour.—It seems that the Earl's fondness for Merret had induced strong remonstrance from Forbes, and hence the quarrel with the Earl and the assault by Merret. Many letters passed between the Duke and Forbes and the Earl, and the Dowager Countess of Derby wrote to the Duke, expressing her regret for her son's treatment of Mr. Forbes. Mr. Mulys writes long letters to the Duke. Forbes was discharged at once, the judge evidently perceiving the absurdity of the accusations brought against him by the Earl. Merret was condemned to nine years banishment, charges, damages, and a fine to the poor. The Earl was very indignant, and after more than one application succeeded in getting the King's order for his release. On the 18th of December the Duke writes that he has recalled Mulys. Afterwards Mr. Stanley and Captain (afterwards Major) Thomas Fairfax were in attendance on the Earl, and there are letters from Fairfax to the Duke in August 1674, dated from Lyons, to Sir Nicholas Armorer in September from Lyons, to the Earl of Arran in January 1674 dated from Rome, and to the Duke in February of the same year and June the following year dated from Paris. A copy of the Duke's letter to the Earl and of one to Major Fairfax, both dated in June 1675, seem to intimate that the Earl would come to England in the following year.

Printed case of the Earl of Derby, as it did appear before the Lords, for the manors of Hawardin, Hope and Mould, in the co. of Flint, purchased by Sir John Trevor, Col. Twisleton, Capt. Ellis, and Serjt. Glinne.

Copy of protest of several Lords against the Bill to restoring the manors to the Earl.

1662. Copy of part of a speech or letter by the King, saying that he did not pass the Bill, but that it was not from want of affection to that noble family. He doubted not to make a better end for the Earl than he would attain if the Bill had passed.

A packet of letters and papers relating to the Earl of Derby's possessions under the guardianship of the Duke of Ormonde, 1673-5. These include letters from Henry, (Bridgman) Bishop of Soder and Man, Sir Peter Brooke, Robert Ropert, the Earl of Derby, the Duke of Ormonde, Henry Nowell (Governor of the Isle of Man), William Bankes, and the Bishop of Chester.—These are about the Isle of Man and the Estate at Knowsley. Some are addressed to Henry Gascoigne, the Duke's Secretary.

THE EARL OF STRAFFORD'S LETTERS.

1673, May 28, Wentworth Woodhouse.—The Earl of Strafford to the Duke of Ormonde.—Is glad to hear from the Duke that his treaty with the Earl of Derby is brought to a satisfactory conclusion. Hopes to hear of the marriage soon. Asks him to persuade his (Strafford's) nephew Derby to go to France before September.

1673, Aug. 25. Copy of Ormonde's letter to the Earl of Arlington.—About Lord Strafford's pecuniary difficulties. Suggests that Arlington should get Strafford's pension paid.

Part of a letter by Strafford to the Duke of Ormonde, saying that Mr. Verigny waited at Lord Derby's table, and saying that it was customary abroad for gentlemen to sit at table, and bespeaking his interest for Verigny.

1673, Sept. 6, Wentworth Woodhouse. The Earl of Strafford to the Duke of Ormonde.—About Lady Athol's Portion. Thanks for favour to Verigny.

1673, Sept. 20. The same to the same. Recommends Mr. Chantrell (not a year and a half these seven years out of the Earl's House), a Westminster Scholar and B.A. of Cambridge, and asks that the Duke will speak well of him to the Bishop of Man (Sir Orlando Bridgeman's brother).

There are seven more letters from the Earl to the Duke, and two from his Countess to the Duchess, and three letters by the Duke in reply in the years 1673 and 1674. They relate chiefly to the Earl's difficulties, and the behaviour of the Earl of Derby. The last letter is from the Earl of Strafford, asking the Duke's aid for Mr. James Greenhalgh to have the next good living in the Earl of Derby's disposal.

1688, Dec. 19, Chester Castle. The Earl of Derby to the Duke of Ormonde.—Sends inclosed the desire of the gentlemen who were officers in that garrison to have laid down their arms on sight of the King's letter to Lord Feversham. . . . He continues their restraint, being all Roman Catholics, until he receives directions. Their case is hard; he does not hear of any in their circumstances being detained. Has written to Lord Churchill much to the same purpose. Asks favour for Sir Edward Byron, who has just come in.

1688, Dec. 19, Chester Castle. Earl of Derby to the Duke of Ormonde.—Asks the Duke that the Prince of Orange may have a true account of what he has done. Mr. Egerton and Captain Oldfield have gone up for his (the Earl's) sake, to inform about the state of the country. Condoles with the Duke on his late loss.

1688, Dec. 27, Dublin. Charles Thompson to Mr. Henry Gascoigne, Secretary to the Duke of Ormonde:—On the news from England that the Duke, his Lord and Master, was coming with an army for Ireland. His and his friend's disappointment, they having made preparations to pay their duty to the Duke.

1684, Feb. 7, Thursday. Extract from the Commons Journal, containing form of oath of fidelity to King William and Queen Mary.

A portfolio containing seventeenth century copies of Records, extracts from old deeds, law cases, and pedigrees. With them are 10 folio leaves of Readings, one in Furnivall's Inn, eight of the leaves are occupied with a reading by Lowe (the reader), Aug. 2, 1612, on the Statute of Simony, 31 Eliz. c. 6. These readings are in Law French. There are also copies of the following wills:—

1624, Dec. 31. Will of Sir Roger Newinson, of Eastry, in the county of Kent; and a codicil dated 9th March 1624 (1625), and another codicil dated 6th July 1625. (5½ brief sides.)

1632, Sept. 22. Will of Thomas Warren, of Barton-on-the-Heath, in the county of Warwick, gent. (1 p.)

1646, Feb. 11. Will of William Hopton, the elder, of the parish of Berkeley and county of Gloucester. (1½ brief sides closely written.) Although said to be only a copy, it is signed by William Hopton, and his seal (a branch of hops issuing from a tun, being a rebus on his name), is at the top of the first page.

1680, January 24. Will of Moore Fortune, of North Nibley, in the county of Gloucester, clerk.

A packet of papers in the matter of a suit regarding the School at Wootton under Edge, founded by the Countess of Warwick. There are a few paper Court Rolls, temp. Henry IV. and Queen Mary, and various petitions and papers in the suit temp. James I.

Church Rates and Poor Rates of Nibley.

A small packet of papers of the years 1601, 1602, 1603, 1614, 1619, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1636, and 1660.

15 Car. 1. Copy agreement between the churchwardens of Nibley and Henry Neale, of Somerford Cames, county Wilts, bell founder, for making five bells for Nibley Church; musical bells as deep in note as those of Slimbridge or Dursley, or half a note deeper; two to be new cast, and the other three in Nibley steeple to be chipped out, so that all five be brought to be musical.

1639. Rate for the new bells and frames for the old, and a screen in the chancel and other church work. (4 pp.)

1642. Names of payers to the poor in the parish of Slimbridge. (3 pp.)

A packet of Informations and Depositions taken before John Smith, as Justice of the Peace, temp. Charles II. The J. P. business papers range from 1618 to 1663.

Printed copy of the Letters Patent (22 James I.) to Benedict Webb, for making oil from rape seed; copy of a Bill in Chancery by Webb against Richard Warner and others in 1626; and letters by Webb and other papers in the matter, and a paper (brief size, closely written) by Webb containing "A narration of "my employments sithence I came to discretion."

TOBACCO.

1635, Feb. 19, Whitehall. John Coke (secretary), to Mr. Gerbier. (Copy). That tobacco is no victual, hath appeared by the declaration made by Divines, civilians, and physicians on that side, and now his Majesty for his own satisfaction hath required the opinion of our best learned here in the sea laws, who have under their hands confidently averred that to judge tobacco victual is consonant to no law by which treaties of princes ought to be expounded. It must therefore be concluded that the admiralities of Dunkirk and Bruxelles have pronounced against law. . . . Gerbier is to declare to the Infanta and his Council of State, that if His Majesty now shall give leave to reprisal the fault is not his, but the injustice is on their side . . .

With this are,—A long opinion by the College of Louvain, under their seal, and under the hands of the President and four other members;

A short opinion under the hands of six Brussels physicians, agreeing with their brethren of Louvain;

Long separate opinions of two Paris physicians, an opinion by the King of France's physician in ordinary;

An opinion of four physicians of Douay, and separate opinions by two Jesuits at Brussels;—that tobacco is not an aliment.

And lastly, an opinion signed by Matthew Kellison, S.T. doctor and president of the English College at Douay, and Ed. Stratford, S.T., doctor and professor, and William Hyde, S.T., professor; that, although they considered that a priest could not celebrate after taking tobacco, yet they did not dissent from the doctors and professors of medicine, who said that there was no aliment taken in the smoke.

The opinions are in Latin.

A packet of papers about Hearth money in the county of Gloucester, temp. Charles II., including a printed proclamation in 1666, and an original council letter in 1671.

LETTERS FROM LITERATI TO MR. COWPER.

Pope's Elegy to an unfortunate lady was translated into Latin hexameters by Mr. Cowper. He sent a copy to Pope, who acknowledged it by the following letter. The ends of the first seven lines of the original letter are lost, but a copy of the entire letter made about the beginning of this century, supplies the missing words.

use you with the just[ice and the free]dom, which is due to both: and at the sa[me time that] I congratulate you upon the Revival of your Taste for the Ancient Authors, exhort you not to cultivate them negligently, but by frequent Imitations of them. No Pleasures so well suit with Exercise as those of the Imagination, which can be pursued even in the Field, and when your Dogs are at fault, can fill up the Intervall; none better suit with a Country Life than those of Poetry. Your choice indeed of my writings is what I cannot approve as the best, but if mine lead you [to better] they will have some merit, and I shall thank [you for thin]king so. When you write better (as you cer[tainly will if] you proceed) you will find Authors among y^e [Moderns more] worthy of your pains; but in the mean[time to] giv[e] you, Sir, a proof that what you have done [pleases me]. I sh^d not be sorry if you tryed y^r hand upon [Eloisa to Abellard, since it has more of that Descriptive and (if I may so say) Enthusiastic Spirit, wh^{ch} is the Character of the Ancient Poets, and will give you more occasions of imitating them. Your most obd^t humble servant,

(A copy of the Latin translation of the Elegy is with this letter).

1745, Dec. 7, Coventry. (General) Will. Douglas to Dr. William Cooper (Cowper) at Chester.—After compliments in allusion to his stay with the Doctor at Chester, he praises Cowper's Elegy on his friend Heskett, but hints its too great length; praises unreservedly Cowper's Epitaf (sic) on his own tenant, but thinks his version of Moliere's epitaf (sic) rather falls short of his other translations. "I am afraid Bendish made you exceed in the Bottle, and damp'd your Poetical fire. I suppose your Ladies are now easy, and no more apprehension of a visit from the bare a—d hero's of the North; they wander about so, that I'm afraid we shall have a wild goose chase with them."

1745, Feb. 1, London. The same to the same.—He acknowledges receipt of Cowper's second attempt on Moliere's epitaph, and his fine version of part of Pope's Messiah.—He has made a fair and just representation to the Prince and the Duke of the good disposition his [Cowper's] city [Chester] was in.—Alludes in complimentary terms to Cowper's friend, Sir Robert; says he has "stood by him at Court when the King took the greatest notice of him, and talked very graciously and familiarly to him, your city mostly the subject." Thinks his second attempt on the Epitaph is better than the first; acknowledges the difficulties mentioned, particularly from the jeu de mots, which cannot easily be turned from one language to another. Says that he (Douglas) gave it knowing it would be a sort of trial. Thinks his version of the Messiah excels, if possible, the original in nobleness and sublimity of the phrase and expression.

1749, Dec. 10, Dublin. (Earl of) Orrery to William Cowper, Esq., at Chester.—Thanks for the exact account sent of Lord C.'s unfortunate affair. . . . "Lucas has withdrawn his person, and has left his spirit among us. He does his business like Belzebub, who walks no more to and fro upon the earth, but sends his influence from the regions of Hell. He is in your neighbourhood at Liverpool." . . . "We have two new actors just come upon the stage that are like to make considerable figures. The name of one is Diggs, the son of Col. Diggs, and nephew of Lord Delawarr. The other is an Hibernian, his name is Mossup, the son of a clergyman. They promise wonders or Garricksisms."

1752, Dec. 2, and 1754, Jan. 2, Marston House. The same to the same.

1755, Oct. 2, Edinburgh. David Hume to Dr. Cowper.—Sir, I acknowledge myself to be very much oblig'd to you for the Information which you have had the Goodness to convey to me. The Proofs, which you give me, convince me of my Mistake, when I asserted that the King was at Shrewsbury when he received Intelligence of the Action at Powick Bridge near Worcester. The King had march'd along with the Army from Nottingham to Shrewsbury, where the Army then lay: No Historian had mentioned his leaving the Army to go to Chester. This had led me into the Mistake, which I shall take care to correct by the first opportunity.

I am likewise sensible of the other Mistakes, which you take notice of. I doubt not but many more would occur to you in reading my History, and those more material; I always esteem myself much oblig'd to any one, that inform me of my Errors; and so far am not unworthy of the Favor you have conferr'd on me Farther Favors of the same kind shall always be gratefully acknowledg'd.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient and most humble Servant,
DAVID HUME.

1761, July 16, London. Sir Eardley Wilmot to Dr. Cowper, at Overlegh, near Chester.—Says that he has examined the poem which Cowper sent, and thinks there is as much merit in the performance as the nature of the subject would admit. (An indorsement says that the poem was Il penseroso.)

1745, Feb. 4, March 8, and 1746, March 26, Woodston, near Peterborough. Robert Smyth (rector of Woodston) to (Dr. Cowper). Three letters about a proposed list by himself of the sheriffs of all the counties in England and Wales, and about pedigree matters.

1749, Feb. 14, York. F. Drake to Dr. Cowper. Archaeological.

1750, July 13, Glodeth. Thomas Mostyn to Dr. Cowper.—Will lend him the Annals of the Abbey of Chester as soon as he gets to Mostyn. Recommends a work in progress, entitled "Originals," by the Rev. Mr. Holloway, Parson of Middleton Stoney, in Oxfordshire.

1752, Nov. 17, Salop. G. Edwards to Dr. Cowper. Sends copies of two Latin inscriptions lately found at Wroxeter, once a Roman station by the name of Uriconium; both fair and legible; one 6 feet high and 2 feet broad; the other about 2½ square.

1756, Feb. 27, Codicote. G. North (F.A.S.) to Dr. Cowper, at Bath.—Thanks for specimens of coins found in digging in the foundations of a Priory and sent by Mr. Wood. . . . Has received from Lord Willoughby news that the King of Naples has discovered the ruins of the city of Pompeii. The letter of Camillo Paderni just received from Naples by the Royal Society is being translated.

1757, Dec. 15, Chester. Letter from Dr. William Cowper to [Godolphin Edwards], asking for loan of any Collections he may have relating to Chester and the neighbourhood in the Civil War, commencing 1642.—(A note on the back says that no MS. belonging to Godolphin Edwards, of Shrewsbury, was to be found in the study of the late Dr. Cowper; though in Oct. 1769 Mr. Edwards, by Mr. Latham, said he lent one pursuant to the within request.)

1766, Jan. 11, Chancery Lane. William Norris to Dr. Cowper.—Sends a list of the names and dates of elections of members of the Society of Antiquaries preceding Dr. Cowper. Mentions the Society having presented a copy of their works to the King, who had made inquiries what they were doing.

1765, June 8, London. William Norris to Dr. W. Cowper. Thanks for "your very elegant poetical Epistle to your nephew."

1767, Sept. 15, British Museum. W. Maty to the Rev. W. Norris, consenting to let Dr. Cowper have a facsimile of Hugh Lupus's sword.

(1767, latter end of Sept.) Dr. William Smith, Dean of Chester, to Dr. Cowper.—Suggesting and giving (in reply) a form of inscription for an image of a little Bacchus, digged up at Chester.

1767, Oct. 4, Trevellyn. Thomas Boydell to Dr. Cowper.—His brother has given up engraving, but will get engraved for Dr. Cowper a drawing of the East Gate of Chester.

1767, May 5, Bow Street, and May 23, London. Sir John Fielding to William Cowper, Esq., at Overlegh.—About Mr. Pleasant, charged with forgery, who had been taken, and the parties injured refused to pay the twenty guineas offered for their capture. Advising a good watch to be kept at Parkgate, which was a favourite post for felons to escape to Ireland. (Both signed by Sir John Fielding when blind.)

(1742) March 10, Bond Street. Copy of a letter by Thomas Hervey to Sir William Bunbury.—A challenge to give him satisfaction (by duel), and do justice to the child of Lady Hanmer. (1½ pp. foolscap. It was printed in 1742.)

Three letters from Edward Hinton, at Westminster, to his cousin, the Rev. John Cooper, at Chester. In one, dated May 14 (no year), he mentions the case at Westminster of David Jones, a student of Christ Church, Oxford, who had been expelled from the University by the Vice-Chancellor. Jones obtained his discharge from the Castle by reason of an informality in the V.-C.'s warrant, but Treby, C. J., would not hear Jones when he wanted to apply for a Mandamus to make the V.-C. take off the expulsion, and another to make the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church continue him a student there. He says that Dryden was buried by the Bishop of Rochester at the Abbey on Monday; that the Kit Cat Club were at the charge of his funeral, which was not great, and that Mr. Montague had engaged to build him a fine monument. Dr. Garth made a Latin speech, and threw away some words and a great deal of false Latin in praise of the poet.

In another, dated June 6 (no year), he says that there is going to be a 2nd edition of the book against Dr. Wake, with some additions and alterations. The author of this book is certainly Mr. Atterbury. The Dr. is preparing an answer to it, and Kennet and Tanner are to furnish him with materials.

LORD GEORGE SACKVILLE.

1760, March 18, 20, 21, 25, 26, 29, and April 3.—Seven letters from Thomas Cowper, junior, to William Cowper, Esq., giving accounts of the proceedings and evidence in the Court Martial on Lord George Sackville. In the letter of April 3 (when Lord George ended his defence) he much praises the eloquent speech of the defendant.

A portfolio of papers, two of which relate to the Assessment of John Smyth to ship money, and the others relate to his composition for delinquency, 1643-1655.—Also copies of Assessments to Poll monies.

ASSESSMENTS TO POLL MONEY AND AIDS.

1650, North Nibley. A Rate for the collecting of the Poll money granted by Act of Parliament assessed by us whose names are subscribed, 24th of Sept. 1660.—Seven columns of names with the amount rated on each.

1666. Return of an Assessment for Ashleworth. Some letters and papers regarding Assessments in the years 1661, 1664, &c.

1673, May. Berkeley Hundred and Thornbury Hundred.—Eleven returns of Assessments in various parishes, according to the Act of Parliament for supply of His Majesty's extraordinary occasions. The names of those assessed and the charge on each are given.

1689. Seven returns of a rate and Assessments made pursuant to Acts of Parliament for granting a present aid, For supply of their Majesty's necessary occasions, For reducing Ireland, and For defence of the realm.

Remembrances, 1609, 1639, one in 1662, and some undated. Riot at Slimbridge in 1609; for visits to and law business at London. One in Novr. 1636 is indorsed, "When I intended to have sent Wm. Archer to London when the plague raged, but went not till 1 Feb. after."

Receipts and expenses.

A 4to book containing receipts and expenses, 1601-1618.

A number of separate sheets of the like, 1602-1640; and a few undated.

A duodecimo-sized volume containing 141 leaves, on which John Smyth, of Nibley, M.P. for Midhurst, has written his notes of proceedings in the House of Commons, from 30 Jan. 1624 to 19th Dec. 1621.

An unbound quire of 16 leaves (12^o size), containing "Apte & fit similes taken out of learned men's sermons in Oxford, 1590, begun the 22nd of April." Of these only 17 pp. are written.

A PORTFOLIO OF FAMILY (SMYTH) LETTERS OF THE 16TH AND 17TH CENTURIES.

The only letters of general interest are those from Wm. Smyth to his father John Smyth at North Nibley. Three of them are dated from Verasheroone, the 24th of Dec. 1658, the 29th of December 1659, and the 12th of January 1660.

In the first, the writer says that the country agrees with him very well, "it being at present not much hotter than with you in the midst of summer; but we are in the autumn, and therefore must expect it hotter. I have given the Company an account of our voyage to Acheene . . . we lost our voyage; the cause was the Dutch have wars with the Queen of Acheene, as well as with many others her neighbouring kings, which they stick not to do, provided they can see but a profit to be made; wherefore they are generally hated. I have sent to my master an account of our voyage from our first setting sail from the Downs until my arriving in this place . . . there you may see how God went along with us; for one of the 3 ships which accompanied us after our departure from him was carried away, but the men saved; the ship's name was the Persia Merchant. I am placed in the healthiest place in all India or the coast of Cormondell. It is an inland town, some 40 English miles from the Metropolitan port and factory, which "is called Metchlupatam. This country is level for 100 miles and more, not one hill to be seen: abundance of wild fowl; the chiefest of our diet all the year long is wild ducks and such like. Mr. Accourt, our chief, and Mr. Seymour, our second, do very well agree, which is the life of our trade . . . Had I a good cloth coat with a large silver lace, which is all the wear here and the badge of an Englishman; and on the contrary, without it and others answerable to it, not esteemed nor regarded. The chiefest thing needful is a good hat . . . I suppose you have heard of the death of Sir Henry Skipworth, who died about a year and a half since, as I am informed, of grief, he having, as is said, lost his estate by a vessel which was cast away: he died about some 7 miles from hence, at one Mr. Winter's house, an Englishman . . . this country is a very cheap place of residence were it not for the state & multiplicity of servants, we strangers are constrained to keep; all men being respected according to his train and habit. We have at present belonging to our Factory near 70 persons, to whom we covenant to pay between 4s. and 5s. sterling per month each, they finding themselves all provisions and necessaries: these servants are allowed when they travel, or are sent abroad on our business, 2d. per diem, which is the rate we give to all day labourers and porters we usually employ to carry burdens 50, 60, or 100 miles outright, which is the usual conveyance we make use of for all sorts of goods . . . all sorts of provisions are extreme cheap; the usual rates of beast is from 5s. to 8s. (he says they can rarely get them because the people believe that their souls go into Calves, Cows, &c.); goats and sheep in great plenty from 6d. to 10d. apiece; hens, 2d.

In the second letter he says that he has written twice since leaving England, the last time by the ship "William and Thomas," which, as the Dutch say, foundered in the sea near the Cape of Good Hope. He says, I find not India to answer to mine and other men's expectations . . . It is as difficult a thing to get a livelihood as in any other country, especially if a man have but a small beginning . . . The last night I received news that I was in mention to go for Acheene in commission with one Mr. Ralph Conyngsby, a very accomplished gentleman, and formerly a student in one of the Inns of Court.

In the 3rd letter it appears that he started for Acheene, but they were driven down to Bay Bengalla, where their ship was cast away and their goods much damaged. In the month of June last Mr. Roger Seymour, second of Verasheroone, was drowned while attempting to pass a river on horseback.

A few years ago, a copy of the Vulgaria Terentii, printed evidently by Roode and Hunte at Oxford, in the 15th century, was sold in London by public auction for a large sum. It was a quarto of 4 quires; the signatures n, o, p, and q, showed that it was part only of a larger volume. In a box of MSS. at Condoover Hall I found a volume in its first binding of oaken boards containing quires f to q of the entire volume. The treatise which precedes the Vulgaria Terentii, is Compendium totius grammaticae ex Laurentio Valla Servio et Perotto. (It was composed by John Anwkyll, who was Master of Magdalen College School, Oxford, about 1482 or 3, and he composed it at Archbishop Warham's request. For this information I am indebted to Mr. Henry Bradshaw, of King's College, Cambridge).

I can not close this report without expressing my obligations to Mr. Cholmondeley, not only for his warm hospitality at Condoover Hall, but also for his allowing me to bring the Kingswood Charters and many of his other papers to London, so that I might examine them fully.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF STANHOPE GROVE, ESQ., COMMANDER, R.N., OF TAYNTON, NEAR GLOUCESTER.

Mr. Grove was pleased to send to London the documents noted below; and he mentioned in his letter to the Secretary that his ancestor, Col. Pury (named in the documents), held high command in Gloucestershire in Cromwell's army: and that the Colonel was the son of the then Member of Parliament for Gloucester, who defended the city against the King, and that he subsequently held a commission in the army of Charles the 2nd. He adds that the histories of Gloucestershire tell of the part undertaken by both father and son in that critical period.

Monck kept up to the last his apparent devotion to the authorities of the Commonwealth: and the letters by him before the Restoration, noted below, give no indication of any leaning to the Royal cause.

1648, Oct. 16, St. Albans.—T. Fayrefaxe to all officers and soldiers under his command.—Mr. Edward Barker has bought of Mr. Benedict Hall several quantities of wood lying in the counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, a great part of which has been taken away by soldiers under pretence of tythe. They are to permit Mr. Barker or his agents to carry it away, and are to oppose all tumults about it. (Copy.)

1655, Dec. 18, Sarum. John Disbrowe to Thomas Pury, junior, Esq., at Gloucester.—The Lord Protector and the Council having issued Orders and Instructions for securing the peace of the Commonwealth whereby Pury and others were appointed to execute the same in the County of the City of Gloucester, the writer in obedience to the Protector's command gives Pury notice to be present at Gloucester on the 26th, at which time and place the writer purposes, through the blessing of God, to give his attendance and communicate the said Orders and Instructions. (Seal of arms.)

1659, July 20, Council of State at Whitehall. Appointment of Thomas Pury the younger, Esquire, to be Captain of a Company of Foot, consisting of 100 soldiers besides officers, of such well affected persons as should voluntarily list themselves under him in the City of Gloucester, for the present defence and security of the said City and the Commonwealth against any the Enemies thereof, &c. Signed in the name and by order of the Council of State appointed by authority of Parliament, H. Jhonston, president. (Written on a sheet of vellum; with wafer seal of the Council of State.)

1660, March 27. "George Monck," Captain General and Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces in England, Scotland, and Ireland, to Colonel Thomas Pury, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Ffrench, Major William Neast, or the officer in Chief present with the said regiment of foot now and for the time being.—A Commission to them or either of them to call a Court Martial consisting of the Commission Officers of the said regiment, as often as need shall require, and there to hear, examine, and determine all offences and misdemeanours committed by officers or soldiers of the regiment against the Laws and Ordinances of War, and to bring them to trial and inflict punishment. The Commission is not to extend to the trial of any officer in Commission or to the inflicting any punishment to the taking away of life or member without notice to an order from Monck. (At the top are the arms of Monck in red wax.)

1660, March 29, St. James's. George Monck to the officer or officers that command the Forces in Herefordshire. Understanding there have been disorders lately committed in Herefordshire, and divers affronts offered by the Cavaliers to the well affected party there, he desires them to assist Major Harley in keeping the peace of the country.

1660, April 1. Jo. Butler, Quartermaster General to Col. Pury. "Collonell Pury is to have Monmouth, Uske, and Abegeveny for Quarters for 3 Companies " of his regiment till further order."

1660, April 11, St. James's. George Monck to Col. Pury or the officer in chief with his regiment at Hereford.—Lord Lambert having escaped out of the Tower last night, Monck tells Pury to be very careful of his duty and not suffer any officers to be away from their charges, and to have an eye that no agitators come among his soldiers to withdraw them from their duty. Pury is to secure any such and send them to the Martial Generals at the Mewes: if any officer or soldier apprehend Lord Lambert he shall have 100l. "I would have you take care that there be still heere a " Commission officer of your regiment. I desire you " alsoe to take."

1660, April 19, Hereford. T. Scudamore, Edward Harley, Ro. J. Lepel, Tho. Blayney, and Ro. Harley to Col. Pury. Being informed of attempts on foot to disturb the peace and safety of the nation, and in particular of that City and County, they desire him draw into the City the Company of Foot of his regiment then quartered at Rosse. As the matter is too pressing to wait for the previous order of the General, they will endeavour to obtain his Excellency's approbation. (The endorsement states that the writers were Commanders of the Militia of Hereford.)

1660, April 20, St. James's. George Monck to Major Robert Harley.—Requires him to preserve the peace of the counties of Hereford, Worcester, and Gloucester, and the parts thereabouts. The officers commanding

Col. Sir Arthur Hesilrige's, Col. Alured's, Col. Pury's regiments, or of the troops and companies belonging to them in these shires or the parts thereabouts which were not commanded by the Lord Howard were to observe such orders as they should receive from Harley. (Stated to be under his hand and seal: but there is no seal.) Below is an autograph note by Robert Harley to Col. Pury, desiring him to execute the contents of the above order and substituting him thereunto.

1660, April 21, Whitehall. The Council of State to the Governor of Hereford.—After noticing that there were distempers and animosities in those parts, they tell him to keep strict guard and to suffer no suspicious persons to pass near his command, nor soldiers without order from the Lord General or their Colonel or other Commander-in-Chief. He is to continue at his charge and not remove upon any private occasions of his own without special leave. If necessary to preserve the peace, he is to call to his assistance the army and militia forces near. They have written to the same tenor to the Governors of Shrewsbury, Cardiff, Chepstow, Worcester, and Gloucester, that they might be mutually helpful. He is to apprehend and secure all stragglers and other suspected persons.—Signed in the name and by order of the Council of State appointed by authority of Parliament. "Arthur Annesley, President." Wafer seal of the Council of State.

1660, April 23. George Monck to Col. Thomas Pury. Refers to the annexed Information against some soldiers of Captain O'Keshott's troop in Col. Alured's regiment. Authorizes Pury from time to time, within six weeks, to call a Court Martial and try to punish the three soldiers. He is also to try any other soldiers who have said or done anything tending to mutiny or sedition, &c. No punishment to extend to life or member without first acquainting Monck therewith, and the grounds and reasons of the judgment. Authorizes him to administer an oath to witnesses. At the top is Monck's seal of arms in red wax.

(Annexed) Information against John Thrift, Peter Curtis, and Thomas Osburne, troopers in Capt. O'Keshott's troop in Col. Alured's regiment.—Thrift had said, at the White Hart at Tewkesbury, that Monck was a rogue, and that they (meaning Lambert and his party) should have a day for it, and that Smyth the bayly of Tewkesbury would have a troop ready for them.—Curtis had said at the sign of the Dog in Tewkesbury, that Monck was a fellow of no principle, and that no good was ever to be expected from him.—Osburne had spoken, at the White Hart, revilingly and dishonourably of Monck, and said that Monck was a Monky face.—Certified by Thomas Margetts, Advocate, to be a true copy of the original remaining with him.

1660, June 11, 12 Car. II. Commission (on vellum) for Thomas Pury the younger to be Colonel of a regiment of foot and Captain of a company of foot in the same regiment. Signed by George Monck. Wafer seal, Monck's shield of four quarters at the top.

1660, Oct. 11, Cockpitt. "Albemarle" to Lord Herbert or the Commander-in-Chief with his regiment at Hereford.—Col. Birch is authorised by the Commissioners appointed for disbanding the Army to take care of the disbanding of Lord Herbert's regiment. Lord H. is to observe Birch's directions on the matter. The King having given a week's pay to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers in each regiment; if Lord H. take up the money in the country and charge it by Bills of Exchange upon Mr. William Clarke, at 15 days sight, it will be answered. (Scaled with the shield of arms of Monck, surrounded by the Garter and its motto, and surmounted by a ducal Crown.)

1660, Oct. 22. The Commissioners for disbanding the army to Col. Thomas Pury, or, in his absence, to the officer in chief of the Lord Herbert's regiment at Hereford or elsewhere.—Order that Lord Herbert's regiment of foot should be disbanded and paid off their arrears on or before the 29th of October instant; the officers and soldiers are to obey the directions in the matter given by persons authorised. The chief officer now at the head of the regiment is to take notice of the order and publish it to the companies.—Signed by Albemarle, Wm. Prynne and Rob. Scawen.

1660, Oct. 27, Cockpitt.—Albemarle to the Officer in chief of the Lord Herbert's regiment. Tells him that Col. Birch one of the Commissioners for disbanding the army has been appointed for the disbanding Lord Herbert's regiment, and desires the chief officer to draw the regiment together and assist Col. Birch.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF EVELYN PHILIP SHIRLEY, Esq., of Ettington Hall, co. Warwick.

This is a miscellaneous collection consisting of more than 150 volumes, and short notices of such of them as seemed within the scope of the Commission are here given. These are,—an account of the unfortunate attempt of Robert Devereux Earl of Essex, to raise the Londoners on his behalf; notes of furniture supplied to him when in the Tower; inventories of his plate, linen, &c., both before and after his death; and a very singular account in Latin, (in form of a dialogue) of his pedigree. Treatises relating to the contentions between Queen Elizabeth and Mary Queen of Scots, (some of which have been printed). Copies of letters by Dr. Laurence Humphry (16th century) on the subject of ecclesiastical vestments; of verses composed by Queen Elizabeth; of letters by Roger Marbecke. Original correspondence of James Stanhope (afterwards Earl Stanhope) with Lord Treasurer Godolphin during the war with Spain, 1705-8. Common-place book and original compositions by Philip second Earl of Chesterfield, and of Philip Dormer third Earl of Chesterfield; among them are the original MSS. of the celebrated Characters, the greater number of which were for the first time printed by the present Earl Stanhope. An account of a great fire at Peasmore co. Berks in 1736; a curious letter in 1754 showing the large sums spent in contests for seats in the House of Commons, and the venality of the Whig electors of the place in question. A Journal by the Honourable Lewis Shirley in 1700-1702 of his voyage to and from China, contains much interesting information. A 17th century volume contains numerous poems by members of the University of Oxford.

The heraldic and genealogical volumes are many. Among them is a very beautiful volume presented to Queen Elizabeth in 1572; three Leicestershire Visitations (one of the 16th century, and two in 1619), and a visitation for Oxfordshire of the 17th century. The rarity and value of Halstead's Genealogies is well known to literary men; vol. 56 of Mr. Shirley's collection contains portions of the original MS. There is Sir Fulwar Skipwith's diary in the middle of the 17th century. There are copies of Commodore Barnett's letter-book and papers, 1743-6; lists of the king's officers in the American colonies in 1764; a register of official letters in the affairs of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance, 1701-1718, a short journal of a journey to the Peak in Derbyshire in 1650, ending (in Johnsonian phraseology) with dissatisfaction with Chatsworth gardens. There are three tracts on Transubstantiation by Bishop Morley, the last of which has not been printed. Richard Symond's diary of the doings of the royal army during the civil war has been printed by the Camden Society; Mr. Shirley has his Common-place book, an entry in which intimates that he made collections for the county of Essex. Three small note books of a member of the House of Commons give notes of proceedings and debates in 1679 and 1680. A 4to. volume of the 17th century contains copies of interesting official documents, and of statutes of the University of Oxford. A 12th century manuscript (of foreign execution) on the office of the Mass seems of an unusual character. Forms of legal pleading on various writs are given in a volume written in the 14th century.

The volume containing copies of Oxford documents gives two notices of a man who did good service to literature and to the University—the industrious printer Joseph Barnes; during his lifetime he was fain to keep a tavern in order to support himself and his family; but he died in very reduced circumstances. The acquaintance of Barnes with Starkey the emblem-painter is perhaps a new fact.

No. 6. A quarto MS. on vellum of 16 folios in the author's own handwriting, with his signature, intitled "Pronostique historial de la felicité de l'an mil cinq cens et "douze" by Jehan le Maire and dedicated by him to Anne de Bretagne (Bretagne), Queen of Louis XII. It is apparently the presentation copy. On the first leaf under a golden star* having in three concentric circles in the centre the word Bona repeated, are these lines,—

Annus esto bonus Anne bone Magne
Duodenus plenus bonus semper annus
Magnus prosper annus condigne regine
Anne Magne, bone annus sit benignus.

(This volume is not printed, and there is no MS. in the Bibliothèque Imperiale. It is probably unique.—Note by the late John Holmes of the British Museum.)

No. 7. In this volume (loose) are the following notes and letters.—Such newes as came to the Bishop of Bangor from London. (The Bishop was Henry Rowlands, elected in 1598, he died on the 6th of July 1616. Sir Robert Williams Bart. from whom this paper came, was descended from a brother of the Bishop.) Sunday Feb. 8th. The Earl was sent for to the Council but would not come. . . . The Lord Keeper and others came to talk with and examine him; he would not answer. He and his friends (about 300) went all to Essex House with their swords and rapiers, not drawn, but with their poynts up, they go to Ludgate, &c.; the Londoners showed themselves favourable to the traitors or too timorous, every one seeking only the defence of his own house. My lord of Sussex, coming upon Sunday at night when all was done, was nevertheless (because he came upon Essex's letters) committed. Heyden, Baynam, and others likewise are committed.

Copy of the Earl of Essex's letter to the Lords of the Council on his departure from Plymouth. Beginns, Having taken order for all things that belong to our land forces. (4 pp.)

1600, Feb. 11th. Warrant by (the Earl of) Nottingham and Ro. Cecyll to Sir Henry Bronker and Mr. Michael Stanhope.—Essex being now a prisoner in the Tower is unfurnished of these things here-under written.

Partridge servant to Mr. Lieutenant:—A table for himself and another for the outward chamber, a carpet for his table, a foot carpet for the floor, two cushions, a pair of silver candlesticks, a chamber pot, a fire shovel and tongs, a pair of bellows, a pan to burn rosewater, bedding for Mr. Warbert and his man; A silver salt and a spoon, two silver pots for wine.

Receipt for the above by Partridge, and for two hangings more.

23rd Feb. Court.—The Earl of Nottingham to his brother Mychael Stanhope. There is some cause to youse (use) the late Earl's Collar and Garter this day at the Tower, therefore I pray you send the Collar and Garter unto me, and after they be used I will see them safely kept and be answerable for them.

1597, Michaelmas. Inventory of all such implements and household stuff as remaineth in several places at Wansted taken at Michaelmas 1597. (6 folios.)

21 b. A treatise touching the right, title, and interest as well of the most excellent Princess Mary, as of the most noble King James, her Grace's son to the succession of the crown of England by John Lislewe (Leslie) Bishop of Ross. 1586.*

A declaration of the table following, &c. (10 lines). Begins, Certain it is and assuredly tried and known to all men.

25 b. A further proof of the said title of succession with a resolution of the objections of the adversaries. Begins, We say then and affirm. Ends, my pen in my hand trembleth to write thereof.

Fol. 48. An exhortation to the English and Scotch nations that after so long warres they would now at last agree and joyne together in one true league of fast freindship and amitie. Begins, If we will remember the manyfold hurts and old calamities. Ends, 53 b. Let us all continually pray to Almighty God the supreme Governor and ruler of the whole world. Amen.

No. 9. Folio volume, 16th century. (This MS. was formerly in the library of the late Mr. Pitts of Kingston, (Dorsetshire.)

6 kal. Nov., Lisbon. Copy of a Latin letter by Osorius Bishop of Lisbon to Roger Ascham.—He say that Thomas Wilson has sent greeting in Ascham's name, and that Ascham was suffering from fever. He came to Lisbon expecting that as soon as some business was done he should return to his diocese, but business presses on him. Letters will reach him at Algarve. Wilson will give Ascham a book in which he (Osorius) praises Walter Haddon.†

Reasons to move the Queen's Majesty's conscience to proceed with severitie in the case of the Queen of Scots. Begins, The word of God which is the only director of conscience and a certain rule for all estates.

3 b. An argument that the Queen's Majesty ought to have in conscience a great care of her own person. Begins, Every prince being the minister of God and a public person. Ends, This poisonous serpent that ceaseth not continually to thrust the sting of his venomous working into Her Majesty's safetie and possession of her crown.

4 b. A letter of Dr. Laurence Humfry concerning adiaphora unto the Bishop. Begins, Your lordship's letters directed to us by our Vice-Chancellor complaining that since old mass attires be so straightly commanded, the mass itself is shortly looked for. A sword is now put into the hand of those that under Queen Mary have drawn it for Popery.—Asks him to speak to the Queen, the Chancellor and Secretary that the proceedings may sleep. (1½ pp.)

5. Idem Episcopis Anglie eadem de Materia. Begins, Et novam et singularem videri potest. (1½ pp.)

R. P. SHIRLEY, Esq.

1575, 16 Id. Julii. Latin letter to the Earl of Leices-ter by the Academy of Oxford.

To Burghley of the same date.

Exhortation of the Gauls besieged in Rochelle to Queen Elizabeth that she would defend her party. Begins, Haud dubie Regina iis qui nova deposcunt beneficia. (10 leaves imperfect at end.)

Two leaves of English.

No. 12 and 13. Quarto common-place books, and extracts, by Philip, second Earl of Chesterfield.

Octavo common-place book, &c. by the same in 1670.

No. 14. Folio. Correspondence of James Stanhope, afterwards Earl Stanhope, with Lord Treasurer Godolphin.

1705. Sept. 30th, Windsor. Sir Charles Hedges to [the Earl of Godolphin]. Sends three letters by Mr. Methuen, which came by Lisbon mail this morning. Sends extract of the one to Hedges.

1706, June 15th. Extract of a letter to Mr. Secretary Hedges from Barcelona. Lord Galway writes the allies will have an army of 17,000 foot and 5,000 horse, and the Spaniards will not be above 8,000 of the former and between five and six thousand of the latter. He designs to besiege Badaiaos or to march into Andalusia, but he finds great difficulties with the Portuguese. Brigadier Shrimpton makes great complaints of the naked condition of Gibraltar and want of all things necessary for repairing fortifications. When the fleet returns the Earl of Peterboro' has instructions to leave the place in as good a condition as he can. Her Majesty has given out her commands relating to the Lord Keeper and the Earl of Abington.

1706, Aug. 11th. n.s. Camp of Guadalaajara. General Stanhope to Lord Treasurer Godolphin.—A descent by Sir Cloudesley Shovel and his fleet on Galicia would be of use. Laments the bad state of affairs. Unless they can win a battle, nothing but wintering a strong squadron in the Mediterranean can save this army from ruin. The Portuguese have not a shilling.—If we had money we could raise a considerable number of troops in Aragon, Valencia, and Catalonia, which provinces are as firm as possible in our interest.—Spain is divided into parties, as it was formerly, into the Crowns of Castile and Aragon. All the latter we are possessed of.—The division he laments.

1706, Aug. 25th. Camp at Chinchon. (8 pp.)—Oct. 6th and 24th from Valencia. The same to the same.

(These letters are mostly written by James Stanhope, afterwards Earl Stanhope during the military operations in Spain in 1706, and were formerly in the possession of my grandfather Arthur Stanhope; they appear to have been lent to the great Earl of Chesterfield. See indorsement on the letter of Aug. 24th, 1708.)

No. 15. Original "Characters, &c." by Philip Dormer Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield. (This shows that Walpole was misinformed, when he said that the Earl burnt the originals before he died. Letters, vol. vi. p. 73.)

Seventeen characters, George I., the Mistresses of George I. and II., George II., Queen Caroline, Lord Townsend, Pope, Arbuthnot, Bolingbroke, Pulteney, afterwards Earl of Bath, Sir Robert Walpole, Lord Grenville, Mr. Pelham, Richard, Earl of Scarborough, Lord Hardwick, Duke of Newcastle, Duke of Bedford, Henry Fox, Mr. Pitt. (Those in italics were first published in 12mo. in 1777. Lord Mahon (now Earl Stanhope) printed the remainder.)

Some thoughts upon the Clergy.

A dialogue between Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, and Sir J. Cutler.

A dialogue between Horace and Dr. Bentley.

My thoughts for the education of my godson Philip Stanhope.

My thoughts concerning the future education of my godson Philip Stanhope, who is, and in my opinion deservedly, the object of my tenderest care and wishes. (All autograph.)

No. 16. Quarto. Fragments by Philip Dormer, Earl of Chesterfield. (Autograph.)

1. On the administration of the Earl of Bute, written in 1763 (p. 1 to p. 18). Ends with a character.

"He had honour, honesty and good intentions. He was too proud to be respectable or respected. Too cold and silent to be amiable, too cunning to have great ability, and his inexperience made him too precipitately undertake what it disabled him from executing."

2. Anecdote how the excise scheme came to be so unexpectedly dropped, written in 1761. (19-21.)

3. Fragments. (Inter alia.) An anecdote concerning the marriage of the French King Louis XV. with the daughter of Stanislaus Seczinsk, King of Poland (22-26). The chambermaid of Madame de Prie, the Duke of Bourbon's mistress, suggested to her mistress the daughter of Stanislaus as wife for the King.

4. Essay on the duty and utility and the means of pleasing; a fragment. Anecdotes, aphorisms, &c., (27-32). Begins, The desire of being pleased is universal.

5. Advice to the late Earl of Chesterfield (33-46). Begins, My dear boy. Ends, with a recommendation not to be in debt, and a quotation from Voltaire thereon.

6. The same with considerable additions and alterations (47-64). Ends, with P.S. I am sure I need not recommend Dr. Dodd to your care and friendship. You are sensible, I know, of the great obligations you have to him, and whenever you have either interest or power. I charge you to exert them with zeal to serve him.

7. "Some thoughts on the duty, the utility and the means of pleasing," addressed to the late Earl of Chesterfield (64-85). Begins as before.

8. Anecdotes, &c. (86-89).

No. 19. A thick folio. Executorship account under the will of Thomas Fermor of Somerton, county Oxford, Esq., dated 15th of June 1580.—George Shirley was one of the executors. (See Archæological Journal, vol viii.)

No. 24. A quarto containing 47 letters by the Rev. Ralph Shirley, and one by his son John Shirley, 1714-54, to Wm. Archer, Esq., of Cooper Sale, near Epping, mostly dated from Wickham, the parsonage house of Welford, county Berks, of which place Mr. Shirley was rector. He died in Dec. 1760 æt. 50. according to the Gentleman's Magazine, but by some mistake, as he was born in the 17th century. (Ralph Shirley was of Baliol College, and was M.A. in 1707.)

1726, Jan. 26th, Ralph, Shirley to William Archer. Account of bell-ringing on his (Archer's) wife's delivery of a daughter. The bells were first rung by female, and then by male ringers. The women got in first and rung much, only letting in one man who got the keys of the church for them, and so enabled them to keep the men out; when tired out, they let the male ringers come.

1729, Sept. 2nd, Wickham. The same to the same. Soho Square. Mentions the illness of Mr. Packer who is not likely to recover. In event of a vacancy Mr. Bertie thought there would be four candidates, yourself, Mr. Winchcombe Packer, Mr. Vansittart and Mr. Aston. He (Shirley) thought that Vansittart would not stand, and that Aston might be prevailed on to desist, having but a poor chance, and that it lay between him (Archer) and Packer.

It appears that on the 27th July 1736 a great fire broke out at Peasemore, county Berks; it broke out through a high wind, did much damage, 1575*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* at a moderate computation. Here is a copy of a letter by two justices of the peace, giving leave to the poor cottagers' agent or agents, for six months, to ask charity for them from house to house within the county, but not a license to the sufferers, they being so many.

1754, June 11th, Peasemore. Ralph Shirley to —. Mr. Strode, lately chosen, is dying. Mr. Gore told Lord Craven that you were pitched on to succeed him and support the interest. It is my duty to let you know that the electors, principally of the Court side, have been remarkably venal. At the close of the last Parliament but one, Mr. D——d who sat in the House but six weeks, upon an appeal spent, some say, 13,000*l.*, others 11,000*l.*, the least 9,000*l.* His canvass this time cost (Lord Craven hears) 3,000*l.*, and what his appeal will come to (for he is resolved to petition) who can say? His appeal is not against Mr. Strode, but Lord Fane.

R. P. SHIRLEY, Esq.

E. P. SHIRLEY.
ESQ.

The electors on the Tory side (Mr. Strode's) are comparatively upright.

No. 44. A folio of 132 pages containing 502 coats of arms. Book of the nobilitie given to the Queen's Majesty 1572. It begins with William Duke of Normandy, and at page 130 the last entry is William Cecill, Knight, Baron of Burley. There are perhaps in a different hand appendices and seven coats of arms, the first being Reginald Grey Earl of Kent, and Lord Grey of Ruthin, next heir male to Reginald Grey, Earl of Kent, nominated in January 1571. The seventh coat of arms is that of Peregrine Bertie, Lord Willoughby of Evesby, in the right of Lady Catherine his mother, Duchess of Suffolk, daughter and sole heir of William Lord Willoughby of Evesby, admitted to that dignity in November 1580.

On smaller paper are 10½ pages by the same hand as that of the appendices. Errors and oversights escaped in the booke of the nobility given to the Queen's Majesty anno 1572.

The arms are very beautiful, and the colours and gilding and even the silver are quite fresh.

R. P. SMITH,
LEY, Esq.

No. 43. Folio. Arms and pedigrees of the ancient nobility of Britain, with proper blazons from the Conquest to 1572, and then continued to 1606. (211 leaves. There are three coats of arms in a page.) a Republic. In Metaphysics, Aristotle on Metaphysics. Let the above be explained in the Schools.—A student must be four years in the University before he can be a Bachelor of Arts; of this period he is to devote two terms to Grammar, four to Rhetoric, five to Dialectics, three to Arithmetic, two to Music. Then for three years more he is to master other things, devoting two terms to Geometry, two to Astronomy, three to Natural Philosophy, Moral Philosophy, two to Metaphysics. Then he may go for the degree of M.A. (The reference to Linacre shows that this regulation must be temp. Hen. VIII. or later; therefore it does not appear in the Munimenta Academica, edited by Mr. Anstey for the Rolls Series in 1868.)

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF JOHN RICHARD PINE COFFIN, ESQ., AT PORTLEDGE, NORTH DEVON.

(Second Report.)

Since the date of writing my first Report upon the ancient deeds and muniments preserved at Portledge, a further search has been made, by Mr. Pine Coffin's direction, which has resulted in the finding of a vast number of old documents and letters, of various descriptions. With his sanction, a selection from them, to the extent of some hundreds, has been made by me; the whole of which have been since subjected to examination, with the following results:—

The earliest among the ancient rolls is a Computus, or Account (in Latin), of John Walter, Provost, or Reeve, of the manor of Monkelegh, (near Great Torrington, in the county of Devon) for the 37th year of King Edward III. (A.D. 1363). The account consists of three long skins of parchment, sewed together; rendered illegible, at the beginning, by damp. A few items are here extracted from it, as indicating ancient names of localities, or illustrating the state of agriculture in those days.

The Receipts come under the heads of "Rents of assize" (assessed rents), "Ferm of the mill and the fishery," the mill being that of "Frisenam," and the fishery being "in the water called Torryg;" "Sales of Wheat;" "Sales of Stores;" "Sales of labour (open-rum);" "Issues of the Manor;" "Perquisites of Court;" "Sales over and above the account." 29s. are received for "one bull and 3 cows, sold, witness, David Carswylle;" 12d. for "one mutton sold, arising from the heriot of William Church ende;" 12d. for 4 geese, and 2½d. for 15 hens. Under "Issues of the Manor," the milk of 10 cows fetches 15s. for the year. Pastures, or feeding-grounds, are let in various localities in the manor, called "Python," or "Pychon," "Ridmore," "the Merch near Loxford," and "Lobbethorn;" and a rent of 2s. is received for "the Sand Way."

The Account then goes on to expenditure, under the heads of "Costs of buildings and dove-house;" "Necessary costs, and Fold expenses;" "Hoeing and reaping;" "Grinding of grain;" "Autumn expenses;" "Out-door payments;" "Livery (in kind) and stipends to reapers, with wages;" "Moneys paid (to the lord)."—A woman "hired to pull out the straw for (covering) the hall of the grange" receives 2d. Thomas Kena receives 8s. "for making the pigeon-house, by the job." One peck of oatmeal costs 3d., one peck of salt 2d. A charge of 2s. is entered for reaping the field called "Wylhay." Walter de Stephynstone receives 40s. for his fee, as steward of Monkelegh and Mouncolme; with various items on holding each of the Lord's Courts. The shepherd receives 3s. for 36 weeks, his "livery" in wheat being entered on the other side, but effaced by damp: repair of his house is elsewhere mentioned. Payment to the lord is made "through the hands" of various persons, among them, "Dan (Dompnus) Denis;" an ecclesiastic, elsewhere called "Frater," or "Brother," Denis. This Denis receives also, for himself, 10s. 7d. "by tally," with 2 geese. William Penros is named as the preceding Reeve.

On the obverse of the roll, the beginning of which is illegible, particulars are entered as to the then stock upon the farm, and its increase, or receipts, in kind: 3 salmon are received "as rent," and "one pound of pepper, proceeding from the rent of Peatecumbe;" a payment in kind which originated by deed in the time of Edward I., and is still received yearly by Mr. Pine Coffin, as representing the then grantor of the land. Two bushels of apples represent the whole of the garden produce in store. John Walter was evidently not looked upon as a trusty reeve, for many of his items in the latter list are crossed out by the "lord and auditors," and he is surcharged in respect of them. Thus whereas he makes out that there are 10 of the last year's geese on the farm, and but 6 of the produce, the later number is scored out, and 20 is substituted. His "petition for favour" as "the late reeve," is attached to the roll; in which, among other things, he says that he has been surcharged for 17 geese (as having been sold by him) 5s. 8d.; but that there was "default of produce" to the amount of 14, and that a fox ran away with the three others. An interlineation states that he was allowed a reduction upon this item, to the extent of 3s. 4d.

The next Computus, in date, is that of Richard atte Hole, Reeve of Monkelegh in 43, 44 Edward III. (A.D. 1369, 70). 12 pence is entered as received for clay dug at Clampitte; places called "Cloynsyve" and "Ridde" are also mentioned. For "one pair of thick gloves" the charge is 3d., and for one "gesse" (a ringed strap for the legs) for falcons 3d. 3 stone of cheese, costing 2s. 3d., and butter costing 22d., are bought for the labourers working in autumn: luxuries that are not to be found in those days, in connexion with that class, in other parts of England. They do not seem, however, on this occasion to have had any ale or cider given them. Bread for 18 "customary tenants," who carried the lord's hay, cost 16d., and one stone of cheese for them 8d. Mowing the meadow called "Medpark" cost 19d.; men being paid 2d. for tossing and getting in the hay. A portion of this Computus, which is also in a mutilated state, is illegible.

Computus of Simon Atte Warde, Reeve, or Provost, of Monkelegh, 17 and 18 Richard II. (A.D. 1393, 4); partly illegible from damp. Loxdoun, Playstrate, Loxwex, Bordmoured, and Okewell More, are places mentioned. A stack of wheat is sold, in gross, by the lord to John Stewlake, for 22s. 4d. The lord also sold, in gross, to Ralph Daubon, 43 sheep, 3 "hoggesters," and 39 lambs, for 60s. A reeder was paid 3s. 7d. for working at the grange 9 days, covering the hall, kitchen, and cowhouse (if that is the meaning of "baiera.") Gloves bought for the bailiff, the reeve, and servant, of the lord, cost 6d.: the latter, Martin Southleigh, by name, had 10s. yearly for his wages. When the lord visited the place, about the Feast of St. Peter (29th June), 23d. was spent for ale. "Paid a man for his expenses for carrying 4 salmon to Mountagu 7d." The Monastery of Montacute, in Somerset, is meant. Sir Walter atte Zoo [Yeo] is pardoned 6d. for his rent of assize. As to the geese on the farm, 4 were given to a monk of Barstapul by the lord: one was consumed by John Glover, when engaged on the business of the lord; another by John, the lord's servant, just before Michaelmas; and 4 when the lord was there; at which time also 3 hens were eaten.

Another of these rolls contains proceedings of the "Law Court of the Manor of Parkeham," in the county of Devon, in the 20th and 21st years of Edward IV. (A.D. 1481-2). Its contents are of but little interest: John Drew is to be distrained to make his part of a foss on the south side of the vill of Brodeaysshe; a foal of black colour has been found astray at Southerdowne; Alice, the wife of John Bolyn, surrenders, to the use of Thomas Seller the younger, a tenement called "Olde Mille," the lord's fee thereon being one cow, valued at 3s. 10d. The Decenniers (or Jury) also present that Baldwin Vaggescombe, John Beare, John Nicholle, and Robert Mattecote, have severally broken the assize, by making, each of them, one brewing of ale; for which they are severally fined 4 pence. John Fortescu, Richard Robyne, John atte Combe, John Borisdone, and John Gyffard, are severally fined for neglecting to appear, as owing suit of court, the first four 3d. each, and Gyffard one penny. Thomas Bagilhole and Robert Mattecote are sworn into office as Ale-tasters. John Dure makes plaint against John Drewe that he has committed a trespass, by stopping up the way at Venyate. John Deare "puts himself upon inquisition" against John Mussell, in a plea of debt, for that he "detains one yard and a half of woollen cloth, of red colour, to the value of 15d., delivered to him" at Parkeham for safe keeping for the said complainant. A similar plaint is also made as to detainer of 2 pounds of white wool, delivered at Brodeaysshe to the same John Mussell.—These entries seem to indicate that woollen cloth was then made in this place.—Plaint is also made against Richard Holecombe, that he stopped up the way at Langelonde. In addition to the preceding, there are several other ancient Account rolls, more or less defaced by damp.

The three following deeds, found among Mr. Pine Coffin's papers, deserve notice, as containing names of ancestors of John Gay, the poet, (whose family afterwards removed to Barnstaple) and of Risdon, the historian of Devon. Both of these families were connected with the manor of Goldsworthy, in the parish of Parkham, in North Devon.

Indented copy, on parchment, of an Inquisition (in Latin) taken at Great Torrington, in the county of Devon, on the 15th of November in the 22nd year of King Henry VII. (A.D. 1506), before Richard Garlond, the King's Escheator, on the oath of John Holbeme (or Holbeine) and eleven other jurors; who find that John Gaye, late of Gulworthy, was seised of the manor of Gulworthy at the time of his death, and of lands in Kyngysforde, in the parish of Kentysbere, and in Neuland and Columptone, and elsewhere.

A parchment deed, or copy of court roll, in good condition, bearing date the 21st of April, in the 8th year of Elizabeth (A.D. 1566). It states (in Latin) that Philip Risdon, William Risdon, and John Risdon, in presence of certain tenants of the manor of Goldworthy, (in North Devon) had, out of court, surrendered into the hands of the lord a tenement situate in Stoke, within the said manor, to the use of Thomas Vyvyn, alias Fuyne, Thomasin, his wife, and Philippa, their daughter, upon payment to the said Philip Risdon of 46 li. Whereupon, the said Thomas, Thomasin, and Philippa, had appeared in court, and had received the said tenement from Thomas Gaye, Esquire, lord of the said manor of Goldworthy, and Alice, his wife, for the term of their lives and the life of the longest liver of them; they paying yearly 8s. 9¹/₂d. to the said lord and his wife, their heirs, and the assigns of the said lord, together with two days' ploughing, and two days' reaping; yearly, in autumn. There are two small seals attached, and the words are written at the foot (evidently with great difficulty),—"By me, Thomas Gay." Another signature, probably intended for that of Alice Gay, is only an unintelligible scrawl.

J. R. PINE COFFIN,

A long parchment indenture, in English, dated the 29th of August, in the 21st year of Elizabeth (A.D. 1579), made between Giles Risdon, of Parkeham, in the county of Devon, and William Risdon, his son, executors of the last will and testament of Antony Risdon, deceased, another son of the said Giles, and John Coffyn, of Portledge, Esquire. A term of 60 years had been granted by Alice Gay, widow of John Gay, in the 16th year of the same reign, in the capital message and barton of Gouldworthy, otherwise West Gouldworthy, in the county of Devon, to Philip Risdon, another son of the said Giles; which Philip assigned the said term to Antony, whose executors now assign to the said John Coffyn, for the unexpired part of the said term of years. There are two wax seals attached; one of them, apparently, representing a figure standing before a tree, has somewhat the appearance of being the impression of an ancient gem.

The Letters in the possession of Mr. Pine Coffin, belonging to the latter half of the seventeenth century, are very numerous; being, nearly all of them, addressed to his ancestor, Richard Coffin, of Portledge (who was High Sheriff of Devon in 1685,) or to members or connexions of his family; his second wife being a daughter of Edmund Prideaux, of Padstow, in Cornwall. These letters, with a few miscellaneous papers, are exactly six hundred in number: and the following is some account of a number which have been selected for notice, commencing with sixteen of a miscellaneous nature, arranged in chronological order.—

"Honoured Sir. Since my last, the face of things heer outwardly is much changed, and our hopes at present for such men as might bee truly serviceable, are very small: a resolution (as they give out) is taken up by the chief ones heer to make choice of no one but he that is actually a burgesse. And accordingly, to render him capable by that rule, and in order to his election (as is conceived) Mr. Nic: Denys was yesterday made a burgesse; and another of this towne (as the rumor goes) is pitch't on also. So that your friends that desired to serve you (and in you the publique interest) are at a stand, and know not how to proceed. However, we shall observe how things are carried, and if an opportunity present, it shall be taken hold of, and improved by, Sir, Your very reall friend and servant, J. Hanmer. Barstaple, 23th March 1659." Addressed. "To the Worshipfull his much honoured friend Richard Coffin, Esquire, at his house at Portledge, these present." Written in a beautifully neat and legible hand. This is probably the nearest approach that Mr. Richard Coffin ever made towards obtaining a seat in Parliament.

A Letter from Edmund Prideaux, of Padstow, in Cornwall, (father of Humphrey Prideaux, Dean of Norwich,) to his daughter, Mrs. Ann Coffin, dated October 27th 1678. The Romish plot, denounced by Dr. Tongue and Titus Oates, is here alluded to.—"The conspiracy against the life of the King appeares everie daye worse and worse, exceeding the Gunpowder Treason, and I feare the danger is not yet over, in regard Sir Edmond Godfrey, a justice of peace, who had been active against them, was found dead, being baselie murdered by them, not far from his house. I beseech God to prepare us, everie daye, for the worst of times." In reference to family matters, he says,—"Will Pendarves and his wife [the writer's daughter] returned hither from Werington, where it seemes their entertainment was greater and more noble than ever your husband and you, or your mother and myself, at anie time, met with there." There are eight other letters in the collection, written by Edmund Prideaux the elder, who died in 1683. They are very legible, and written in a beautiful hand. Werington, near Launceston, was the seat of Sir William Morice.

A Letter from Edmund Prideaux to his sister, Mrs. Ann Coffin, dated London, 2nd May 1685, the year of the Shrievalty of her husband, Richard Coffin. The following is an extract, in reference to the coach which she had lately set up.—"Your coachman is a silly fellow, to tell you that your coach is too high to bring to Portledge; for I had it made one purpose for your roads, and 'tis noe higher then the other coaches that are made for the gentlemen of Devon; for he that made it, doth worke for most of the gentry of Devon. It seemes the coachman is afraid of spoyling his face in our buashie lanes, for his head will be at lest two foote higher then the toppe of the coache. If you doe resolve to make it lower, you will only spend your money to spoyle the coach."

A Letter, with a list of books inclosed, thus labelled, in Richard Coffin's hand:—"Mr. Dight's letter, wherein he gives mee an account of the bookes bought for mee at the auction of Dr. Heinsius, in Holland; but not dated, but received about the beginning of June 1683."

A copy of a Letter sent by the Mayor of Taunton to the Mayor of Exeter, such copy being sent to Richard Coffin, as the then High Sheriff of the county of Devon:—"Sir. By the inclosed copies of 2 letters intercepted in these partes, you may perceave an intencion of an insurrection forthwith in the west, and this day an examination of a miller and wife was taken upon oath before Mr. Justice Tymewell, that aboute 80 horsemen, supposed armed, did passe, about one of the clocke this morninge, a byway near this towne of Taunton, and soe into a part of the west of England. Wee have apprehended and secured five suspicious persons in our towne; and now tis fair time many persons pretending busines to the fair, flock to Exeter, tis desired and not doubted but that your Worship will make strict scrutiny in Exeter, and keepe watch and ward, and send to the remaining deputy-lieutenants to get up your militia of your county; other militia are up. Bee pleased to examine the letters that come this post. Excuse haste From your servant Ber. Smith, Maior of Taunton. If your Worship thinke fitt to disarme all persons that come into your gates, and persons already lodged in the innes; for tis supposed the beginning wil bee at the fair. Taunton June the 1, 85. To the Right Worshipful the Mayor of Exeter, or, in his absence, to his representative. These. This is a true copy." This commotion, it deserves to be remarked, took place nearly a fortnight before the Duke of Monmouth's landing at Lyme Regis, in Dorset.

A Letter, written to Mr. Richard Coffin, by Sir George Chudleigh, dated "Ashton, the 12th of September 1685," in a very firm and legible hand:—"Honored Sir. I am very sorry the infirmitys of my old age will not permitt mee to attend you with my personall service at this solemnity, and to congratulate the honor and happines of your place and authority at this tyme. But to supply the defects of my old age, and to testify the true and sincere affection I beare unto your person and famaly, which hath beene of ancient acquaintance and alliance, I have ordered this bearer to present you with the venison of the best bucke my parke affords at this tyme, which humbly craves your acceptance, as a testimony of that affectionate and ready service I owe you, and to assure you that were my abillities answerable to my desires, no friend in the world should be more ready to obey your commandes then Sir Your most humble servant and affectionate kinsman George Chudleigh."

A short Letter, written by Sir William Morice, of Werington, to Mr. Richard Coffin, Sheriff of Devon, in 1685:—"Sir. I was in hope you would have saved the expense of another assizes, but since it falls out otherwise, my men shall not fail to wait upon you at Crediton at the time appointed. My daughters and my sister went this day to Dunsland . . . but Sir John Carew is not with them . . . Your affectionate kinsman and servant Will. Morice." He was son of the Secretary of State, of the same name. Richard Coffin's wife's brother-in-law, Mr. Bickford, lived at Dunsland.

A Letter to Richard Coffin, written by John Prince, author of the "Worthies of Devon" (publ. 1701).—"Hon^d Sir. According to my promise, and your many-fold obligations on me, I have sent you Mr. Hooker's "Chorography and History of the Province of Devon" (as he calls it). I should desire it may be carefully preservd, and, as soon as conveniently you may, re-

"turn'd. There ar many things of good note in it, which with other collections I have made, and farther intended to have procured, I had sometimes the vanity to have thoughts of printing for the good of our country. But I am glad, Sir, that that undertaking is like to be the province of one so excellently qualifed, both with learning, judgment, manuscripts, leisure, and estate, as yourselfe, which I hope you fully purpose and intend. . . . It is all att present from him who is, kind Sir, your most obliged and affectionate friend and servant John Prince. Berry Pomray Mar. 20th 1686."

A Letter from John Blake, Mayor of Barnstaple, to Richard Coffin, dated 14 February 1686(7), and beginning:—"Honored Sir. Accordinge to your charitable intention, I have taken advise for distribution of the five pounds amongst the poore Protestants that fled hither from France, that by reason of the markett day being the Frayday, and the Saturday being throng with businessse of the towne, I could only acquaint Mr. Mosee, the minister, and Mr. Barber, an honest merchant, that also is to give you a list of the persons, and of what is given to them."

The following is an extract from a Letter of Edmund Prideaux, brother of Humphrey, to his sister, Mrs. Ann Coffin, dated "London 12 September 1688." After stating that he had married, six weeks since, a widow, who "had a good fortune both in land and money," he continues,—“The news you had in the country about the destruction of Smyrna by an earthquake and fier is too true, for I have the misfortune to feele it severely, having a good estate there devoured by the fire, that hath laid the whole city in ashes, after it was revealed to the ground by the earthquake.” The writer was a Turkey merchant, and lived at Crosby Square, in the City.

A Letter of news, written to Richard Coffin by Mr. Henry Brayley, from "Bydeford, Tewsday 16th 88"—endorsed as meaning "16th October 1688." The invasion by the Prince of Orange being anticipated,—“I heer that all women and children are put out of the Tower, as being uslis; . . . and som hav bin with the King, desiring he will introst the Tower with Protestantes, but no anserr; and that soch a on cam from Holand by way of France, and tels the King the Prince of Oring went aboard the fleet the 3 instant with 16 or 17 thousand gentelmen, as vollunteers with him . . . I heer also that our letter today spoke of som 16 or 17 seymen prestat London, and sent down the river by barg with a file of moscoteers; bot the seymen threw the moscoteers over bord, and so got away."

A Letter from Edmund Prideaux to Mrs. Ann Coffin, dated London 2nd July 1689: in it is this passage.—“Sir John Berry, by his Majesty's comand, is this day gone for Plymouth, where hee will bee the begining of the next weeke; his business, as I understande, is to see if (there) bee any place there to make docks for accomedating our men of warr, in case they should want reparation when they put into the port. . . . I doubt whether hee have time to visit his friends in the north of Devou."

A Letter written by John Coffin, to his father, Mr. Richard Coffin, when at school, under a Mr. Rainer, at some place not named; in the beginning of the year 1695, immediately after the death of Queen Mary:—"When orders was given that every one should go into mourning for the Queen, some Jacobite hung Tyburne in mourning, with a paper fastened to it, with this inscription on it,—‘I mourn, because you dyed not here.’ The Jacobites in Bristol caused the bells to be rung out, and went dancing through the streets, with musick playing,—‘The King shall enjoy his own again.’ Almost every one here hath put himself and his fimily in moarning. Most of the gentlemens' sons in our school are in moarning, excepting myself. If you intend that wee should go in moarning, (which is very fit we should), I desire you would send me word by tomorrow or next duy at farthest, that it may be mad by Munday." John Coffin afterwards was a member of Wadham College, Oxford, succeeded his father in the estate at Portledge in 1699, and died in 1703, leaving a widow, but no issue. He was succeeded by his younger brother, Richard, a Spanish merchant, in London.

A Letter from John Prideaux, at London, dated the 18th of September 1698, to his aunt, Mrs. Ann Coffin: the following is an extract:—"As to the condition of our trade, (it) is mostly to Barbary, at Tetuan, and the adjacent places thereabouts. We furnish the people mostly with cloth, exported from England, about 6 shillings a yard; we most commonly send mixt cloths, that is, of severall dyes and colours, and also, several species of cloths. . . . What we have exported from Barbary, is cheifly wax, dates, suchaneal, estridge [ostrich] feathers, and hides; but the greatest thing we trade in is wax; and that and most of things I mention, we send to Cadix from Barbary. At Cadix we have a correspondent that sells those commodities there, and make[s] us return home in wine or bills of exchange. . . . As for my couzen, I doubt not but that in little time my master wold qualifie him for a merchant, but I cant promise as to other matters. He is a man of a very penetrating witt, very ingenious, proper not only to commence butt to carry on and accomplish any enterprize with success. He was a slave in Sally [Sallee]; but being so very understanding above the rest of the captives, was sent to King Charles from the King of the Moors with letters, as an ambassador, to treat about the redemption of captives. Had not such a thing happnd, he would be a slave to this day." Though the writer complains of his want of education, this letter is very neatly written, and the spelling is superior to that mostly seen at that day. This John Prideaux was probably a son of John Prideaux, a brother of Dr. Prideaux and Mrs. Ann Coffin. In some portions of Dr. Prideaux's Correspondence a John Prideaux, a nephew, is alluded to, as having come to ruin; and John Prideaux, the brother, in one of these letters, is mentioned in strongly disparaging terms.

A Letter from John Coffin to his mother, Mrs. Ann Coffin, dated at Versailles, November 30, 1699. He had recently left Oxford, and was now on his travels. The following is an extract.—“If the danger of traveling in these parts is the only objection you have to make against my journey the next spring, I finde noe obstacle at all, for a traveller may with more safety pass thro' France then England, robberys not being soe frequent, and the people as obligeing. And as to their religion, as it is not much observ'd, soe is little or never talkd of in company, except by some bigoted priests, who make it their business to exclaim against all other opinions, except their owne. Such sort of people I take care to avoide, or if by chance I hit into their company, I have no reason to declare my religion, when it will doe me nor noe body els any service, but only contrary, cause broils and cavels between us."

A Letter from John Coffin to his mother, dated from Genoa, 18th May 1701, giving an interesting account of that place. The following are some extracts:—"I now am at Genua the Superb, as they call it, and indeed it deserves that title; for in all my travells I never saw any one towne soe full of pallaces, soe magnificent and stately: but the pride of the people is intollerable; the nobles are distinguishd into two classes, the antient and modern, and those of the antient rank are soe haughty, as they will not visit nor converse with those of the second, nor marry into their family, tho' they are tenn times as rich. The Doge is almost a perpetual prisoner; never goes out of his pallace without leave of the Senate. The Italians are very grave; the nobility, both men and women, weare black flowerd silck, and this habit distinguishes 'em from the citizens, who generally goe in coloured cloaths. . . . Perhaps you have heard of the warlike Amazons of this city in the time of the Holy Wars, when the greatest parte of the ladys of quality went to engage themselves in that war; they story is here still very memorable, and their armour is now repolished in the arcenall."

Two Latin speeches which were spoken at Bideford, (in the Grammar School, probably,) on St. George's Day 1685, in honour of the Coronation of King James. The writing is very distinct, and the copy, not improbably, was handed to Richard Coffin, as being present as High Sheriff of Devon, on this occasion. The two speeches are not merely complimentary, but adulatory to fulsomeness, in a remarkable degree.

A very long paper, occupying from 6 to 7 sides of foolscap, closely written, in a beautiful hand, and headed,—“Reasons humbly offerd to the Duke of Albe-marle, against his going Governor of Jamaica.” The whole “revenue of the Government” is but 2500*li*. yearly. It is spoken of as “such a pittifull one (commision) as has noe other competitor for it but Sir Th. O.” and it continues,—“Besides, doe you not thinke the same people will use you as they did when you were in the west and at Whitehall? They will have continuall spyes upon you, and misinterpret every thing you do.” Christopher Monk, Duke of Albemarle, to whom this long Expostulation is addressed, accepted the governorship of Jamaica, in spite of this remonstrance, in 1687, and died in that island in 1688. Hans Sloane accompanied him, as his physician. Towards the close of this ably written paper, the author of which is not named, the following passage occurs:—

 “That you may know that this is not mine alone, but the generall voice of the whole towne, read but all the lampoons with which the town hath swarmed of late; which, though otherwise not much to be regarded, yet when so very universall, they shew at least the sense of the times; for the voice of every body is called the voice of God [Vox populi, vox Dei], and thus one of them speaks:—
 “Let a disbanded peere, kicked out of Court,
 “And made some upstart statesmans common sport, “Sneake like a dog, and beg he may be sent
 “With a great character to banishment.
 “Since he is pleasd to be made such a tool “What’s that to me:—

There are 5 or 6 more lines to the same purpose.” Not improbably, Richard Coffin was the author of this Expostulation.

In addition to the preceding there are 41 miscellaneous letters and papers, not here noticed, eight of them written by Edmund Prideaux to his daughter, Mrs. Ann Coffin, and one by her mother, Bridget Prideaux: one also the writing of Bridget (Bokenham), the wife of Dr. Prideaux. There are also 21 letters, in addition to those above quoted, from Edmund Prideaux to his sister, Anne Coffin.

Mr. Thomas Northmore, of St. Thomas’s, Exeter, was Assistant Deputy Sheriff to Mr. Richard Coffin, in his year of office as Sheriff, in 1685; a year made memorable by Monmouth’s abortive attempt to deliver this country from the rule of James the Second. The following is a selection of extracts from nine of the letters written by Mr. Northmore during this period, there being 26 in all preserved.—

8 June 1685. . . “[The] Duke of Albemarle, with Major Walker, came hither y[esterday]; the Duke’s regiment are ordered to bee raised, (as I heare): the occasion of his coming is not certainly declared. Its thought it is on the supposition of an insurrection or rebellion here in the west, by reason of a ship which the Tiger, one of his Majesty’s frigates, lately took at sea, and brought into Plymouth, loaden with drums and ammunition. I waited on his Grace as soon as hee came, and gave him your service: hee was glad to hear of your recovery, and dranke your health.”—The Duke of Albemarle, it is said, shewed neither aptitude nor courage on this occasion: and hence, not improbably, his wish to escape further censure by accepting the governorship of Jamaica, as already mentioned.

15 June 1685.—“This morneinge the Mayor and Dean of Exon received a letter from his Grace the Duke of Albemarle [Lord Lieutenant. of the county of Devon], whereby they are ordered to send to mee to give you notice to bee here at Exeter with the Posse Comitatus; which letter I saw. But the Mayor and Deane, who are both Deputy Lieutenants of our county, thought it not adviseable for you to raise the Posse till you come att Exeter; where you are desired to hasten, only the Mayor and Deane advise you to come with about 200 horsemen, as well armed and provided as they may be, of the most able and loyall men. To which end, you may require the gentlemen of the best quallity neare you and other substantiall men, by vertue of your writt of assistance to joyn with you and come up att Exeter, in order to the suppressinge of the present rebellion. They also did advise that you send to Sir Boucher Wreys howse, where its said are fower or five good suites of armour: you may desire two or three of them. There is noe doubt of a ready compliyanse in all the loyall gentry and comonalty in this emergency to serve theire Kinge and country . . . Wee had this morneinge an accompt from Honyton that the Duke of Monmouth with about 1000 men, about 8 or 9 of the clocke last night, were at Bridponte, about 6 or 7 miles from Lyme, where they mett with about 600 of the militia of Dorsetshire, whoe engaged them; there were about 10 killed of each side (as its said) and the Duke of Monmouth wounded; and that the Duke of Monmouth and his party retreated, and the militia followed them, and tooke some of theire guns, which were left in the flight.”

are now in Taunton. Its said Monmouth hath about 10000 with him, rabble and all.”

4 July 1685. . . . “Its thought that the enemyes army is againe in or about Taunton. My Lord Churchill and my Lord Feversham, with the King’s forces, are in pursute of them, but its supposed they are att some distance. There was a reporte yesterday that a scoute of the enemyes horse was then att Taunton, and some few others in and about Cullompton. Its conjectured theire designe may bee to march off to some of your northern ports. . . . I question not but you have already sett good and strict watches att all the ports and creakes in your parts, as Appledore, Barnestaple, Biddeford, Combe Martyn, Ilfracombe, Clovelly, and other adjacent places.”

8 July 1685. . . “The Duke of Albemarle charged mee . . . to advise you to send out scouts in your northerne partes to apprehend such as are scattered there; some were examined here yesterday who confess that about 200 of them [Monmouth’s troops] went toward Ilfracombe, and dispersed, some one way some another, neere that place, and one of the witnesses saith hee, with Ferguson and about 30 others, went off in a boate at sea at Ilfracombe, but were driven backe, seeing the King’s shipping making toward them.”

10 August 1685—Postscript—“Sir Arthur Northcote giveth you his service: hee is now with mee, and would have lent his coach, if occasion, and company.” St. Thomas. 1 October 1685. (Letter mutilated). I ridd to Wells purposely to save you what I could of the extraordinary charge of whipping and executing the prisoners, wherein I gott some mitigation. However, the charge will bee very greate. The quarters of the rebells are to bee sent to the several townes hereunder written . . . The Under sheriff is this day gonne to Coliton to execute those two prisoners that were to bee executed there, and on Saturday [a] Crediton man is to bee executed there: it had been donne formerly, had wee knowne how to dispose of his quarters, and there was noe day assigned [either] in the Kellender or in the warrant for his execution; all the other executions will be done with all speed. I hope you will [have] ceased the great trouble and charge of it; brick cannot bee made without straw, pains and care shall not be wanting on my part. . . . Places where quarters and heads of rebells are to bee sent, are, Honiton, Axminster, Coliton, Ottery, Crediton, Biddeford, Barnestaple, Torrington, Tiverton, Plymouth, Dartmouth, and Tottnes.”

St. Thomas (Exeter). 12 October 1685. . . “I was driven to ride to Wells, and there to tarry all the Assizes, for a mitigation of the whipping, and about disposing of the quarters of the rebells: I acquainted my Lord, (then Cheife Justice, now Lord Chancellor) that wee have many markett townes in our county, soe by Charter, that scarce retaine at this day the name of marketts, in some of which very few, in others not any, did resort to buy and sell, but as in other little villages where no marketts ever were. To which my Lord [Jefferies] answered that the whipping should be onely in the greater and more generall marketts; and for the quarters of the rebells, they are ordered to bee sett up at Honyton, Axminster, Coliton, Ottery, Crediton, Biddeford, Barnestaple, Torrington, Tiverton, Plymouth, Dartmouth, Tottnes. On Saturday next, at Axminster, is the last execution to bee done, and one more then at Honyton, unless reprieved, endeavours being making per expresse, who is not yet returned. Three were executed at Honyton Saturday last. Quarters are already sett up at Colliton, Honyton, Ottery, Crediton; others are brought hither to bee sent as above. The quarters are already boyled and tarred; warrants are to bee sent to the Mayors, to sett them up. I saved you considerably by my journey to Wells, and endeavour to save you what expences I can; however, it is exceedinge chargeable and troublesome; another such yeeres trouble will I not undertake for 500 li. . . . There were about 400 condemned at Taunton; and 700 at Wells. Its thought about 100 are and wilbee executed; the rest transported, unles perhaps a few may be pardoned. You fared better than the Sheriffe there,”—who would have to pay the expenses of the whippings and executions.

26 October 1685. . . “Wee are about to send quarters of rebells, and those to bee whipt, at Torrington, Barnestaple, and Biddeford, and soe about to Plymouth.”

From 1683 to within a year or two of the death of Mr. Richard Coffin (in 1699), Dr. Humphrey Prideaux, Prebendary, and afterwards Dean, of Norwich, kept up a correspondence with his "Honoured brother," who had that relation towards him as having married Ann, his sister, who was the Doctor's senior by about 8 years. Some of these letters are rendered more or less illegible by damp, others, no doubt, have perished: the following are selections from eleven out of the twelve which have survived. The leading subject is endorsed on each, in Mr. Richard Coffin's hand.—

Oxford, February 16, 1684(5). . . "A Parliament will shortly be called, which will give you an occasion of another journey to Exeter, and the opportunity of befriending the Protestant religion, which I hope you will make use of, as far as rightly you may; see that men of such temper be sent of your country, as will neither exasperate the King by denying him reasonable things, or on the other hand be too faint to grant what may prejudice our religion. But come what will, we must submit to what God will have come to passe, who often makes tryal of us by afflictions, and proves us by adversity. His Church is not to be triumphant here; but if we look backward into the historye of it, we shall ever find it struggling under difficultys and persecutions, and always best thriving under them."

Oxford, June 10, 1685. . . "The Scotch rebellion is like to continue the Parliament longer then at first designed. It seems it is a bad business; Argile haveing shown himself herein a man of design as well as resolution, for his plot is very deeply layd, and cunningly contrivd. I wish it doth not create us further disturbance then we at present imagin. Trenchard hath escaped from the King's messengers sent to apprehend him; and it is imagined gon into Ireland, with designe from thence to passe over into Scotland to him that heads his party. As his flying discovers his guilt, soe the manner of it, I doubt, will be the undoing of his father-in-law, Mr. Speake, who, in a very riotous and rebellious manner, got men together, and beat of those that came to sease his son-in-law, and thereby gave him an opportunity to make his escape."

Saham [Norfolk], October 31, 1692. . . "Wadham College hath the best reputation, but there is a yong man chosen Warden there [whom] I do not know. At Edmund Hall there is one Dr. Mills, a man of very eminent work, [who] is Principall; whom I think the considerabest man of that University, and whom of all others I would soonest trust with any friend of mine. But if you incline to send your grandson to Cambridge, that is nigh me, and perchance I can better serve you there then at Oxford, and I can have continuall advice how matters there goe with him; as I must confesse I think the Cambridge method of education preferable to that of Oxford, though as to the discipline, it is too loose for this age in both of them. . . . I am well acquainted ther with severall of the Masters of Colledges, but by what I hear, I best like of Sidney Colledge, and Doctor Johnson, the Master, I am well acquainted with." Edward Pine, the orphan son of Richard Coffin's eldest daughter, Bridget, is here alluded to: he ultimately became a Fellow-commoner of the College of Sidney Sussex, Cambridge.

Saham. 8 October 1694. . . "I am now again removing to Norwich, being driven hence by the unhealthinesse of the place, and indeed we had left it above a month since, but I first, and after, my [wife, were] taken with the sicknesse of the place, which is the ague: however, the next week we intend [to bid a] total farewell to this place, for I have resigned the liveing, in which I have acted [on my own] judgement, contrary to that of many others, who would have dissuaded me [from it]: but I could not persuade myselfe to take the wages of a minister where I intended never [more] to do the work, and therefor would not for any gain charge my conscience with this matter. I hope none of my friends will blame me on this account; for there are many other things to be valued besides money. . . . were it the treasury of Croesus, I could have noe content in it, when held with injustice. And since to me nothing seems more unjust, then that the maintenance appointed to the support of God's worship should goe to such as never attend it; and on this account I have on many occasions, especially where I am Archdeacon, discouraged non-residence, to the utmost of my power, I am resolved I will never practice it myselfe, and therefore I have sent to the patrons to present another "minister to the liveing; and the person they have agreed upon (for the patronage belongs to New Colledge in Oxford) is nephew to Oliver Cromwell, being son to one of his sisters."

May 22, 1695. . . "I should be glad to know how you designe your younger son, and which way you think he may be properest provided for. Often a younger brother's profession proves more beneficiall then the elder brother's estate; but then it must be chosen soe as will best suit his genius, for every one is not fit for every thing."—"Non omnia possumus omnes" was probably in his mind when he wrote the last sentence. Richard, the younger son, afterwards became a Spanish merchant in London.

August 16, 1695. . . "[As to] Bishop Williams, my Lord [Lord Spenser] is but a yong man, and speaks he censures by other mens judgements [than] his owne. Had Laud been halfe as honest a man, we had not been in that wretched state we [now are]. One man hath layd the foundation of all the mischiefes that hath since followed, and the other [has been] bronded because he was his opponent. One act at last is a remaineing blot upon [him, his] goeing over to the Parliament; but for that he hath his apology. But Cleveland Satyr. . . long abroad to make it heard. To give the man his due, he was the galantest personage, [whether we] looke on him either as gentleman, statesman, or divine, and I wish he had a better historian [for] his life; for that booke is stuffed with too many impertinences and needlesse digressions. However, in it you have many things of the secrets of those times, which you will not find [elsewhere]." . . . Hacket's Memorial etc. in reference to Lord Keeper and Archbishop Williams, is probably the book alluded to. Williams was a gross pluralist, and a man of, at least, questionable character; facts which make Dr. Prideaux's admiration of him the more remarkable. This letter has been partly destroyed by damp.

Norwich, October 11, 1695. . . "I confess neither of the Universitys are in that condition I could wish. I like Oxford most [qy. "least"], perchance the reason is, that I know it best. Those that have now the government of Colleges in that University [are most] of them, such as I could scarce commit a dog to their charge. I hope Cambridge may not be soe [bad]: however I would reather desire my cosin [for "nephew"] to be placed ther, that being nigh me, I [may have] the opportunity of doing him the better service. . . . [The] genius of the age is run into libertinisme, and this is gon through all bodys and orders of men in the kingdom, and the Universitys have drunk too deep of it."

Norwich, February 7, 1695(6). . . "I have made the best inquiry I can, concerning Oxford, and upon the whole I find it the opinion of all those I consult with, that Wadham College is the best place for you to put your son at, it beeing the best governed College in the University, and stockd with the best Fellows. Mr. Whiting they speak well of, but prefer Mr. Doyly as the fittest person for a tutor in that College, but he having been spoken to, declines undertaking it. My opinion is, to commit him to the Warden, and to leave it to him to provide a tutor for him, who best knows his Fellows; and that will engage him to be the more carefull of him." Mr. Doyly is again mentioned, in the Report upon the Archives of Wadham College, Oxford, included in the present Report.

Norwich, February 19, 1695(6). . . "In this place I am so far out of the way of hearing anything from Oxford, that I am myselfe very much a stranger to that place, haveing noe opportunity of beeing informed anything concerning it, all of these parts goeing to Cambridge. I hope at Wadham College your son will find all those advantages in his education which you can wish. The greatest regard is to be had to the company which he keeps, and in that College the Fellows being a very good sett of men, I hope he will have all manner of advantage by his converse with them. . . . My sister in her last mentioned Exeter College. Whoever advised you there, was noe friend: that is worse then Christ Church, for at the latter there is something of ingenuity and gentele carriage in the genius of the place, but in the other, I never knew anything all the while I was at Oxford but drinking and duncery." Prideaux himself had been a Student of Christ Church, of which he here speaks with but very faint praise: his father, Edmund, had been a member, first of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, and, after that, of Exeter College, Oxford, under Dr. John Prideaux, as Rector, afterwards Bishop of Worcester.

Norwich, March 29, 1697. . . "I have ordered a booke to be left with my brother in London for you, which I have desired him to convey to you with the first opportunity. It is just now come out of the presse, a Defence of Christianity against the Deists, a sect who now very much prevaile. Its purport sets forth what an imposture is, in the life of Mahomet . . . proves that Christianity cannot be such; those who run away with those impious notions being mostly the young gentlemen of this age, clever enough not to read any thing that will much work their heads. I thought it the best way to come at them by an History, which sort of bookes they are willing enough to read."

Norwich, May 12, 1697.—"I hope er this you have received the book which I ordered to be sent you: I wish you may find it worth your acceptance. I am sorry the wickednesse of the present age makes us soe much need such bookes. I had much rather there were no occasion for them, but since there is, I was willing to put to my hand in greatest measure I can, for the support of that holy religion which we profess." His Life of Mahomet, which he published this year, is the book alluded to.

Dr. Prideaux also kept up a constant correspondence with his sister, Mrs. Ann Coffin, from the year 1673, probably down to 1705, the year of her death. Some of these letters are much injured by damp, and many, no doubt, have perished. Extracts are here given from 27 out of the 66 which still survive.—

November 1673. . . "The new Dutchesse of York will be at London next week, where she is accompanied by her mother. She bringeth with her a portion of 400000 crowns, being about an hundred thousand pounds of our mony: which is payed by two of her uncles, which are Cardinals, and the King of France, who was the cheefe matchmaker, and made such haste to make it up, that without expecting any ratification from England, he concluded the businesse soe that she was upon her journey before they heard any thing of the businesse at Whitehall; to their great astonishment, and, I suppose, indignation, but that they dare not show it, for fear of their disobliging their master, the King of France, who ruleth here as he pleaseth, and hath reather imposed a wife on the Duke, then procured on for him. She is young, not above 15, hunch-backed, and ugly, and the daughter of a poor beggerly prince, whose revenues doe not exceed ten thousand pounds a year of English mony, and hath nothing else to make him considerable, but that he is absolute over Modena and Rheggio, 2 petty villages in Italy."

Norwich May 9, 1674. . . "As for my brother's purchasing, you have no reason to expect that, till he gives over trading; for altho at present he hath had misfortunes, yet, if it please God to give peace, he is a bad merchant, that cannot make six times as much of his money by trade as he can by land. Altho' merchandize be not my trade, yet I chuse reather to keep my estate in money than in land, for I can make twice as much of it this way, considering what taxes are upon land, and what advantages there are of making money upon the publick funds."

Oxford, November 10, 1674. . . "The Earl of Middleton is dead, and that family extinct, the estate worth 3000*li*. a year, was settled by will on the Lord Buchurst, his nephew, who hath thereon declared himself marryd to the Countesse of Faumouth, an infamous relict of the Lord Clifford's. The King being lately at Newmarket, admitted severall Cambridge men to preach before him, beeing solicited thereto by their Chancelour, the Duke of Monmouth; but beeing very much offended by their long periwigs, which some of them wore, and at the reading of their sermon, which all the Cambridge men are guilty of, esteeming it affected to doe otherwise, hath sent an expresse command to the governours of the University to take care for the future that none of their divines either ware periwigs or read their sermons. We likewise expect the same orders here, although our University is not soe guilty of either of those faults as to need such commands for a reformation. . . . The Dutchesse of Yorke expecteth speedily to ly. in, her mother will suddenly be here, her daughters lyeing beeing the pretense of her coming; although I suppose her cheife end is to receive more presents, having speed soe well the last journey as to have got more here and in France, then the revenues of Modena are worth in 2 years. But it is the fate of those that

"marry beggerly princes allways to have beggers at their heels."

Oxford, August 8, 1676. . . "At Ford, I found the old attorney's lady, who was very kind unto me. . . My aunt was very inquisitive after (the) Bake family; she lamented much the death of my grandmother, but as for Sir Walter, I find that all in that family have a very ill opinion of him." Sir Walter Moyle, of Bake, in Cornwall, a kinsman of the family, is meant. The "old attorney" was Edmund Prideaux, Attorney-General under the Commonwealth, and connected with the introduction of the Post Office into this country.

Oxford, March 29, 1683. . . "As for old Josias' death I am not much concerned; I suppose those that are nearer related to him are glad of it, especially the young Josias. But as for my Lady Moyle, I am very much troubled at her losse [i.e., loss of her]; she was the cheife support of the family: and I fear Sir Walter will sufficiently want [miss] her, especially in respect of the children she hath left behind her. As to my liveing . . . the name of it is Blaydon, 5 miles distant from Oxford. The town of Woodstock is in my parish. . . my chief parishioner is his Majesty, who hath in my parish a manor house, formerly much resorted to by his predecessors, especially King James; but the house being almost totally ruined in the late wars, the King hath not been at it above twice since his return; but were the house rebuilt, I believe he might be here as often as King James, who seldom fail'd to spend some part of the summer at it. My other parishioners are the Earle of Litchfield and his Countesse, one of the Dutchesse of Cleveland's daughters by his Majesty; the old Countesse of Rochester and her two granddaughters, daughters to her son the late Earle of Rochester; a Baronett, and severall other gentlemen of good note. The situation of the place is the most pleasant and healthy that I know anywhere in England."

Oxford, April 20, 1685. . . "I am at present a mourner for the death of one of the best friends I had in this place, Dr. Marshall, Rector of Lincoln College, a person of as eminent worth, both for goodness and piety, as well as learneing, as any that he hath left behind him; and his losse was the greater to me, because of a more than ordinary kindnesse he designed me, had it pleased God he had lived till next Michaelmas, that I might have capacitated myself for it, by takeing the degree of Doctor in Divinity; for then he would have resigned unto me his Deanery of Gloucester, which would have placed me in an honourable station, altho as to profits it be one of the least that bears that name, the value of it not exceeding 250*li*. a year."

Norwich, February 1, 1688 (9). "I perceive by yours you are soe much in love with your Mons'. Jeureu [Jurieu] that I believe if my brother were dead, you would make him your second husband. Since I perceive you so dote upon this man, I shall be sure to say noe more of him that may offend you. You wrot to me to know my judgement of his booke and the man, and you are angry with me when I give it you, tho it be noe other than what is after the judgement of the best and learnedest of his own countrymen, Mons'. Allix and others, whom I am acquainted with, and who know the man better then I doe. His booke, when I read it, appeared to me a perfect romance, as contained the inventions of a phancyfull brain, without ground or reason. It hath been a practice for this last age or two for to apply the prophecys of the Revelations to the actions of the time: thus Brightman expounded them all of Scotland, and others of the affairs of Germany, in the time of Gustavus, and now Mons' Jieureu is driven out of France, all must be expounded of that country, to make way for his return home again; and I think it the weakest performance of any that hath been attempted this way. And for the good deliverance which you imagin we have obtained by the Prince of Orange coming hither, I wish it may prove soe; but I must tell you I have other notions of that matter. I should be glad to be deceived in my apprehensions, but as things now goe, I can see nothing but a long series of confusion like to come upon this land, which neither we or our children may ever live to see an end of. . . For these two years I have been expecting continually to be turned out of all, and therefore I have my mind the better prepared for to bear it, when it comes from another hand, as I expect er long it will; oaths and tests being like to be put upon us, which I can never take; and this I doubt not will voyd churches enough for all your beloved phanatiques to come in

Norwich, February 11, 1688 (9). . . . "The news from London concerning the settling of the Crown, I suppose you have heard of. What may be the consequence of it time must show. For my part I must confesse I expect noe good; the next thing will be to require us to take a new devised oath of allegiance to the new King and Queen, which many thousands among us thinke we cannot take with a good conscience, considering the oath already taken to the late King; the consequence of which will be, the turning out of us all. What the oath is, I doe not yet know; but I hear the Bishops cannot get over it, but will rather, all of them, quit their bishopricks then take it; if soe they and the Church must goe down together, and then your friends, the present Dissenters, may have their will and once more act as they did in the late times, which nothing but French dragooning can parallell."
Saham, June 27, 1692. "Dear Sister. I have received your letter, but perceive you have very wrong notions of matters, concerning which I shall enter into noe dispute with you. God knows the world is bad enough with us, and the Dissenters, who are so much in your favour, have helped forward to make it soe, as much as any party of men in the nation; and now we have a King and Queen ready to sett forward a reformation, and Bishops who labour hard to effect it, yet nothing can be don, because that party in Parliament who are for the Dissenters, obstruct all offers made this way; because unless they can be uppermost, they will consent to nothing, but are desirous reather to make things worse, that soe they may the better compass their own designs upon us. Severall very good Acts were offered by the Bishops last Sessions, but none could be past; especially one for takeing away plurality of benefices with cure of souls. The reason urged against it was, that it being the privilege of the Lords to qualify ministers for pluralities, to take this way would be to devest them of their peerage; but the true reason was, the party disaffected to the Church of England would not foregoe so plausible a theme of declaiming against it; and I have the most reason to know it, because I was the person employed by some of the Bishops to draw the bill. However, they will offer at it again next session; but I foresee it will be to noe purpose. . . . For this I am sure, there never was a Parliament ever sate in England, which is more averse to the doing of anything for religion and the service of God, then that which is now in being. . . . As to the Universitys, although at present some of the Colleges have fallen into the hands of ill men, as to the government of them, yet still there are very good men in both, where young men may be instructed in virtue and learneing, as well as in religion. Exeter Colledge is totally spoyld, and soe is Christ Church, and for that reason, when lately chosen Canon of Christ Church, and Professor of the Oriental languages, in Dr. Pocock's place, I refused to goe."
Saham, August 21, 1692. . . . "As for your foolish neighbour, that will put force upon her son, that you mention, she will certainly ruin him to all ends and purposes, and by her method of education breed him up only to be a plague unto her all her life after. She hath no right to chuse a religion for her son; every one is to looke after his owne soul, and must have the greatest right to chuse for its salvation, because he hath the greatest interest therein; only it becomes parents, as long as their children have not judgment for themselves, to guide them by their [example], as well as they can, and to give them the best education they are able; I say this is the rule, did all people act sincerely, but wickednesse and faction is in the bottom of most of the divisions and dissensions about religion that are now among us; but soe it hath been from the begining, and ever will be, and nothing is more foolish than the expectation of that reformation which some would have; for it is not consisteing with our lapsed condition, and therefore never can be had in this life. . . . The Act of Toleration hath added this mischeife, that since the liberty granted by it, a great part of the nation worship God noe way at all, but are degenerated into perfect atheisime; and although the Act doth not directly give them this liberty, yet it is soe ordered that now such a liberty is given to others, it cannot be avoyded but every one takes to doe what he pleases in matters of religion; it being too difficult

"a matter to distinguish between those absentees from church that goe to conventicles, and those that doe not, that every one now is free to do what he pleaseth; and soe it will be till there be a regulation of this Act; which I believe will never be obtained from an atheistical gentry in Parliament, who seem to aim at nothing as much as a totall libertinisme in manner as well as religion. I foresee the event of this will be, the Church will be again torn in pieces, and the end thereof will be either the ruin of the Protestant religion or the ruine of Christianity among us; for whenever the present establishment is overthrown, Popery must come in its stead, or nothing."

December 10, 1692. . . . "I am exceeding sorry that the Bishop's behaviour is so bad; it is a great infelicity that such a man is put into such a station. When I were last in London, it was talked with much hopes among the other Bishops that he was in a dying condition; but I suppose they took this only by way of conjecture from his disorderly living; it would be a great blessing to the Church were we rid of him, and one or two more of King James's Bishops, for the rest are indeed very worthy and good men, and I hope God will show mercy unto his Church by their ministry. . . . I expect a sweeping calamity, that will rake us from one end of the land to the other, and I pray God protect my stars. . . . In your next, give me some particulars of the Bishop's mis-carriages, and whether he will never be removed higher." Sir Jonathan Trelawny, Bishop of Exeter, was promoted to the See of Winchester in 1707, and died in 1721. In this letter, the roads between Norwich and Cambridge are said to be impassable for carriages.

Norwich, November 8, 1693. . . . "The whole world is grown corrupt; this nation is like to rue it for ages to come, that King Charles the 2nd ever reigned in this land; his example hath soe corrupted all orders of men among us, that there is scarce any religion, honour, or common integrity, left in the land, and God is goeing, I fear, to punish us in the severest manner for it. At the same time the French sett soe hard upon us abroad, the party at home is labouring as hard for our ruin; nothing will satisfy them but the pulleing down both of the Church and Monarchy. The Dissenters are now their tools to effect this, and if ever they carry the day, perchance they may fare under such men as bad as we; for they are most, if not all, most profligate atheist[s], that are the head managers of this designe, who have already made shipwrack of their honour, their conscience, and their estates, and would now repair themselves upon the ruin of the publick interest of the kingdom. These men may make way for the King of France to swallow both us and them; but for their designs, they will never take in this land, when they come to be publicly owned, however at present they may gull many under this cloake of the publick good, to which in reality they are the greatest enemys. . . . These men have framed a councill for carrying on of their designes. God only knows, as to my selfe, perchance they may speedily give me reason enough to visit my friends in the West." Extracted from a very long letter, on the political aspects of the times.

Saham, February 11, 1693 (4). . . . "I have now 2 sons and a daughter; the latter, I tell her I will send to her Aunt Honour, for she is exactly of her spirit and humour. She makes sport for the whole house, and will govern all, wherever she comes. She is, I thank God, a very sprightly, witty, child, and very healthy; which hath encouraged me to venture 200 li. on her head in the Million Fund; which will bring her 28 li. per annum; and will be a reserve to keep her from starving, whatever misfortunes she may meet with in the world."

Date about March 1695.—"The Queen was buried while I was at London, but I had not curiosity to incommode myself by ten hours setting in a gallery to see that ceremony. While there, I met my old friend and relation Mrs. Bury; the Bishop of Exeter haveing at last driven her husband out of the Colledge, he hath settled himselfe in London. I cannot justify him for the booke he wrot, but as to that which was the merits of his cause, I think he hath the hardest measure possible, hee being expelled the Colledge for expelling a Fellow, father of 2 bastards in one year. I have had a great deal of discourse with Wat Moyle, and hope that those storys which goe of him in the country may not be true. I have once more put him into the hands of the Bishop of Salisbury, who promised me to take pains with him in removing "his prejudices, if there be any such rooted in him." It would seem that Dr. Bury was removed from the Rectorship of Exeter College by Dr. Trelawny, Bishop of Exeter, the Visitor. Walter Moyle, thus committed to the care of Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, was a kinsman of Dr. Prideaux and one of the wits and free livers of the day.

August 13, 1695. . . "The great divisions and parleys we fell into immediately on King James' departure made me always fear it would come to this, and this made me resolve to retire into the country, and avoyd all overtures of higher advancing myself in the Church; and indeed I have with greater industry avoyded in this particular then other men have sought; for the lowest stations are safest in troublesome times; and, God helpe us, we are like to find troublesome ones enough."

Norwich, December 8, 1695. . . "My brother hath wrot to me about your son, and I should be glad to doe you all the service I am able. Cambridge being nigh me, I can there doe you the best service, and therefore I advised my brother to place him there; and I must confesse I have the better opinion of Cambridge, although perchance it be only that I doe not know it so well as Oxford, which to my great grieve, I know to be bad enough."

Norwich, August 11, 1697. . . "I hope my brother hath received the book I sent him. I published it to meet with an impiety that very much prevails in our day. It seems we have wrangled soe long about religion, that too many of us begin to be weary of it, and, instead of reformeing, would now cast it all of at once. I hope my desigune may not be without some good effect; two whole impressions of the booke having been already sold of." His Life of Mahomet is the work alluded to.

April 20, 1698. . . "As to the books you inquire after, if you had Geddis's 'History of the Church of Ethiopia,' and his 'History of the Church of Malabar,' they would please you. As to the Jesuits in China, all the progresse they have made there is, to get the Chinese to worship Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and St. Peter, among the rest of their heathen Gods." This letter is much mutilated.

June 30, 1698. (Speaking of John Coffin, then on a visit to him from Oxford). . . "He hath a mind to see Ports[mouth on] his return, [and hath] a phancy to passe over into the Isle of Wight. [But] this I disswade him from, because he can see nothing worth the hazard of passing the sea to it; and he has [agreed] to let it alone."

February 1, 1698 (9). . . (In reference to Walter Moyle) "He is a young, inconsiderate, rash fellow, that out of a pragmaticall humour, and an opinion of his own understanding, hath too much delighted to talke against the common received opinions of others; and as far as I can learn, all this talke of him hath proceeded from this free pragmaticall way of talkeing, when formerly in the country. As to his religion, I believe as yet he hath some, and as the world now goes, few gentlemen really have, and I believe a libertine humour is in the bottom of it. When age makes him more serious, I hope he may become another kind of man. He hath hitherto acted in every particular a most indiscreet part. The Court would have preferred him, and the circumstances of his family putt him in need enough of it; but instead of behaving himself soe, last Parliament, as to recommend himself to the favour intended for him, he joyned with the King's most bitter enemys, opposed his interest in everything, and hath affronted his person in a libell which he is supposed to have had an hand in, to that degree that he will never be pardoned it, or can expect to signify anything further than his estate can make him."

Norwich, May 8, 1699. . . "As to the Greeks at Oxford, I understand not that project, or doe I think it hath any encourager, but only Dr. Woodroff, a man of a magotty brain, and a singular method of conduct from all mankind besides. I have lett him know my judgment about it, that this matter can come to nothing, and you need not fear that they will be corrupted by us to the love of Liturgys, for nothing is more fixed among them then their own Liturgys, and they doe indeed what you think we doe, idolize their Common Prayer Books, for some of them they derive from the Apostles themselves. As for foreign Christians, you would doe well first to understand the Church you are of, before you sette soe far abroad. I think never any church was better established than ours, or more unreasonably opposed, and the toleration which is now allowed them that doe oppose it, makes only way for the driving of Christianity out of the land, for the only sect that grows upon it are the Quakers, who are noe Christians; all sects besides begin to dwindle to nothing; I am sure they doe so, where I am concerned."

Norwich, June 9, 1699. . . "Since you are for your son's going into France, I have wrot to London to procure him to goe over thither in the retinue, and under the protection, of the Earle of Manchester [Charles Montagu], who is going Ambassador to Paris. As to the persecution, that will not reach him, and I am much rather for his going into France than Holland. The French are the most polite people in Europe, and there most may be learnt by one that would profit by travell, but I advise by noe means that he goe either into Italy or Spain. . . . As to the liberty of conscience which you magnify; it is the mother of confusion, and hath made a greater step towards driving Christianity out of this realme then any that hath been made since it came into it; for it tolerates men that are noe Christians, I mean the Quakers. I am not, neither ever was I, for prosecuting any with penall laws, merely upon the account of religion; but such an unlimited toleration as this is, will soon extinguish all religion among us, since it is now claimed by a vast number of people to be of noe religion at all. One piece of news you tell me, which looks very strange to me, and that is, that you were bred a Presbyterian; if you were bred soe, you were bred alone by yourselfe, out of our knowledge and observation, for none of us else were bred soe, and I am sure my father never intended any such breeding for you. These men have broke the peace of the Church without any just reason for it, and have thereby overwhelmed us with endless confusion and distractions, and now are at an end themselves; the Independent party have swallowed them up, and brought them to nothing. As to the Greek project, it is only the maggot of one private man; it can come to nothing, nor signify anything, and soe I told the projector, when he advised with me about it some years since. But he is a man of a singular way by himselfe, without judgement, prudence, or conduct."

Norwich, August 19, 1699. . . "As to Wat Moyle, I wish him well married, and I am sorry his ill character still sticks to him, but am glad people with you have such a regard to religion as their aversion to him on this account doth expresse. I did indeed wish a wife for him to Sir Walter in this country; but at the same time I told him it would be inconvenient for him to come soe far for a wife, and I was not certain that shee would goe soe far for an husband, and I should be content to hear noe more of it. She hath indeed 7000 li., and I could safely make the match, if she would be content to goe so far." Walter Moyle, his kinsman, has been before mentioned. Moyle's literary works were published at London, in 1726; and in them are several letters to him from Dr. Prideaux, in reference to his Old and New Testament connected."

Norwich, November 6, 1700. . . "Dear Sister. As soon as my son got well, my daughter fell downe of the same distemper, and, I thank God, got very well through it without any danger, and now she is well, my wife is faine down. I took all the care I could, to preserve her from the contagion, by removing her from me; but what God willeth noe care of man can prevent. I am in the utmost concern for her, because I fear I must loose her; and her losse will be very great to me, especially if it should please God that I should dy too before my children are bred up. For in a strange country, where I leave no relations of my own to depend upon, whom shall I have to take care of them! This will make the calamity the greater, if God please to make it my lot." Shortly after the date of this letter, he had the misfortune to lose his wife.

Norwich, May 26, 1701. . . "My children, I thank God, are very well, and I am taking all due care to give them as good an education as I can, but I much want their dear Mother to help me in this matter. I am mightily pressed to marry again, with abundance of offers, and very valuable ones; but considering all circumstances, I shall think of making noe more changes till I make my great change of this life, as I hope, for a better, and I have some reason to apprehend that I am at noe great distance from it. Had it been convenient for me to take another wife, I should soon have determined my choice upon a gentlewoman,

J. R. PINN
COFFIN,
ESQ.

"whom I have long known to be a very good and discreet woman, although not very beautifull. Her father was Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of King Charles the 2nd, and of the antientest and most honourable family in this countrey. At his death he left an estate of about 1000 li. a year, which this gentlewoman, with three other sisters, on the death of their elder brother, doth now inherit. . . She is passed 40, and was never yet married." Dr. Prideaux, notwithstanding his apprehensions of failing health (being then probably threatened with the complaint of the stone) survived till the year 1724, when he died, in his 77th year.

Norwich, September 15, 1701. . . "As to the Greek Patriarch you enquire after, I suppose he is one that wants bread at home, and is come hither to beg it. There is noe account made of him, or is there any notice taken of him. Such sort of people we have often come over. As to their religion, it is made up with a multitude of rites, and they regard little else in it, beeing very ignorant and superstitious, and ready, in the giving of their judgements, to declare either for the Papists or the Protestants, according as it will best tend to their interests."

Without date. . . "Here men will be always sinners; and as long as clergymen are men, they will be soe too, for they have the same infirmity with other men, the same corrupt affections and depraved desires; and act always under the same, and oftener under much greivouser, temptations then other men, and therefore you must not think it strange that they also fall like other men. Therefore pray be not any more distressed at this, for as long as this world shall last, there will be evill men among clergymen as well as other orders of men, and perchance as many: and as the present circumstances are, it is the great mercy of God if there are not more clergymen wicked then otherwise. For liveings being trusted for the most part in the disposall of the gentry, and they having gotten a trick of selling, it hence comes to passe, when a patron hath a liveing void, he goes about seeking one that will be perjured for it; whereby it comes to pass that the worst men that are bred in the Universitys get all the livings, and they that best deserve them, and whose labours would be most usefull to the publick, are condemned to their College chambers all days of their lives, and the publick totally loose the benefit of their learning and piety; and this is what the Church of England cannot help."

Among the Portledge papers there is a long series of letters written by Mr. Richard Laphorne, of London, to Mr. Richard Coffin, between the years 1683 and 1697; if there were originally any others of an earlier or a later year, they have now disappeared. Mr. Laphorne, from what he says in one of his letters, appears to have been a native of Plymouth or its vicinity; but, from the peculiarity of the name, it seems not improbable that he was a member of the Laphorne family who were residing at Hartland, in North Devon, (in the close vicinity of Portledge), in the earlier half of the 17th century. His residence was in Hatton Garden, but what his calling or profession was, does not appear; most probably, he was an attorney, or in some other way connected with the law. He speaks in one of his letters of a son of his being elected a scholar at "Eaton," and as, in later years, proceeding to Pembroke College, Oxford. Mr. Laphorne may be fairly said to have been Richard Coffin's "London agent," receiving from him, as he states in several of his letters, a certain sum yearly for his services. His main duty seems to have been to purchase books, at auctions or elsewhere, for the fine library which Mr. Coffin was then forming at Portledge; and many particulars are to be found in these letters, relative to the then prices of books. Another of his duties was, to write, at least weekly, to Mr. Coffin a letter of news, enclosing that week's printed Gazette, the "chatt" in fact, as Mr. Laphorne habitually styles it, of the day; he invariably signing himself "Your faithfull servant, Richard Laphorne." The larger portion of his political intelligence was in general to be found, no doubt, in the current Gazette; but many other notices are given in addition therein, in reference to the passing occurrences of the day. Mr. Richard Coffin was evidently an extensive grower of hops; and Mr. Laphorne each year keeps him well posted up as to the prices then current in the markets for hops, both old and new. As in the case of the letters previously mentioned, many of Mr. Laphorne's letters are much defaced, if not almost wholly illegible, from damp; while others of them have entirely perished, no doubt, from the same cause. Those which have survived are no less than 400 in number; like the rest of these papers, they have all been submitted to a careful and thorough examination, and the following is a series of extracts from 139 of the letters in question:—

7 June 1687. . . "Doctor Tillotson, the Dean of Canterbury, had an appoplectick or epilectic [sic] fit seized on him Friday sevenight last, falling from his chair as he sate by the fire at his house at Edmington; but by bleeding and purging is pretty well recovered. Some think that it proceeded from greefe at the late death of his only daughter."

(The Letter much mutilated from damp, and not dated, but, from an endorsement in the hand of Mr. Richard Coffin, "supposed" by him to belong to December 1687). Speaking of an auction that had recently taken place.— "There was amongst them and I wonder [you] took no notice of them, a greater rarity, [and one] which was much prized; viz, 4 manuscripts of the works of Wickcliffe, bought by the Earle of Kent [Antony Grey] at 21 li. od money. I could have almost wished I had bought them myselfe at that price, but I verily believe my Lord would have bought them, [if he had] given 50 li. for them." It would be interesting to know what works of Wyclif are here referred to.

21 Jany. 1687(8). "Its reported there is a house in Lincoln's Inn Fields fitting up for the Capuchine Fryers. It seems there is some idle brayne, hath made a lampoone relating to the late Thanksgiving, and a strict enquiry is made after the author, who, if hee bee discovered, will, according to his deserts, bee severely punisht." The Thanksgiving was published, on the disclosure, by proclamation, of the pregnancy of the Queen, Mary of Modena; Thomas Sprat, Bishop of Rochester, and Nathaniel Crewe, Bishop of Durham, being, in part, the composers. The well-known lines, beginning "Tom, Dick, and Nat, in counoil sat," are, not improbably, the lampoon alluded to.

28 Jany. 1687(8). . . "This weeke I carried my little boyes to see a Swetzer, 38 years of age, and but 2 feet and 7 inches in stature, and had a manlike countenance, and voyce as thick almost. Along (therewith) hee sung, danced, and discoursed. My younger son is not 7 till May next; and is accompted very little of his age, and this Switzer, measuring with him, came but a little above his waste. The wonders of God are seen as well in minimis as maximis, as Pliny observes of Nature, in forming the flie."

17 March 1687(8). . . "I was told by a Frenchman that I know very well, that the Dauphin presented to the King, his father, a list of all the Protestantes that were departed the kingdom since the beginning of the persecution, with a designe to mollify him; but hee gave him this answer:—'Son, when you come to 'raigne, take your own course; but I am resolved to 'finish what I have begun;' and threw him back the paper."

29 April 1688. . . "One Mr. Rous, a Middlesex gent of reasonable quality, comly personage about 62 yeares of age, who lodged next dore to us, was with some company and taking a pipe of tobacco, and very merry, and in seeming good health, his pipe dropt out of his mouth, and hee instantly dyed, without speaking a word. Its said this Mr. Rouse was of the Lord Russell's Jury."

5 May 1688. . . "Sir Charles Pym, dyning at a taverne in Old Fish Street, in London, an unhappy quarrell arises betwixt him and a stranger in another roome in the house; who by chance going out together from the house into the street, he drew, and Sir Charles was run through, and dyed presently."

12 May 1688. . . "The King [James II.] hath bin this weeke to Chatham to view the shipping, and was wanting 3 days. In the interim the Queen receiving a letter of the sicknes of her brother, the Duke of Modena, fell very ill upon it; insomuch that the King was sent for, and came presently away, without his guard; but the Queene is now well againe."

25 May 1688. . . "It seemes Sir John Norborow [Narborough] hath not bin successfull in his fishing for more of the Spaniards plate; having gotten but one tun and a halfe, which comes to 12,000 li., and is brought hither, but will not quitt [P requite] us."

25 July 1688. . . "On Tuesday next, at night, will bee a great entertaynement of fireworks on the Thames, to congratulate Her Majesties [Mary of Modena] coming abroad, after the birth of the Prince. I heard an Italian say, who is and hath bin employed about these fireworks, that it will cost his Majesty five and twenty thousand pounds, according to the cal-

"ulation of their works, and that 300 men have bin employed near 4 months about them."

21 July 1688. . . . "Tuesday night last was performed the great entertainment by fireworks on the Thames, about 11 of the clock. I heare but of one that was killed; there were, as I am informed, above 100,000 spectators. It lightned exceedingly all the while. . . . The Lord Chancellor Jefferys son was this week married to the late Earl of Pembroke's daughter, by the Dutches of Portsmouth's sister. . . . The French fleet lying before Argeire [Algier] and throwing in many boombes, they sent word to the Admirall that if hee desisted not, they would send him in a canon the French Consull; but hee persisting, they made good their promise, (I suppose his head only). And the French, by way of revenge, having 30 Argerene slaves aboard, cutt them in peeces, and layd their quarters on planks, and by the waves floated them towards the towne."

28 July 1688.— . . . "Judge Rotheram is gon Oxford Circuit, and tooke one Mr. Burgess, an Non-conformist minister, with him as his Chaplin. This Burgess is a man of extraordinary ripe parts, and before the Circuit hee was wished by the Judges to pen a short tract for instruction and admonition to such criminalls as should be condemned, in order to their preparation for death, to bee distributed by him as there should be occasion." There were several Puritan preachers of the name of Burgess; the one here mentioned was probably Daniel Burgess, whose chapel was burnt in the Sacheverel Riots, 1710.

31 August 1688. . . . "The great preparations of the Dutch, and equipage they are at present . . . hath much amazed their neighbours. We heare his Majesty is in much forwarded in his navall preparations, and so intent upon that affaire, that the carpenters work Sundays, seamen are pressed at the Downs that are come home from voyages, and the drums beat up for volunteers towards the waterside and about Tower Hill. Judge Allibone lies in state." Allibone was one of the Judges who supported the King in the trial of the seven Bishops.

15 Sept. 1688. . . . "There hath bin great noys about a captain tossing the Mayor of Scarborough in a blanket, who hath bin at Windsor to make his complaint, and is now at London."

6 October 1688. . . . "Notwithstanding this concussion of affaires, its to bee wondered that the people are no more affected with the danger; their countenances making but little shew of the dark apprehensions they should have of this expedition." The intended expedition of the Prince of Orange is alluded to; and the above passage was written probably in a spirit of covert irony; as both Laphorne and his correspondent evidently sympathized with the Whig party.

13 October 1688. . . . "I doe not perceive the people here to bee under any great consternation, notwithstanding the impendent menace of an invasion."

27 October 1688. . . . "On Sunday last, two Irish soldiers, passing the street by St. Michael's church in Corn[h]ill, and some roguish boys abusing them, the soldiers being strangers, run into the church for protection, and cried out 'Mercy, mercy.' But the people, being frightened, mistooke it for 'Massacre, massacre,' and so the whole congregation was put into disorder, and some harm received by it."

10 November 1688. . . . "This day the King's artillery set out towards the West. As for other news, you cannot now expect, because of the King's last proclamation, only perticular occurrences. Wee may mention two citizens of London are lately dead, vastly rich, viz. Alderman Jefferys, the Tobacconist, or Smoaker, who left an estate behind him of three hundred thousand pounds, but neither wife nor child: the other was Alderman Lucy, who died very rich, and left only one daughter. There is a passage very remarkable relating to this discourse; viz. that those two gents were intimate frends and associates in their life tyme. The first, Jefferies, lay a considerable tyme sick, and some two or three days before his death, as hee lay in his bed, had this expression:—'I wonder,' quoth hee, 'that never a one of my servants is at leasure to take in a funerall ticket for mee to goe to Alderman Lucy[s] buryall.' Now Lucy being then in good health, they thought it was only a delirious whim: but Lucy (tho then well) fell sick and dyed within 2 or 3 days after."

11 December 1688. . . . "All the goodes at Whitehall are removinge as fast as they can bee carried out;

"and the mobile are at their old work, of pulling downe Mass houses, and making bonfires of the materials; and what mischeafe they will doe of this kind this night, God knows."

15 December 1688. . . . "Wee heare the King is at Rochester, and wilbe at White hall tomorrow; and the Prince of Orange is at Windsor. The Lord Mayor [Sir John Chapman], when the Lord Chancellor was taken and brought before him, fell into a strange epileptick fitt, and scarce yet recovered."

29 December 1688. . . . "Some in towne who came from Calix [Calais], say they saw there the Bishop of Eseter, and Lord Cheife Justice Herbert, with some others who lately left London. The Lord Chancellor [Jefferies] is close confind at one Mr. Bulls, a warders, but allowed pen, inke, and paper, which hee hath much used. The Tower church was very full on Sunday, in expectation to see him, but he came not out. . . . On Sabbath day last, the Bishop of St. Asaph preacht before the Prince; after which, his Highness received the Sacrament from the Bishop of London, with an exemplary devotion." This letter is of great length, carefully written, in an almost feigned hand, and without signature; probably, the times considered, by way of precaution.

9 March 1688 (9). . . . "The King and Queene being proclaimed at Bongay, a market towne in Suffolke, on Thursday, ult. Febr., being market day; at which solemnity great joy being expressed, on the next morning, being Fryday, a fire broke out, and consumed all the towne, out [except] one house. And its said that immediately before the fire a gun was heard to goe off, and then the fire broke out at 4 different quarters of the towne at once. It seemes the towne was of some bignes, for they say there were 2 churches in it." The Topographical Dictionaries say that this fire occurred in 1688: the right date, no doubt, is here given. Not one house only, but one small street, was saved.

13 August 1689. . . . "But, Sir, I should deale unkindly with you, upon so short a notice, to goe off and not recomend another to serve you in my roome; and therefore (if you shall thinke fitt) doe propose unto you one Mr. Bagford, of whom I have had much experience, and thinke him very fitt to bee employed by you. Hee was a tradesman, but his genius has run much in collecting books, and of late yeares has bin assisting to auctions, and hath bin employed by Mr. Powle, Master of the Rolls and Speaker of Parliament, to collect books for him. Hee is a man that will expect no great matters from you; what you allow me, I know will content him. I have proposed it to him (if you shall think fitt), and he thankfully imbraceth it." Mr. Laphorne was at this time contemplating the acceptance of some appointment, which would have rendered it impossible for him to continue to act as agent and book-collector for Mr. Richard Coffin. The present extract deserves attention, as containing a very early notice of the once famous John Bagford, the typographical antiquary, who died, an inmate of the Charter-house, at Islington, in 1716, aged 65. The Bagford Collection now forms an item in the Library of the British Museum.

28 October 1689. . . . "I just now come from Mr. Oliver Cromwell, son to the Protector Richard, and grandson to Oliver. Wee met about common affairs; viz. debtor and creditor, wherein I chanced to bee concerned, and are to meet againe on Munday."

22 November 1689. . . . "This day, we hear, was committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms, Sir Richard Haddock, Sir John Parsons, Alderman Sturt, and Fenn, Victuallers of the navy, for their miscarriages therein; it being affirmed, that in the bottoms generally of the casks of beere were found gutts, and a sediment like coprice etc. Wednesday night, some rude and frantick fellow cutt off from the King's picture (hanging in Guildhall) the hand, scepter, and crowne, and the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, have issued out their order for 500*li*. reward for a discovery."

20 December 1689. . . . "On Wednesday night, being the anniversary of the King's coming into London, was celebrated with a representation in effigie, by a procession through the City, with a 1000 lights to Temple Bar, of the capitall ministers and officers that governed in the late King, James, tyme. Alsoe, a triple galloes was carried before them, and sate up within Temple Bar, which was the period of their perambulation; and after some cerimonies and discourses, the criminalls in effigie were hung up, about 11. or 12 altogether, and by it a monstrous bonfire.

"But the triple tree chanced to crack and fall; and then gallows and criminalls, with stocks, pillories, whipping postes, etc., were all thrown into the flames." 8 March 1689 (90). . . . "Its reported that Lady Ogleby is taken at Chester, in man's apparrell, going with letters to King James. I was informed that the minister of Crooked Lane in London, silenced by the late Act, pulled another out of the pulpit, the last Lordes Day, that was appointed to preach, which caused much disturbance in the church."

28 March 1690. . . . "Wee heare from Ireland, that there are discontentes amongst the Irish about the measures of governing. Terconell truckles under the King of France, but Colonel Searsfeld refuses so to doe, and each have partys dependant on them. . . . The Irish used some of our soldiers very barbarously, strangling them in their quarters, and burying them in the church with their cloathes on, for concealement; for which there is now an inquisition, and its hoped they will have their reward."

26 April 1690. . . . "On Saturday last, being Easter Eve, about 7 at night, 2 powder-mills, with a vast quantity of powder, was blown up at Hackney, and about some seaven persons killed, all French, one of them a minister. It shook . . . houses, some at least 3 or 4 miles distant."

3 May 1690. . . . "Yesterday were brought to town from Malden, a maritime towne in Essex, 7 ruffians going over to France, to carry out some intregues for King James; and being at sea, were frightened back into Malden by one of our men of war; on sight of whom, they drew [threw] a great many papers overboard, but some others are found about them, that discover their designe."

24 May 1690. . . . "There was lately a poor woman, a laborer's wife, neer us, delivered of 4 children at a birth, 3 lived to be baptised, named Faith, Hope, and Charity; which being presented to the view of the Queene, she gave the parentes tenn guinees."

8 June 1690. . . . "This being our Sessions week, one Crowne, that was indicted last Sessions for bringing seditious papers and commissions from King James, some of them found in a key; it was then put off to be tryed this Sessions, and yesterday he received a faire tryall, and the Jury were all for finding him guilty, but one man; who indeed is a man of good quality and understanding, and freind to the present government; but was not cleerly convinced as to this poynt: so that the Jury were together all night, and for ought I know till now, it being 4 post meriden. I wish wee had had some such in our late King's Juryes, when the state bloodhounds were pursuing their prey."

14 June 1690. . . . "Crone that was tryed, is condemned, and sentenced to be executed on Wednesday next. Yesterday was the generall execution-day, and one criminall hanged at Newgate, for killing his keeper. 7 others were carryed in carts to Tyburne, but a reprieve came, and brought them all back alive. Mr. Ferguson is bayled, and Gadbury, the astrologer, seized for dispersing King James's Declarations; and what is remarkable, its sayd Mr. Partridge, in his last yeares Almanack, hath prognosticated his fate this yeare."

21 June 1690. . . . "3 of the 7 malefactors, brought from the gallows that day sevendnight were yesterday carried thither againe and executed; its sayd, for great rudeness and insolent carriage in the prison since the reprieve."

28 June 1690. . . . "Its sayd Crone, that was reprieved, hath made greate discoveries, but would doe nothing till he understood Gadbury, the astrologer, who is also in custody, had broken the ice."

16 August 1690. . . . "On the Lord's Day, Dr. Burnett, Bishop of Salisbury, preached at Winsor Church in the afternoone, where I was present, in the crowd of a numerous auditory; and it so happened as the Bishop was in his sermon, a pillar of one of the gallerys, by reason of the press, sunck, and the gallery cracked; which caused greivous skreeks, and crying out that all the church was falling down, which put the people into great consternation and horrible confusion, but no great hurt don."

29 August 1690. . . . "I suppose you have heard of a great contest lately in Oxford, about the censuring of a booke said to bee written some tyme since by Dr. Bury, Rector of Exon [College], as being repugnant to the Church hierarchy, etc.; and that they doomed it to bee burnt by the hangman, and have suspended the Doctor as to his place. Hee is now in London, and its supposed hee will by way of appeale

"make a vigorous defense for himselfe. The booke is titled 'The Naked Gospell.'" The case of Dr. Bury has been previously mentioned.

13 September 1690. . . . "Yesterday, being execution day, 6 men were executed, and of them the two most notorious, criminalls for robbery, who behaved themselves insolently when tryed, in the presence of the Judges, as they were in their march to the gallows, called for wyne, and drank King James his health, and sleighted the Ordinary's exhortations at the place of execution, and bid him and the people goe home and give obedience, and send for King James, or else they were reprobates. By this you may perceive of what race some of his advocates are."

20 September 1690. . . . "Wednesday last was the day for our monthly Fast; and the people generally did shut up their shops, intending to goe to church; but the church dores were shut, the clergy having determined the fast to bee at an end; but it was strictly kept by all the Nonconformists at their meetings."

18 October 1690. . . . "On Sunday morning broke out a fire near the timber windmill on the Bankside in Southwork; which consumed 8 houses and much timber. . . . There hath bin a discourse of earthquake in many places. . . . and its sayd that severall partes of this towne have bin sensible of these shakings, as in Quen Street and in the Inner Temple etc."

25 October 1690. . . . "There was a day or two since a notorious highwayman taken in Southwark, called 'the Goulden Farmer.' When discovered, hee went through the streets with his pistolls in his handes, on foot, and a great while the people looked on, but afayrd to touch him; till at last, some butchers ventured, with some others, and yet hee killed one, and hath dangerously wounded severall others."

1 Nov. 1690. . . . "There was lately a difference in a coffee house neer Grays Inn, betwixt the Lord Wemm (Lord Jefferies son) and another gent, and both wounded; but its said, Lord Wems' black bitt a peece of the other gentleman's face of, upon which the gentleman thrust his sword in his back, and some say [he] is dead."

22 Nov. 1690. . . . "Severall women of late have bin taken violently away, being fortunes; as a coachmaker's widdow in Long Acre, worth ten thousand pounds, by a Frenchman; also, one Madam Wharton, a young lady, worth 1500*li*. per annum, by one Mr. Camfeild, a son, or nearly related, to the Earle of Arguile; but the women are both retrieved." As will be seen in another passage, it was Sir John Johnston, who abducted Mrs. Wharton.

13 December 1690. . . . "A poor widdow woman, not far from us, on Munday last, hanged herselfe. It seems she had, in her husband's life time, lived in a pretty plentiful condition; but being now reduced to poverty, its conjectured was the basis of this temptation. Shee had severall children, and 2 lived with her, a boy of 9 and a girle of 11, yeares old. The girle could say but little, only thus; that the day the fact was don, there was a strange man in black with her mother, and had discourse with her, but she knew not what it was. But when hee went away, shee heard her mother say to him, 'But what then wil become of my poor children?' To whom he replied, 'Take you noe care of them, they wilbe provided for'; and that his voyce was hoarse. This relation I had from a respectable citizen, who, being constable, was present, and heard the examination. Its a wicked age, and what this black man was, God knows." If only from the disclosures in these letters, we must agree that it was a wicked age; and the suggestion in the last two lines savours of the superstition of the age as well.

18 Dec. 1690. . . . "The Spanish Flota is safely arrived at Cales [Cadiz], with vast treasure from the Indies, thirty thousand millions [!!] of mony; narrowly escaping the French men of war, which lay ready to swallow them up. Captain Phipps hath ontred and taken considerable of the French territories in the islands of the Canada, in the West Indies. . . . There were 22 condemned to dye this Sessions, and 4 remarkable: the Goulden Farmer, a notorious robber, who killed 2 men, to bee executed in Fleet Street, and hanged in chayns on Bagshot Heath, Sir Johnston, for stealing Mrs. Wharton, to bee executed at Queen Street end in Holborne etc." Mr. Lapthorne's geographical knowledge seems to have been at fault, in this instance, as to the "islands of the Canada, in the West Indies."

26 December 1690.—"Sir John Johnston, that was confederate in the stealing Mrs. Wharton, on Tuesday " morning last was carried in a large mourning coach to Tyburne, the horse following the coach, to receive the corps after execution. Hee made a strenuous speech at the gallows; such it seemes, that proved so insinuating to the foolish mob, as to draw teares from their eyes, insomuch as, I was told by some, that a little prompting would almost have prevayled with them for a rescue; which seems credible, in regard they afterwards offered violence to Mrs. Wharton's lodgings, by breaking the windows, etc. But the next night, about 7 of the clock, hee was carried from Fleet Street in a horse, attended by 30 coaches, to St. Giles, to be interred, and its sayd the Earl of Arguile immediately followed the horse."

9 January 1691. . . "A young gentlewoman was taken in the night by the watch at Charing Cross, and put into the Round House, and before morning hanged herselfe with her garter . . . One that came, in St. Clement's Parish, to a baker's to lodge, by the name of Captaine Wickham, a gent of a good estate in Oxfordshire, made his will, and gave 1500 li. to the baker and his wife, and gave severall other legacies to . . . but a stranger to the baker; and within a fortnight after hee came, dyed; and upon inquisition, the deceased proves to bee a cheat, Captain Wickham being alive."

7 February 1690 (1). . . "The Lord Danby having supped in the City, and riding home late at night in a hackney coach, in the Strand, there being a scuffle betwixt his coachman and page and some foot passengers pretending to be press-masters, my Lord, coming out of his coach, drew his sword, and the constable and Mr. Watche coming into the fray, the Lord Danby was knockt down, and was after very ill. This business was lately under examination, but what is don in it, I yet know not."

14 February 1690 (1). . . "On Saturday last were seized at the Castle Taverne, in Paternoster Rowe, a collection of pictures and relicts, and rare poices of antiquity, belonging to the Lord Melford, who is with King James in France; they are appraised to the value of some thousand pounds."

28 February 1690 (1). . . "There is much chat of late about a demoniack, or gentlewoman possessed, in Duke Street, neer Covent Garden. There have bin a Colledge of Theologists to make their observations on her; and in order to consult about a way to restore her, (viz.) Dr. Hornick and others. There will a voyce sometymes blasphemously speake within her, when her lips and teeth are shut, and this very audible; and sometymes, sitting in her chayre, she will visibly bee lifted up, together with her chayre, a great distance from the ground, no one touching the same, that can be perceived. I heard this morning that Major Blackmore, once a great man in the West, and who hath bin for some tyme governor of St. Helena, is brought hither prisoner for some offence committed there in the executing his government. Its sayd Sir Cloudsly Shovell is marryed to the Lady Norborough."

7 March 1690 (1). . . "Many persons have been taken up, as suspected, at clubbs; amongst others, Sir Roger L'Estrange, which is out on bayle . . . I heard Captain Roope, the governour of Dartmouth, read a letter from a justice of the peace in our cuntry, that examined the English prisoners that came over in a ship to Dartmouth lately from St. Malloes; who declared upon oath the miserable condition the French were in in those parts by reason of the extremitie of the warrs. Their grounds lay waste, and the grapes rotted on the vines, because the inhabitantes would not bee at the charges and paines of pressing them; the cuntry very sickly, and could not hold out much longer." The cultivation of the grape for wine, about St. Malo's, could hardly have been a matter of the importance here represented.

14 March 1690 (1). . . "From Ireland, wee have this remarkable in its kind; that 3 of our soldiers deserters going off, were met with 4 deserters coming from King James to our army; who brought our deserters back, and since (they) are executed. The deserters that came from the Irish, say that there is a great difference arisen in the army, betwixt King James' men and the French, about some mony that Terconell had to pay the army, which hee claymed as his own, and so deteyned."

22 March 1690 (1). . . "There is much pressing for seamen; but wee heare of a fleet of 400 collyers coming into the river; which will, we hope, lessen the price of coales, that have bin excessive deare all this winter."

4 April 1691. . . "Wee have had severall strange relations of its (Mons) being releived, but the first proved a trick . . . occasioned by one in the habit of a military man, riding, as it were, post through the City and about 6 at night, and when before the Old Exchange, as posting by, cryed out, Mons was releived, and King William in it. But this, as its supposed, was a contrivance of some betterers, that had wagers about it, in order to some surprize to retrieve their bettes." Mons was surrendered to the French on the 7th of April. This story reminds us of a charge made of conspiracy of a similar nature about 120 years later.

11 April 1691. . . "Thursday night last, a terrible fire broake out at Whitehall in the stone gallery, and hath consumed a great part of that pallace. It began, its sayd, in the Duchess of Portsmouth's lodgings, now preparing for the Duke of Gloucester, occasioned by a mayd's burning off of a single candle from the pound, insted of cutting it with a knife; and so, going hastily away before the flame extinguished, caused the eruption of this great conflagration . . . I hear the Duke of Gloucester's lodgings are burnt down, as also the Lord Devonshire's, the Lord Overkirk's, and a great part of the Earl of Monmouth's."

18 April 1691. . . "On Thursday last, one Mr. Brabant, once an officer in the Custom House, and put out lately, as hee sayd, by Sir John Lowther, one of the Comissioners of the Treasury, and a Privy Councillor, came to Sir John Lowther, and reproved him for what hee had don, and held a pistoll to him, and told him, if hee would not fight with him, hee would shoot him. Upon which, Sir John went with him to Hide Park, and they fought; and its sayd Sir John hath received two wounds, but not mortall, but Brabant is fled."

25 April 1691. . . "This week was our Sessions, where were convicted some cittizens for giving great sums, to have greater repayed, if Dublin were in the possession of King William and Queen Mary at a certaine time; and fined 200*l.* each, and to be imprisoned till paid." Their disloyalty consisted, in fact, in betting against the probability of Dublin being out of King James's possession at a certain future date.

16 May 1691. . . "This week was sentenced at the King's Bench bar a parson of Buckinghamshire (being convicted at the Assizes in the cuntry, for drinking King James's health, and confusion to King William and Queen Mary; hee had taken, notwithstanding, the oaths of Aleageance and Supremacy,) to pay 100 marks, and [be] caryed before all the Courtes in Westminster Hall with a labell on his hat of his offence, and the like to bee don at 3 Assizes in the cuntry. Hee sayd, by way of excuse, hee was drunk (a sweet apology for a devine). . . Its sayd, Dr. Beveridge, elect for Bath and Wells, refused to take it, and so is put out of being the King's Chaplyn." He became Bishop of St. Asaph in 1704.

31 May 1691. . . "There was tryed this weeke an experiment of a new engine for diving for wreck; the inventor exposing himselfe in person on the first essay. Tis invented, in order to fetch up Spanish bullion and coyne, that was cast away in Scotland in the Spanish invasion (1588), the guns and some gould having already bin taken up. The figure which incloses the diver, is in the shape of a bell, and an expedient to convey with it barrells of ayre for the diver's better subsistance in the deepe."

6 June 1691. . . "It is much admired here that Monseur St. Ruth is sent over from France to bee Generall there, who hath bin so monstrous a persecutor, that even the Papistes themselves cry out against him; and its thought his coming thither will cause a difference betwixt the French and the Irish; tho' its sayd hee hath shewed some kind of lenity towards the Protestants, since his arrivall there."

13 June 1691. . . "I am informed Spelmans Councils (Concilia), both partes, are printing in one volume; the 2d part is very scarce, and of a prodigious price, by reason it was burnt in the Fire of London."

21 June 1691. . . "They say there is an express that our King hath sent a challenge to the King of France to fight him, and that if he do not come out into the feild with his army for that purpose, hee will breake on upon him with his."

4 July 1691. . . "There is just now a fray betwixt the Whitefriars men, called 'Alsations,' and the gentlemen of the Temple; the Templers shutting up the back gates against them, they have broken them open,

"and some part of the wall. The Sherriffes are gon to quiet them. . . . Since the above written, I understand that the Sherriffe, with his posse, hath vanquished the White Fryers Raparees; but with the loss of one of his officers, who was killed, and severall men wounded. But the pest are fled from their quarters, and about 70 of them sent to the severall prisons within the gates."

11 July 1691. . . "Major Diamond, that brought news of the taking of Athlone to the Queene, was since murdered by three Irish Papists, as hee was talking with a gent in the Strand, in the middle of the day. One of them was presently seized, who discovered the other two."

18 July 1691. . . "It is sayd that the Lord Dartmouth was taken into custody for having some of King James his plate, and a tryall hath bin against the Lord Castlemaine for keeping some plate which hee sayd hee had when he went his embassage unto Rome, and that, since, King James gave it him; but it appearing at the tryall that it was after the abdication, the Jury found 3,000 li. and odd money for the King."

25 July 1691. . . "Here hath bin lately acted a very sad tragedy by a young gent of Grayes Inn, viz., one Mr. Bird, who was a student there, and lived in his father's chambers. His father was bred an attorney in the North cuntry, and called lately to the bar in his old age. Hee had gotten a great estate, but many children; was very fond of this his eldest, and took much care to breed him up, so that he might be eminent in his calling, and so marry him so as to have a portion that might contribute to the advancement of the younger children. The young man came not long since from the University of Oxford; where it seems, unknown to his father, hee married with the butler's daughter of the Colledge. She came lately to town, big with child, lodged near Hyde Park. This match being discovered to the father, made him outrageous in anger towards his son . . . which took so much impresson, as is supposed, on the son, that on Fryday was sevensnight, in the evening, hee wrote a letter to her, to meet him in some feild neare Hyde Park; wher being mett, she was murdered by having her throat cutt by him; his letter to invite her there being found in her pocket, and nothing taken from her, nether rings, clothes, nor mony, her husband was fourthwith apprehended, who had newly changed his clothes, but his handes cut and bloody." From other letters we find that he was finally hanged at Tyburn, and his body buried in the church of St. Andrew's Holborn.

15 August 1691. . . "Last Sunday night, a young gent of the Cursitors Office, about 10 o'clock, going through Grayes Inn Lane, passing by two inhabitants there, one a shoemaker, having a pipe in his mouth, without any provocation, broke his pipe with his gauntlet frence glove; and the man only saying it was not faire, hee drew his sword, and run him through the body, and killed him; for which hee was by Mr. Buck, a Justice in Hatton Garden, sent to Newgate." From other letters we learn that, being sentenced to death, he was taken to Tyburn in a coach, and hanged; and that his body was buried in the church of St. Andrew's Holborn.

22 August 1691. . . "This morning two granadere soldiers were shot to death in Hyde Park, according to martiall sentence, for mutynny against their officer, a leiftenant."

29 August 1691. . . "Wee are informed that Sir Jc. Knight, the Mayor of Bristol, and others, should send a message to Exeter to the Judges at the Assizes, to let them know that if they came to Bristoll that season, they could not be enterteyned at the charges of the city; and that the Judges returned answer that, as to theyr enterertainment, they would not dispute it, but were resolved, according to course, to come there, and doe justice."

13 Sept. 1691. . . "Mr. Axe, Sir William Portman's servant, whom I knew well, lately dyed, and by his will hath given 1,000 li. to incourage some mathematicall studients to finde out the true Longitude, for the benefit of navigators."

17 October 1691. . . "Its sayd that when the bonefires and ringing of the bells was, for the surrender of Lymericke (the next day being the late King James' birthday); after the clock stroke twelve, which was the beginning of the other day, a fresh bonfire was made in some part of the town, and the bells rung out afresh, according to a secret reservation

"under the umbrage of the other celebration, which was taken notice of."

7 November 1691. . . "Wee have gotten a new way of expressing our solemnity; viz., instead of bonfires, illuminations; that is, all the windows towards the streets, and bell oonies, fitted with candles burning, which makes the night like day."—In reference to the Gunpowder Plot, and the Anniversary of King William's landing, 5th of November.

20 Dec. 1691. . . "It is sayd that General Ginkle is to bee made Duke of Buckingham." De Reede Ginkle received only the Earldom of Athlone, in the Peerage of Ireland. In the same letter, mention is made of a Mr. Richard Opie, once of Plymouth, but afterwards of Basingstoke, being found drowned near London Bridge.

30 January 1691(2). . . "One parson Smith, Reader, or Lecturer, of Chelsy, was yesterday comitted (by the Lord Cheif Justice Holt) being accused for being concerned in many robberyes, and assisting highwaymen."

6 February 1691(2). . . "On Thursday there was a tryall in Westminster Hall touching a wager about Lymericke being in King William's possession by the 3rd of October; whereas there was but a part in possession. But there being present at Westminster the Lord Athlone, Lord Cutts, and General Talmash, et al. [and others] who gave evidence that tho part were then only delivered in possession, yet they might, according to the articles, have had all, but for some reasons which they alledged in Court, they thought fit not to take possession of all till some days after; and so the verdict was given against the Jacobite party, there being many wagers for many thousand pounds, depending on the same basis."

21 February 1691(2). . . "Altho the thaw begun a week since, yet on Thursday there were some that passed over the Thames without a boat. The last Lord's Day there was an Italian sermon preached in the afternoone at Guildhall Chappell, and I heare it is to bee continued weekly there as a Lecture, to gratifie some of our London merchants. Dr. Woodruffe read at the same time the service of the Church of England in the Italian language. . . . On Saturday night last, or rather, Sunday morning, one Mr. Lawes, the schoolmaster of Maydston in Kent, being at an inn and drinking with Serjeant Wyatt's son, upon some quarrell, Lawes killed Wyatt, and fled for it. Its sayd that his Majesty, understanding that the Countess of Marlborough continued with the Princess of Denmark at the Cockpit, signified his dislike of it; upon which, the Princess, not liking the message, not only dismissed the Countess, but also hath acquitted the lodgings herselfe, and is gone to Syon House. On Thursday, at 10 in the night, a gent was killed with his own sword by two watermen in St. Paul's Churchyard; the watermen fled, and are not taken."

5 March 1691(2). . . "There was a duell fought lately, as we heard, by the Lord Berolay and Collonel Greenville, about Madam Temple, one of the Mayds of Honor; but no great hurt don, saving, its sayd, the last received a slight wound. There dyed one morning the last weeke, as hee was making himselfe ready in the morning, one Mr. Panceford, aged twixt 60 and 70."

9 April 1692. . . "Murders have been committed almost every day this weeke last past. On Thursday last, one Captain Baker was killed at Whitehall; and a day or two before, an officer of the army or navy killed the Bedle of St. Clementes in the middle of the afternoone; for which hee is in Newgate. Also, one Mr. Thornecroft, a Cursitor, killed Mr. Cansdall at Hide Park in a duell, and one Mr. Cooke, of the Six Clerks office, I suppose, is now on his tryall for killing a man a while since in the Strand. Harrison, that hath layne some tyme in Newgate, accused for murdering Dr. Clench, hath bin tryed, and found guilty of the murder, and, amongst other remarkable circumstances, one was the evidence of a semestress who possitively proved that hee bought the hanchirchief of her, which was found about the Doctor's neck." Dr. Clench, a physician, on pretext of being summoned to attend a patient, was strangled in his coach.

16 April 1692. . . "Yesterday was executed Harrison, in Holborne, for the murder of Doctor Clench. He was convicted by a multitude of concurring circumstances, tho' he denyed the fact at last. His tryall and execution will come out, fd. a part, which you shall have."

23 April 1692. . . "Its sayd that some gentlemen from France landed lately at Rumney Marsh; three were taken, two made their escape, but one is in custody. Its also sayd they have some treasonable papers in the ship; its sayd likewise that the last night a sham declaration from King James was posted up in this towne."

30 April 1692. . . This day were installed the call of new Serjeants, and Sir J. Treby made Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. The formality of walking was dispensed with, by reason of the exceeding wet weather; they being carried in coaches. The motto of their rings is, 'Lex domi, arma Jovis.' Mr. Row, who should have bin one, lyes a dying; hee is our countryman. Mr. Smyth, of the Midle Temple, refusing it, Mr. Bonithan, a Comissioner, had that vacancy."

7 May 1692. . . "The busines about the French their discent on us is so confusedly talked of, that I know not how to methodize it for a relation; but that they designed it, as also that they were encouraged to it by some Bedleme Protestantes as well as Papistes here, I doe not doubt; but our fleet being out, and we awake, its supposed they are prevented this tyme. Its sayd wee are encamping about Portsmouth; a 100 carriages past through the City this day towards that place." A few days after this, the French fleet was destroyed in the battle off Cape La Hogue.

14 May 1692. . . "On Munday, a malitia for Middlesex appeared in arms before the Queenes Majesty in Hide Park; and the day following the malitia for London did the like, the Lord Mayor in a military habit on horseback, being their leader, which her Majesty took very kindly. The last night was a great search for horses in and about the towne; and an imbargo, by order of Councell, for the stopp of all horses whatsoever till further order; and its sayd the Councell will not sit till Munday; so that, thes being Whitesun Eve, many gallantes are hendred from travelling to Epsom and other places of pleasure; as well as many others from journeying about their lawfull occasions. There was a search made for Sir John Fenwick (on the proclamation) the last night, who narrowly escaped out of his bedchamber; they seized his breeches, etc. Yesterday there having been a hearing in Chancery before the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seale, of a cause between the Earle of Clare and the Earle of Thanet; after which, the two Lords casually meeting in Lincoln's Inn Feilds, had a ranconter, both being wounded, but not mortally."

21 May 1692. . . "Since my last, the Lord Lucas, Lieutenant of the Tower, seized the Lord Midleton, late Secretary to King James, and another lord, and one Sir — Forrester, in a widow woman's house at Wapping; who are committed to the Tower, and she to Newgate. Mr. Ruytter, that married the Lady Chichester, was seized and committed to Newgate, but is out on bayle." The letter then gives news of the recent victory, on the 19th of May, off Cape La Hogue.

2 July 1692. . . "There was lately apprehended one Cole, a plumber, and committed to Newgate, upon suspicion to be one of the murderers of Dr. Clench. Hee was accused by the widow of one Miller, who lately dyed in Cole's house, and supposed hee was poisoned by Cole; and Miller told his wife, a little before his death, that Cole and himself were the two persons that murdered him."

18 August 1692. . . "Our paquet boat from Holland is blown up, 100 persons in it, 60 perisht, and 40 floating on the water, their lives were saved by an Ostender."

3 September 1692. . . "I saw Captaine Salisbury that brought the expresse of a party of our army being gon towards France. Hee was in the paquet boat that was blown up, and was thrown 3 fathom under water; but as hee got up, his head struck against a plank, and plunged him down againe as deepe as before; but getting up againe, hee took hold of the plank, and so was saved by the help of the Ostender, that they thought to bee their enemy; hee told mee hee saw the man executed that was tryed for designing to kill King William."

10 September 1692. . . "I tremble almost to relate it—That on Thursday last, about 2 in the afternoone, there happened a generall earthquake, or shaking of the earth, throughout all London City and suburbs, and about 20 miles as some say, others less, others more, in the circumfereng counties. I must confesse

"I, nor no one of my family, perceived the shaking, tho most of my neighbours did, and even ran out of their houses . . . only I had this syntome, which, upon discourse, most others had; viz., a giddines in my head at the time: the stroak, or shock, lasted not above a minute, or, as many say, but an halfe minute. . . . What controversy God intends further with us, is only known to Himselfe. P.S. The superstructure of the buildings not only shaken, but the ground itself; and those that were in vaults and cellars affected with the shock, as well as those in chambers. Even those which sate on the benches on the Royall Exchange were shaken, as they sate."

17 September 1692. . . "I perceive by your letter you felt not the earthquake in your parts. It was felt in the King's camp, also at Amsterdam and Ostend, and in most places within 60 miles, and further, about London."

24 September 1692. . . "I was last night with Mr. Petit, that assisted Dr. Burnet in searching the Parliament Rolls, when he wrote the Reformation, and hath now Mr. Pryn's place of Record Keeper of the Records in the Tower; and, hee tells me Sir Robert Cotton hath for some tyme given him the free use of his Manuscript Library, where hee hath bin for some tyme very busy." William Petyt's Collection of MSS. is now in the Inner Temple Library, and has formed the subject of notice in a previous Report of this Commission.

15 October 1692. . . "I had a short view of Sir R. Cotton's Library. It is scituated adjoining to the House of Commons at Westminster, of a great highth, and part of that old fabrick, but very narrow, as I remember, not full 6 feet in breadth, and not above 26 in length; the books placed on each side, of a tollerable highth, so that a man of an indifferent stature may reach the highest. Over the books are the Roman Emperors, I mean, their heads, in brass statues, which serve for standards in the Catalogue, to direct to find any particular book, viz., under such an Emperor's head, such an number. . . . I had not time to look into the books; some relicts I took notice of, besides the books; viz., I saw there Sir H. Spelman's and Buchanons pictures, well don; also, Ben Johnson's and Sir R. Cotton's, and in the staires was Wickliff's. I had in my hand the sword of Hugo Lupus, Earle of Chester, that came in with the Conquest. I saw Pope Eugenens his Bull to the King of England; the originall in a faire Greek character in parchment, anno 1500 [?] and od yeares. Instead of wax seales, were the Cardinalls' heads in metall, that subscribed it. I also saw Dr. Dee's instruments of conjuration, in cakes of bees wax almost petrified, with the images, lines, and figures, on it."

29 October 1692. . . "The last night, a young gent, one Mr. Chester, heire to a good estate, went in alone to supp at the Fountaine Taverne in Covent Garden, upon a dozen of larks; and sending the boy for a tart to close his supper, when the drawer returned, (he) found him dead, having shott himself with a pistoll. A gent of my acquaintance saw him dead this morning."

2 December 1692. . . "This day sevennight, in the night, certain ruffians broke into the house of Mr. Johnson, the Lady Russell's Chaplain, who in King James' tyme, underwent almost the same punishment with Dr. Oates; and assarscinated [? assaulted] him in his bed, (and) wounded him; but the people of the house crying out, the watch prevented murder."

11 December 1692. . . "This week hath bin boystrous and tempestuous for the most part; and hath had its sutable effect on mens minds, for there have bin 3 or 4 duells fought here, within 3 or 4 days, viz.—The Lord of Banbury fought with his brother in law, Captain Lawson, and killed him, and is now on his tryall at the Old Bayly. Also, one Young, a young clerk, fought with another clerk, one Graham, of Clifford's Inn, the later was killed; and yesterday the Lord Mohun fought with a player, and killed him. . . . I am told that 15 smiths were seized at once in Kent Street in Surry, working on instruments to breake houses, and clipping and coynning of mony:—Montfort the player, was, in reality, murdered, in cold blood, by Lord Mohun."

28 January 1692 (3). . . "I have bin at the cane shop, and made an essay for a cane; I wish you had mentioned the length, for canes being exceeding deare, the shorter will come much cheaper; so that I have resisted the buying one till Mr. Pyne's return, because I would have his advice thereon. . . Yesterday being

"our execution day, many highwaymen were executed at Tiburn; and Whitney, the ringleader, was carryed in a cart with them, but had his reprieve at the gallows, and brought back on horseback, behind one of the Sheriffs' officers."

4 Feb. 1692 (3). . . "The grand highwayman, Whitney, notwithstanding his reprieve, was executed at Cow Crosse, near Smithfield, Wednesday last."

11 Feb. 1692 (3). . . "Wee have a strange distemper, that of late years raings much amongst us, which was rare amongst our ancestors; but some are of opinion that it was more frequent then, but not so much taken notice of; it is a diabetes. Some languish away in it sooner than others. Some have had it upon them 2 or 3 yeares. I met with one that told me hee had had it 2 yeares, and thought it would end his dayes. The Lord Brooke died of it, in 6 weekes sickness."

18 February 1692 (3). . . Mr. Young, the parson, that hath bin formerly convicted for forgeries, and stood in the pillory, according to sentence, stood 3 times during this week in the pillory for forging writings, and endeavouring to bring the Bishop of Rochester [Thomas Sprat] and others, in a plott against the government."

25 February 1692 (2). . . "Yesterday morning was taken upp a man in ecclesiasticall vestmentes out of the Thames, dead, being wounded in severall partes of his body. Some say its the schoolmaster of Camberwell."

14 May 1693. . . . "One Captain Winter was condemned the last Sessions for killing a man in a ryott, 12 months since, in White Fryers, and having gotten a reprieve for some dayes in order to a pardon, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen have bin at Whitehall to desire the Queen that he may be executed, and, the busines being debated in Councell, its said hee wilbe executed neer the place where the fact was committed."

27 May 1693. . . "I have bin in great consultation with myselfe, what periwig to send, since you did not give particular order about the size. I have been veiwing the shoppes, both in London by the Old Exchange, and in the Strand, and find that short perriwigs, which they call 'bobbs,' are generally worne this summer, and especially by young gentlemen; so that I could not meet with one large periwig of faire haire ready made, fitt for your son's wearing, and therefore send the short one, which is very fashionable, and I beleive will become him; it must bee combed out before it bee worne, it cost 22s. . . . Against the winter, if you give directions, I will see that a larger and more generous one shalbe made."

10 June 1693. . . "A woman of the play-house, being heard to sing a beastly lampoon on the Queene, an officer was sent to seize her, and in her lodgings were found severall of the libells, and one of her own handwriting. She was offred a pardon if she would discover the author, which refusing, she was tryed, and sentenced to be exposed on the pillory at 3 severall places."

18 June 1693. . . "Yesterday was executed Anderton, the printer, at Tyburne, with 6 other criminalls: and Mrs. Lettice, the player, stood upon the pillory in the Strand, for singing and publishing a beastly lampoone against the government."

22 December 1693. . . "Wednesday last, being execution day, was a sad instance:—2 young gentⁿ (the sons of Colonel Breame, a gent of quality of Kent, their father dead,) were caried in a coach to Tyburne, and there executed, for killing an alehouse-keeper in Fleet Street. Here is of late a great discourse touching a kind of miracle that cured a lame French girle, about 13 years old, the case thus.—The girle, when about halfe a yeare old, dropt out of her father's arms, and put her thigh and one toe out of joynt, which could never bee replaced. On a Lord's Day in November, as she was in a deformed posture hobling long the streets, the boys mockt her; at which, being disgusted, when she returned home, acquainted her mistress therewith, who advised her to bear it patiently, for it could not be holpen. Presently after, the girle, looking into the New Testament, and reading the place where our Saviour performed such cures, sayd she,— 'Its a wonder those Jews would not all beleive our Saviour, and come and bee healed; if hee were now on the earth, I would goe to him, and make noe doubt hee would heale mee, as he did some in those days.' Upon which, at the very instant her bones snapt, which was heard by the "people in the roome, and from that time her dislocated limbs are set, and she perfectly well. The Bishop of Salisbury, and many persons of quality, have been to see her. I spoke with a surgeon, who was sent by Doctor Ridgely, an eminent doctor of 80 yeares old, to see her, and the surgeon gives this account according to the relation, and believes it."

13 January 1693 (4). . . "Saturday night last was a great entertainment made for the Prince of Baden at Kensington, where was dancing and gaming, and a great supper; and banquets of sweetmeats all common to such as were admitted in to bee spectators: and I was informed by one that was present, that hee supposed there could not be less than one thousand persons: but it was 5 of the clock in the morning before some of them could get home."

17 February 1693 (4). . . "The Commons have fallen upon many excellent pointes lately, whereof one is, that there bee a middle punishment for highway men, betwixt hanging and aquitting, viz., exposed to labour; and that workhouses bee set up for that purpose, and also for imploying beggars and poor people." The first germs of systems which have since been adopted.

10 March 1693 (4). . . "Yesterday was convened before the House of Commons a parson of Essex, for saying that Sir — Marsham, one of the Knights of that shire, was a pentioner; for which hee was ordered to be taken into custody, and so remayns."

31 March 1694. . . "I suppose the news of the dreadfull storme at Gibleator [Gibraltar], mentioned in the Gazet, cam to you before these. One Sir — Boveree, an eminent merchant of London, had 20,000*li*. in the fleet, and, its said, 3 sons; and hee being ill before, the news hastened his death."

6 April 1694. . . "Wee have news from Shrewsbury, of a horrid murder there committed on the body of one Captain Brown, who hath an estate there, and not long since lived at Sea-Hoe, in London. The murder was committed by 3, one of them his servant, for the love of 20 li. Its said an apparition made some signs of this murder to some of his freinds." The above mode of spelling the then recently-named locality of "Soho," deserves notice.

14 April 1694. An account is given of the death, in that week, of Mr. Wilson (generally known in those days as "Beau Wilson") in a duel, fought in Bloomsbury Square, "with one Mr. Laus [Law], a Scotchman." According to Mrs. Manly, in the New Atlantis, Wilson was supported on a scale of magnificence, for some years, by one of the mistresses of Charles II. His apparent opulence, as compared with his prior poverty, with the mystery as to the source from which it was derived, is here also alluded to. Law escaped from Newgate, after being found guilty of murder, eventually to start in France the Mississippi Scheme, the explosion of which convulsed that country. Some biographies state that Law was born in 1681; but it is evident from this letter that an earlier date must be assigned for his birth.

29 April 1694. . . "A gent., on Thursday last, that came lately out of the country, told a friend of his, my acquaintance, and in my hearing, this passage; viz., that the last Lord's Day, on his journey to London, hee being at a gentleman's house in Bucks, went with him to his parish church, where hee heard a very good sermon on these words— 'Wherefore walk circumspectly, etc.' and that in the sermon hee gave them caution to take care of being deluded, etc. That this gent, discoursing at dinner about the sermon, his friend told him the occasion of the sermon was remarkable; for that another minister of the Church of England, not far from the place, reputed always to bee a sober man, had lately pretended to visions, and declared that it was revealed to him, that at Whitsunday our Saviour would personally appeare on the earth, which would cause a strange change, etc. But there is this very odd circumstance; hee advised the people to provide for a Judaicall sacrifice of oxen, sheep, etc., and sayd this, as a precept, was also revealed to him. Now this is contrary to Scripture; and this gent sayth that 6 or 7 families of this minister's congregation, that preached this sermon, were gon with their goodes and treasure to this prophet's place of residence. I have made inquiry, and others doe affirme that they have heard of this enthusiast."

2 June 1694. . . "Here is a report that the Bishop of Hereford [Dr. Gilbert Ironside] was present and caused to be raised and obliterated an inscription which was on the tombe of Collonel Birch, some

"while since dead; which is like to cause great animosity."
30 June 1694. . . "One Mr. Cary, that was partner with Sir Thomas Cooke, and one Mr. Guy, a bookseller, were chosen Sheriffs, but upon their refusall and desire to fyne, there is to bee speedily another election." The future Founder of Guy's Hospital is here meant.

7 July 1694. . . . (mutilated) "of the Society of the Middle Temple against the Benchers, and some indecent actions committed; as throwing down the Benchers' tables and locking the Hall doore, and keeping them out of commons. This hath been represented to the Lord Chief Justice Holt, and yesterday both sides were convened before his Lordship at Serjeant's Inn; where, on hearing the matter, his Lordship, like a man of courage, sharply reprimanded the young gent[s], and told them hee would take care that they should bee severely prosecuted and punished."

4 August 1694. . . "One thing may be remarkable to hint, viz., of a feald near Meadston in Kent not tilled these 3 or 4 yeares, which beares this year, without plouwing or sowing, a faire crop of wheat, and Mr. Freke that came lately from Tunbridge, in my hearing sayd, hee saw a crop from one root which bore 58 stalks, I mean, eares; and that it hangs up as a monument there."

27 October 1694. . . "42 people in the beginning of the night, in Acton rode, near Tiburne, were stript by robbers on the highway, and turned into a common feild . . . Lord Clancarty has made his escape out of the Tower, being a prisoner of war there."

10 Nov. 1694. . . "There is an estate of between 2 and 3,000 li. per annum fallen lately, besides a great personal estate, to the widow and relict of Major General Ludlow, who dyed in Switzerland; and there being one Mr. Thomas, a young man of about 30 yeares of age, a leiftenant in the King's army, who pretended clayme to some part of the estate, she hath lately married him, shee being 62 yeares of age." Major General Ludlow died at the age of 91.

11 January 1694 (5) . . . "Sixteen children, about the time of the late thaw, being upon the Thames, near Stanes, the ice breaking, were all drowned; and four of them were one man's children."

18 January 1694 (5) . . . "Its also reported there are 3 goldsmiths of note, one of Lombard Street, that are in Newgate, upon the account of clipping [the coin]. . . . Two remarkable passages happed not many dayes before the Queen's death; an eagle shot by Mr. Hart, son to Sir Percivall Hart, in Kent, on Christmas Day last; and an old lyon refusing meat and dying, alike before the Queene. Both I have from good handes."

26 January 1694 (5) . . . "The Parliament, as I am informed, were yesterday upon laying a taxe upon all christenings, weddings, and buryalls."

6 February 1694 (5) . . . "The Lord Admirall Russell, at Christmas last, at his cuntry appartments at Cales [Cadiz] made an extraordinary feast; 750 dishes, the first course an ox, roasted whole; 12 hogsheds of punch in a fountaine, in which was a little boy that was in a boat swimming on the punch sea, and delivered it to the companie. The Admirall had 800 men to wait on him: this was very amazing to the Spaniards."

23 February 1694 (5) . . . "This day sevensnight, Mr. Guy, Secretary to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, (a man deemed to be worth at least an 100,000*l.*, and a member of Parliament), was committed to the Tower for being faulty in his office, where he still continues." It deserves notice, that Thomas Guy, the bookseller, already mentioned, who afterwards (1721) founded Guy's Hospital, entered Parliament this year, as member for Tamworth, but at a later date.

9 March 1694 (5) . . . "At Hartford, one Mr. Hynton (the son of a woollen draper in Paul's Churchyard), a young man of about [2]2 or 23 yeares old [was condemned] for robbing on the highway. Hee hath bin formerly tried for other robberies, and transported; but being so notorious and audacious, according to speciall order of the judge, hee was executed the same day sentence passed, for feare of an escape. At Winchester was condemned an Alderman's son, of that towne, as I take it, for robbing on the highway; and also one Captain Clark, (late governor of Cows in the Isle of Wight) for either clipping or coyhing."

15 June 1695. . . "On Munday night last, being the anniversary of the Nativity of the Prince of Wales, some lewd heroes assembled at the Dog Tavern in Drury Lane, and there caused a bonfire to bee made, and had a drumme and other military musick, and drunk, and inforced others that passed by to drink, the Prince of Wales health. But the mob soone got about them, and broke the vintner's windows, and would have don more damage, had not mony been given to them to prevent it. One of them is taken, and severall others of the ringleaders discovered."

29 September 1695. . . "One Saunders' Chamber was broken open in the Inner Temple; where they found 50 li. of money clipt, and the clippings, and all the engins and instruments for doing it: but hee, not being within, hath fled for it, and since, its sayd, one Berry (a gentleman's son of good quality) of the Temple, is taken into custody for the like crime, and, its sayd, Saunders is a Somersetshire gentleman's son."

7 December 1695. . . "Mr. Johnson, the minister that was so lamentably scourged, when Doctor Oates underwent his sentence, (or much about the tyme), hath obteyned the King's grant, as I am credibly informed, for 1000 li. in reedy mony to pay his debts, and 300 li. per annum, during his and his son's life."

28 December 1695. . . "Mr. Littlebury, the famous bookseller, dyed on Christmas Day, of a cancer in his mouth, at the 74th yeare of his age . . . Wee have news here that a parson neer Exeter is in prison there for clipping and coyhing; it is a sad case, if it bee so, that a minister of the Church dare commit such a fact."

15 February 1695 (6) . . . "I have placed my son in Pemebrook Colledge, the Society being under the care of the Bishop of Bristol, Dr. Hall, who is Master, and constantly resident. . . The house, tho it bee but a litle one, yet is reputed to be one of the best for sobriety and order."

28 February 1695 (6) . . . "The Earle of Castlemayne hath surrendered himself, and Goodman, the player, is in Newgate; who is his Dutchess' favorite. Mr. Porter, in the proclamation, being in custody, they say hath made a large discovery of the whole plott."

7 March 1695 (6) . . . "I was told this morning that Sir Roger L'Estrange is dead in Newgate; also, that the Lord Cutts seized a Frenchman in an inn in Smithfield, who had a muster roll of the English and others, engaged and in pay here to carry on this conspiracy."

2 May 1696. . . "On Tuesday last, the Venetian Embassadors made their entrance. Their garbe was black gowns, laced; the representation was very stately, both at the entrance and the audience, which was last night. I heare Prendergast, who first discovered the plott, hath his pardon, 3000 li. in money, and 500 li. per annum."

16 May 1696. . . "The graziers will not bring their cattle to towne, by reason of the scarcity of good mony. The gooldsmiths faultur much in bringing fourth their best mony, and would still put the people off with clipt. Severall of them have been lately arrested, though men reputed very wealthy. Guineas are scarce, but wee hope a litle tyme will make great alteration for the best."

11 July 1696. . . "There was lately one seized neare the Isle of Shipay in Kent, a man in a beggers habit, that had for some tyme gon about a begging; but one night at the house were hee lodged, bespoke a joynt of mutton for supper, and talking somewhat more pertly than beggers use to doe, the people of the house discovering it to the neighbors the next day, after he went out, persued him and tooke him, and, upon examination and search, found he had quilted about him 500 guyneas. So hee is now in Maydston Goale, upon suspition to bee the Lord Mountgomery, in the procl[amation]."

12 Sept. 1696. . . "A great many clippers and coyners are apprehended, and mills seized for coyhing; and a proclamation is issued against one Captaine Wintour, a gent of about 800 li. a yeare, in Gloucestershire; and severall other his accomplices, charged with the same crimes."

17 October 1696. . . "My neighbour, Dr. Williams, is made Bishop of Chichester, and yesterday the drums, hoeboys, and musick, saluted him."

24 October 1696. . . "Yesterday, ten malefactors were executed at Tiburn, some for clipping and coyhing; one for carrying news into France, formerly a

31 October 1696. . . . "Wee have abundance of rotten sheepe here, and never more plenty of mutton. I was told this morning that sheepe were sold in Smythfeild the last Fryday (some) for 1s. 6d. a sheepe."

30 January 1696 (7). After given an account of Sir John Fenwick's execution on Tower Hill. . . . "Hee sayd nothing to the spectators, scarce looking on them, but delivered his speech to the Sheriffes, which is since printed, and here inclosed. Hee behaved himselfe well composed enough, as far as I can understand, that did not see him."

6 February 1696 (7). . . . "I have lost a very old acquaintance since my last letter, viz., Mr. Slingsby Bethell, once Sherriffe of London, who dyed Thursday last, being 84 yeares of age. Hee was a man of great knowledge and understanding, and had bin a great travailler. I sate a good while with him the weeke before his death, and (he) discoursed with mee very hartily, and brought mee to the dore." Slingsby Bethell was noted for his independence and for his frugality; the last quality closely approaching to meanness. This is referred to by Dryden in his Absalom and Achitophel,—"Cool was his kitchen, though his brains were hot."

20 Feb. 1696 (7). . . . "There hath bin some discovery made lately by an astrologer of some treasure hid by

"the Jesuites in the Savoy, and many have bin yester-day and this day set on work to digg, and a guard attending them; but its thought will signify nothing."

27 February 1696 (7). . . . "Since my last, one Mr. Dekins, who married Sir — Bucknall the great brewer's widdow, fought in Hyde Park a duell with his son-in-law, Mr. Bucknall, and killed him; Dekins is in custody."

7 August 1697. . . . "Here goes a come-call relation of a strange match between Lady Kingston, a widdow to the Lord Kingston, an Irish lord, and a leiftenant of the King's foot; that she, having a mynd to marry him, sent him a challenge to meet at a tyme and place to fight, not naming the challenger, and hee coming there, tho' she was unknowne to him, and looking about for the challenger, at last saw a lady in a mask, who told him she was the person hee looked for, and then told him the occasion, and after some discourse carried him off in her ca[rriage], and in a very few howers married him; and its sayd, hath 1500 li. per annum estate, and worth 10,000 li. in money. . . . There [was] about a weeke since a great hubbub in the Temple, [from] an attempt to arrest Mr. Burlace [Borlase] of Cornwall, a gent of the house, resisting the officers, and tooke him from them; many were wounded in it, and some of them have since had a conference with my Lord Chief Justice Holt about it; and the Templars justify their defence, having [as] they say, antient preveledges for so doing."

FIELD, M.A.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE REVEREND EDMUND
FIELD, M.A., LANCING COLLEGE, CO. SUSSEX.

It would gratify many an owner of an old county hall to be able to exhibit, for the illustration of his familiar story, such a collection of documents as the records which have come to the hands of the Reverend Edmund Field, of Lancing College, through his connection with the extinct family of Barker of Lyndon, in the county of Rutland. The writings are in fact the collection of a county family, that emerged from the ranks of prosperous, gentle yeomanry in the earlier years of the 17th century, and after attaining the fullness of its dignity and influence under the later Stuarts died out in the present reign. The fittest resting place for these memorials would be the old muniment-room of the stately house which Sir Abel Barker built towards the end of his life in his native county; but they are not misplaced in a scholar's studious chamber to which the sea breeze comes over a fine sweep of Sussex downs. Comprising the patent of Sir Abel Barker's baronetcy (conferred in the 17th year of Charles the Second); the Pardon under the Great Seal which the Rutland squire obtained from the Crown for his reluctant compliance with the revolutionary government, to which he had yielded from prudential motives; a dozen or more of such commissions as accumulate quickly in families whose chiefs are required to fill offices of dignity in their counties; and some 150 deeds (the earliest being of the time of Edward II.), at this time useful only to the local annalist, tracing upwards the history of small patches of land; Mr. Field's collection contains also Sir Abel Barker's Private Letter Book, the large number of letters (covering more than 150 years) set forth in the present report under the title of the Barker Correspondence, and the Papers relating to Taxation and Public Affairs in Rutland and the adjoining counties in the 17th century.

(a.) *Private Letter Book of Abel Barker, afterwards
Sir Abel Barker, Bart., 1642 to 1665.*

Containing 308 copies of letters, written to 80 persons whose names are given in full, and several persons whose names are only indicated by initial letters; this manuscript book is from the first to the last line in the handwriting of Sir Abel Barker, of Hambleton, co. Rutland, who was high sheriff for Rutland in the year 1646, and was created a baronet, September 9, 1665. Sir Abel died in 1679, leaving a son by his first wife, Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Burton, Baronet, of Stockerson, co. Leicester, and two daughters by his second wife, Mary, daughter of Alexander Noel, Esq., of Whitwell, co. Rutland, and niece to Sir Jeffrey Palmer, Charles the Second's attorney-general. With the exception of 15 letters, the originals of the epistles transcribed into the Letter Book were all written by their transcriber for the maintenance of intercourse with his friends, or the furtherance of his numerous affairs of business. The collection of papers exhibits the career from early manhood to mature age of an equally active and courteous man who, whilst managing his own estate with vigilance, and farming lands which he held as the tenant of neighbouring proprietors, bestirred himself in the public business of his county, and found leisure for social diversions. Whilst some of the letters show their writer to have been a discreet and clever man of business in his own interests, it is seen from others that he was often required to act as the adviser of acquaintances who prized his judgment and yielded to his influence. Abounding with minute facts for the topographer, the letters afford many agreeable illustrations of the general state of manners and domestic life of our ancestors in the 17th century. That Sir Abel possessed scholastic attainments, unusual in country gentlemen of his period, appears from the facility with which he could pen a letter in Latin to his brother Thomas on private matters. The evidence is no less conclusive that he was considerate for the feelings and welfare of his dependents and less prosperous kinsmen. Of the 15 epistles, that did not come in the first instance from the transcriber's pen, one is a note from Sir Abel's sister Mary to her London dress-maker, and two are letters from his mother to Sir Thomas Burton, making overtures for her son's marriage with Sir Thomas's eldest daughter; whilst 10 were written by the last mentioned lady during the brief period, between her engagement to Mr. Barker and her death, which followed quickly on the birth of her only offspring, the second baronet. These 13 letters from three ladies, who may be regarded as fair examples of the homely and gentle womankind of our 17th century, are a welcome addition to a kind of literature that has strong attractions for the historical explorer, and is much less plentiful than he could desire. In cataloguing the papers of this interesting collection, I shall mention them in the order in which they appear in the Letter Book, where they are entered with an occasional disorder of dates, which indicates that they were not entered into the book immediately after the writing of the originals, and also that the transcriptions of the Letter Book were, at least in many cases, made from copies. The variations of the colour of the inks, successively used in the Letter Book, afford additional evidence that the transcriber was accustomed to enter the letters in "batches," from time to time, when a considerable interval had elapsed since the composition of the earlier papers of the latest accumulation of copies. Moreover, in forming his judgment of the oldness of the transcripts, the peruser of the Letter Book should not fail to observe that it is written throughout in precisely the same style of penmanship.

1. Abel Barker to the Worshipful Thomas Wayte, Esq., at his house in St. Jones in Middlesex. Respecting the extent of the Lordship of Tugby, co. Leicester, being part of Mr. Wayte's estate.—Hambleton, March 7, 1643. Mr. Wayte was one of Abel Barker's landlords.

2. Abel Barker to the Right Worshipful Sir Kenelme Digby, Kt. at his lodgings in St. Martin's Lane. Enquiring where Sir Kenelme would like to receive his next Lady Day's rent; whether in town or country; and if in town, at what place. The letter begins with "Noble sir," and ends with "I shall remain your obsequious tenant and humble servant." Hambleton in Roteland, March 9, 1642. Sir Kenelme Digby was another of the writer's landlords.

3. Abel Barker to Thomas Wayte, Esq. Concerning the assessment, in respect of "the 4 great subsidies," on Mr. Wayte's land in Keytharpe and Goadby, of which the writer is tenant. "I desire," says the writer, "you will please to take some order for payment thereof, because it would be prejudicial to me if my cattle should be driven at this tyme of the yeare." The writer describes himself "your affectionate friend and ready servant." Hambleton, May 3, 1642.

4. Abel Barker to his loueing brother Walter Goodman. Excuses himself for not meeting W. G. at Mr. Palmer's, as he has business at Lincoln Assizes. Hambleton, July 23, 1642.

5. Abel Barker to his much respected friend Thomas Leve, Esq. Asking for the loan of Mr. Leve's "legier booke of all the conveyances of Sir German Poole's land in Lincolnshire." The writer alludes to his lawsuit with a person named Winell. Hambleton, August 9, 1642.

6. Abel Barker to his good neighbour William Andrew, now staying "at one Mr. Webster's in the Bell Yard in the Strande." Entreating him to move Sir Robert Py to accede to the writer's wishes respecting certain land on which he wishes to build a house. "I have," he says, "greate occasions for building, and I would not overslip this summer." No date.

7. Abel Barker to the Right Worshipful Sir Kenelme Digby. Asking for a renewal of his term in the Woodfield, which he holds, as his father formerly held it, under Sir Kenelme. The writer regrets he has been referred, on the subject of his letter, to Sir Kenelme's cousin, James Digby. Signs himself "your faithfull tenant and humble servant." Hambleton, June 20, 1642.

8. Abel Barker to his loving friend Clement Dorman at Tugby.—Excusing himself for remissness in not calling on Mr. Dorman's lady sooner, as he has since his journey to Lincolnshire been occupied "with the welcome company of" his "kind landlords." The writer will see her ladyship within two days, when he hopes to "take the grounds of her." Hambleton, August 14, 1642.

9. Abel Barker to his loving friend and most faithful and obsequious kinsman, Thomas Collin. Regretting that his sister "will not allowe the matter" or admit of Mr. Collin's "dedication." The writer soothes his kinsman's feeling by remarking, "a reason is not always found in love." Hambleton, August 11, 1642.

10. Abel Barker to his loveing friend Mr. William Gladwine. Concerning 530 todde of wool of the value of 530*l.* sold by the writer to W. G. Hambleton, September 10, 1642.

REV. E.

REV. E.
FIELD, M.A.

11. Abel Barker to his worthy friends John and Francis Wayte in St. Jones. Applying for the payment of 10*l.* for which he sends a receipt; and stating that Mr. Gladwine has been instructed to pay the rent due to them from the writer. Hambleton, October 3, 1642.

12. Abel Barker to the same. Acknowledging the receipt of the 10*l.* The writer speaks of his recent negotiations with Sir Kenelme Digby, and informs his correspondents that their tenants at Tugby are dissatisfied with Browne, the collector of their rents, who hath insulted over them heretofore. October 31, 1642.

13. Abel Barker to his loving friend Mr. Thomas Sergyant. An urgent application for money. Hambleton, October 31, 1642.

14. Abel Barker to his loving friend John Favill. Respecting 100*l.* which the writer has ordered to be paid to his correspondent, and 240 trees which he has bought. "I doe now perceive," the writer adds, "the bargain wilbe harder unlesse my landlords please to amend itt, for beside that the place is worse seated than I imagined for the sale of wood, the distractions of this tyme are a cause that neither this nor any other commodity in our cuntry will give any money. Itt will not be amisse therefore (if they so please) to stay the cutting of the hedgerowes one yeare longer, untill these troubles be a little over for they will not now give any money." Hambleton, January 11, 1642.

15. Abel Barker to John and Francis Waite. Announcing his recent interview "with Mr. Burton the feodary, who sayth that soone as the tymes are more quiet, he will send the warrant;" and informing his correspondents that they must prove that Tugby is held in soccage, Mr. Burton being confident that "itt is held of the Abbey of Croxton in capite." No date.

16. Abel Barker to Francis Wayte. Sending a bond, due from a very sufficient man in payment of his rent; and speaking much of the hardness of the times:—"But truly, sir, the distractions are so great in generall and more particular in these partes wherein we live, y^e what money I had within me is all disbursed by reason I dare not keepe any by me, expecting daily when my house should be plundered, my selfe carryed away (as most of our gentry already are), and my goods bee exposed to the fury of the mercilesse troopers: and from this also doth arise as great an infelicity that hereby our commerce is detayned so that we cannot for any commodity we haue raise a considerable somme of money: and, if these tymes continue, landlords with vs must expect little or no rent, or if any very slowly, neither do I for my owne part expect to receive the one halfe of my rents due unto me." The writer begs his landlord to pay taxes in respect to which he is threatened with a seizure of his stock. No date.

17. Abel Barker to Robert Edmund. Reproaching him in severe but stately terms with his repeated breaches of faith, and enjoining him to keep his word on Friday next. March 15, 1642.

18. Abel Barker to his uncle, Ephraim Wright. A fervid letter in which the nephew, upbraids the uncle for "seizing upon 25*l.* of my money, and converting the same to your owne vse." After enumerating his several pecuniary services to his uncle, which give the delinquent's dishonesty a colour of signal ingratitude, the writer says, "That the tymes are ill for money, tis true, therefore the more vnreasonable that you who pay no rentes should detain my money who pay so many." He signs himself, however, "Your loueing nephew." Hambleton, March 30, 1643.

19. Abel Barker to Mr. Gyles Harys at London. A long and fervid letter in which the writer complains of his landlord's (i.e., Sir Edward Harington's) unfairness; and Mr. Harys is instructed to press upon Sir Edward the writer's title to compensation for "hauing bene compelled to pay 160*l.* purposely for his sequestred rents." Offering to refer his claim to the arbitration of Mr. Harys and Mr. Collin, the writer concludes, "but if he bee not pleased to doe this he must excuse me withdraweing from that landlord for whom I have suffered so much." Hambleton, December 24, 1644.

20. Abel Barker to Sir Edward Harington, Kt. and Baronet, at his house in Seething Lane, London. On the same subject as the preceding letter. After alluding to the occasion when he was "carryed prisoner to Beluoir castle," and compelled to pay the same rent once and again, and affirming that he has paid Sir Edward "more rente since these late distractions than all his other tenants in these parts," he concludes with "it is impossible for me say longer to continue tenant to your grounds unlesse some remedy be speedily applied." Hambleton, January 15, 1644.

21. Abel Barker to Mr. Harys. Another letter on the same matter of difference between the writer and Sir Edward Harington. Hambleton, Feb. 10, 1644.

22. Abel Barker to Mr. Gyles Harys at London. Respecting proposals about rent for the ensuing year for Sir Edward Harington's land. Mr. Harys is requested to urge Sir Edward to pay the monthly taxes due on the 20th of March, respecting which the writer has "bene much troubled by the troopers," and also another month's taxes, due on the 18th instant. Hambleton, April 28, 1646. Mr. Gyles Harys appears to have been Sir Edward's steward.

23. Abel Barker to Andrew Collin. About money claimed from Mr. Collin by his chapman, and money "paid in" to Sir Arthur Haselrig by John Canham for the writer's brother Goodman. West Smithfield, October 4, 1645.

24. Abel Barker to John Musson. Directing John Musson (the writer's farm-bailiff, and agent) to press a debtor, named Neuil, for money; and to go to Uppingham for his master's mare. The writer wants news about his wethers; has received 20*l.* of P. Woodcocke; sends love to his mother and sister. West Smithfield, October 6, 1645.

25. Abel Barker to John Musson. Containing instructions with respect to his sheep, and expressing much sorrow at his brother Goodman's mishap, which, it is feared, is irrecoverable. Sends condolences to his sister Goodman, and wishes his mother or sister to go and comfort her. West Smithfield, October 11, 1645.

26. Abel Barker "fratri suo plurimum dilecto," J. Barker. Concerning the writer's recent interview with Sir Edward Harington, with whom he is at issue on questions of rent and taxes. John Barker is requested to speak with Mr. Harys on the points of difference, and furnish testimony against Sir Edward's proposals. West Smithfield, October 13, 1645. John Barker died in 1648 (Vide Wright's "History of Rutland").

27. Abel Barker to his brother, Andrew Collin. Announcing his receipt of money due to his correspondent on bond from Mr. Robert Canham, and expressing his great sorrow at his brother Goodman's death. Together with other matters, the writer mentions the steps he has taken to secure for his sister Goodman the wardship of her son. In conclusion he says, "I desire you wilbe pleased that I may speedily heare from you the condition of our cuntry, and when you conceive I may with safety come doune, for I desire to doe my best with you in my sister's behalf." West Smithfield, October 17, 1645.

28. The same to the same. Announcing steps taken to secure to the widow Goodman the administration of her husband's estate, and to ascertain what money belonging to it is in Mr. Collin's hands. West Smithfield, October 20, 1645.

29. Abel Barker to John Musson. Containing orders about the flock; and desiring the steward to press George Larrat for immediate payment of 40*l.* West Smithfield, October 20, 1646.

30. The same to the same. About the writer's flock and business. John Musson is ordered to buy wheat, "and have it brined after the Lincolnshire fashion to avoyd blasting." West Smithfield, October 27, 1645.

31. Abel Barker to his brother Andrew Collin. About the receipt and payment of certain money, and his sister Goodman's letters of administration. West Smithfield, October 30, 1645.

32. Abel Barker to John Musson. Dealing with matters of his business in Lincolnshire, especially the flock, and mentioning his sister Goodman's affairs. West Smithfield, November 3, 1645.

33. Abel Barker "matri suae charissimae, Elis. Barker." Declaring his deep grief for his sister Goodman's affliction, and setting forth what he has done in her affairs. West Smithfield, November 3, 1645.

34. Abel Barker to Robert Mackworth. Announcing that he is appointed to pay Robert Mackworth 10*l.*, which the latter may receive at any time of P. Woodcocke at "the Adam and Eve over against Smithfields pens." Robert Mackworth's mother would not consent to give a larger amount, but is ready to buy and furnish a chamber for her son. Hambleton, January 1, 1645.

35. Anne Barker (i.e., Abel's first wife) "to the much honoured lady the Lady Frances Burton. These presents with my humble duty. Madame, I had wayted upon you before this to have given you thanks for your many favours to me, had not Mr. Barker's extraordinary occasions, and my owne sicknesses prevented me. But now that your ladyshipp is neare cominge into the countrey (which I am glad to heare), I hope you wilbe pleased to doe me the honor to see Hambleton, whither you and all your good company shall be very welcome to Mr. Barker and me; & in y^e meane tyme that you wilbe pleased to accept the presentation of our most humble duty to yourselfe & my father, & our best loue to my sister Jane, wishing her as happy a bride as, your dutifull and obedient daughter till death. A. Barker." Hambleton, June 26, 1647.

36. Anne Barker "to Mr. Augustine Crofts at the Nageshead in the Old Bailey near the pumpe there. Mr. Crofts, I thanke you for all your favours, and I would desire you to buy me twelue elnes of a deepe watchet sarcenett for a bed, and a sleight fringe for it of the same colour not aboue sixe yards and a q^t longe, and a small fringe for the topp of the bed. I pray you buy me fine dozen of small silke buttons and a sett of prynts suetable to this inclosed patterne and send them downe. And I desire you would doe so much as goe into Lumbarde Street to one Mr. Whyte a drugster, and buy me an ounce of his best parmacity and sexe graynes of beaten beazar. Mr. Barker will returne you the money by the first opportunity: he sent you the last by Mr. Woodcooke. I hope you have received it before this. I pray you remember my loue to my brother Caluerly if he be in toune. I should be glad to know how he doth and how his business goes forward, & thus with my loue to your selfe and your wife I rest, your truly lousinge friende." Hambleton, June 26, 1647.

37. Anne Barker to Mr. Augustine Crofts. "Mr. Crofts. My best loue remembered vnto you, with many thanks for your paynes in buying my things, all which I haue received by Sewell the carrier. I haue sent here enclosed a bill of exchange for your money. Mr. Woodcooke, who is to pay it, wilbe in towne before you can receive this letter. . . ." Hambleton, July 14, 1647.

38. Mary Barker (Abel's sister) to John Swinfield, in Drury Lane. "I haue sent you herewithall three elnes of black tabba, which I desire you would match with as much of the same bredth and goodnesse as will make me a gowne, & make it vp for me. You neede not make it so wyde as you made my tafaty gowne by a neale. You may lay vpon it such lace and in such manner as is the newest fashion. I pray you buy me as much tabba of the same bredth either grasse greene or willowe greene as will make me a petticoate & stomacher, and make it vp with as much gold and siluer bone lace of about 2s. 6d. y^e yard as will goe once about, and twice vp before. I would haue you likewise buy me a winter serge gowne of some pretty greenish color, and very good serge, & lay it with a pretty bone lace of gold and siluer as is most in fashion. I pray make me also according a riding coate & hood of scarlet serge, neatly trimmed, & let your wife buy me a plaine borgett of cuffs of the neatest fashion, & a love hood and a double curle hood of the largest sorte, and a doz. paire of bandstrings of severall sortes. Pray let her buy me 3 or 4 yards of bone lace of severall sortes, a yarde of a sorte, of about 5s. a yde. and 4 or 5 elnes of rybon of severall sorts, some silke & silver, and some tafaty. My brother hath appointed Edw. Scotney to pay you 10l., whom you shall finde at Adam & Ene in Smithfelde; the residue so soone as I shall know what it comes to shalbe speedily sent you by your loving freind, M. Barker." Hambleton, Septembris 10, 1648.

39. "Ex epistola respons, T. Burton mil. & bar. filius primogen' dat' apud Lond. mense Febr. 1645. "What you acquaint me with, if you like, I knowe nothing to y^e contrary but you have my consent. I am very willing to giue you all content you haue euer deserved well from me & I will expresse my loue to you."

40. Elizabeth Barker (Abel's mother) to Sir Thomas Burton, Kt. and Baronet. Worthy sir. The distance of place denying opportunity of personall conference makes me presume vpon so small acquaintance to make these lines messengers of my desires vnto you: which are y^e you will be pleased to graunt vnto my sonne that he may, with your consent & approbacion prosecute that affection which he beares to your daughter, Mrs. Anne Burton. Sir, if vpon enquiry made of him & his estate you shall vouchsafe to gratifie me with a lyne or two in answer hereof, I shalbe ready to give you suche further satisfaction therein as you shall desire from your humble servant, Eliz. Barker. No date.

41. Sir Thomas Burton to Mrs. Elizabeth Barker at Hambleton. Declaring approval of her overtures, but referring her son's suit to the wishes and judgment of his daughter, of whom he speaks proudly. "I thinke," he concludes, "you knew me in my youth, & I will be glad to renew that acquaintance when it please God I may come with safety into the countrey. In the interim I leave your desires to my daughter's will." London, Feb. 1645.

42. Elizabeth Barker to Sir Thomas Burton, Kt. and Bart., &c. Worthy sir, I haue hitherto deferred my answer to your letters, in respect you was pleased therein to referre me to your daughter's pleasure. But because I could not expect satisfaction from her in that which more properly concerns yourselfe, I haue presumed once more to addresse myselfe vnto you. Sir, I suppose by this tyme you haue informed your selfe of my sonne & his estate, & (if you esteeme him worthy) I hope I shall not seeme offensive in desireing what your pleasure is to give in porcion with your daughter, & what you wilbe pleased to require in joynture for her. The good character your selfe haue afforded her in your letters hath preuailed with me to aske no more then 1500l., & will I hope preuaile with you to grante no lesse. Sir, I shall heere be spareng in repeatinge my sonnes deserts in that I am his mother desirring rather you should know them from others, yet I haue had such experience of his obedience toward me in matters of lesse consequence that I doe not doubt of his obseruance in this. That former acquaintance which you are pleased to remember, I humbly thank you for, & shall accompt it my happinesse if I may become known vnto you in a nearer relation; in the interim my request is these lines may present my owne & my sonnes service to your selfe & your lady from her that desires to rest, your most affectionate friend to serue you." Hambleton, April 2, 1646.

43. Abel Barker to Mrs. Anne Burton, at London. Mrs. Anne, though the distance of place denyes vs our accustomed communication, yet the intercourse of letters may, if you be so pleased, supply that defect; wherein that you may not iudge me oblivious of our forepassed amity, I haue presumed to breake the ice, in confidence that you will not disdain to waite after, & impart the present condicion of our affaires: for change alter the minde of, yours you know howe & howe. Hambleton, June 25, 1646. (Shortly before the writer's marriage with the lady.)

44. Mistress Anne Barker "to the much honoured lady the Lady Frances Burton this present with my humble seruice. Madame, I am sorry that I cannot for the present wayte vpon you to giue you thanks for your many favours and bounty to me, but after Michaelmas I hope Mr. Barker will giue me leaue to come my selfe to present my humble duty to you, in the meane tyme you shall neuer be forgotten in the prayers of your dutifull & obedient daughter till death." Stockerson, August 15, 1646.

45. Mistresse Anne Barker to her noble Cousin Henry Heron, esq., Cosen, I am sorry I could not see you at my weddinge for truly I wrote for you, although I did not know the day certaine. I chose rather to haue had you lost your labour then to haue wanted your sweete company; but now my suite is that you would be pleased to come to Hambleton & solemnize my weddinge there. Pray doe me the fauour to present my humble duty to my Lord Cobham & my Lady & my service to your sisters when you see them. I hope you wilbe pleased to honour with your presence in truth your humble seruant & kinswoman. Mr. Barker presents his service to you. No date.

46. Mistress Anne Barker to her "deare sister Mrs. Jane Burton; Swete Sister, I thanke you for your paines in buying my things, but I rather wished you had danced with me in the dyneing roome then about the streetes, who infinitely wanted your company. I would intreate you to buy bone lace & satten for a gowne & kirtle, and a laced handkerchief & cuffs made & starched, & a loue hood, & I pray good sister doe me the fauour to buy for my father & my lady my Lord Cobham & my lady & your selfe & my cosen H. Heron & Walter Caluerly the best fashioned gloues you can gett. I pray doe you present my fathers & my mothers & W. Caluerlyes, and get Wat to present the rest together with Mr. Barkers service & my owne. Mr. Barker's man will giue you money for the gloues. Mr. Barker presents his seruice to you, wishing you

47. Mrs. Anne Burton to Sir Thomas Burton, Kt. and Baronet, at his house in the upper part of Holborne neare the Elme tree. Alluding to the miscarriage of letters; and observing that she sends him what he wants by the Uppingham carrier, whereas "but for the soldiers" she "had sent it by John Musson," she adds, "The foulness of the way & illness of the weather (though I thinke they was neuer worse) should not haue kept Mr. Barker & me from wayting vpon you & my lady before this tyme had we not liued in dayly apprehensions of the troopers whom we haue already quarteringe with vs almost these three weekes." Hambleton, December 23, 1646.

48. Abel Barker to his worthy friend Mr. William Sherman at Leicester. Announcing courteously that his sister cannot satisfy Mr. Sherman's desires, as "she hath disposed of her thoughts some other way." Hambleton, December 24, 1647.

49. Mistress Anne Barker to Mrs. Jane Burton. Deare Sister, I hope father hath received his leoparde safe which I sent by Uppingham carrier the last weeke. I haue made bold to sende my lady a countrey cake to chuse kinge and queene with. You shall finde the pea & the beane where two little stickes bee. Sister, I giue you many thankses for your many favours & paines for me, & so hoping my father and my lady bee in good health, and wishing you all a merry new yeare, I rest, your assured loueing sister.

P.S. Sister, Mr. Barker presents his most humble duty to my father & my lady, & his loue to your selfe. Hambleton, December 31, 1646.

50. Mistress Anne Barker to Mrs. Matilda Booth at Okeham. Excusing herself for not having waited on Mrs. Booth,—remissness for which the bad weather must be held accountable; and enquiring for the character of a maid servant. Hambleton, December 17, 1646.

51. Mistress Anne Barker to her sister Jane. Deare Sister, I desire you would doe me the fauour to giue the bearer hereof John Musson my little gilded trunke & my furre boxe, & if you can finde the cloth that went about the cake, sow it about the trunke. I thank you for your care of them. I shall now haue vse for them in the country. I pray remember my husbands & my most humble duty to my lady (my father, I thanke God, is very well) & our loue to your selfe & your seruant when you see him, wishing you all the joy & happinesse that could be expressed in a husband. I shall be glad to know if it be no prejudice to you, when your wedding is, though I can doe no other service if it be in London but to send you a bride cake. I pray you send my loue to Mr. Cokayne & the 2 Nans & to all others that aske how I doe. I hope I shall see my lady & you in the countrey this summer and haue the happinesse to enioy your company at Hambleton, where you shalbe very welcome to your assured lo. sister. Hambleton, April 10, 1647.

52. Abel Barker to his honoured father Sir Thomas Burton, Knight and Baronet. Declaring himself roady to serve one of Sir Thomas's friends; entreating to be tenant of any of his father-in-law's lands that become vacant at Fresby or Stockerson; and enquiring as to a high sheriff's obligations to make presents to judges on circuit, and to give fees to their servants. Hambleton, January 20, 1646.

53. Abel Barker to his worthy brother, Henry Caluerly Esqr. Thanking him cordially for a brotherly service. Hambleton, Jan. 20, 1646.

54. Abel Barker to Andrew Burton, Esq. Binding himself to become the tenant of Mr. Burton's "grounds" in Gunthorp, and signing himself "Your kinsman" "most affectionate to serue you." Hambleton, Jan. 20, 1646.

55. Abel Barker to his kinsman John Musson. Directing him to seek Laurence Staie, at the Crosse Keyes, St. John Street and at the Charterhouse, in order that a conveyance of certain land may be effected, and to execute other commissions. "It wilbe," says the writer, "requisite you sende me wordes so soone as it is knowne when our assizes are, what judges ride this circuit, and what company we must expect from London, that we may prouide accordingly. You must buy two fetherbed tickes and bolsters, and halfe a dozen yards of jacke chaynes, & halfe a dozen paire whyte gloves, and if there be any thinge else necessary that you can thinke on, which wee haue forgotten, you may buy it for your very loueing kinsman." Hambleton, Jan. 26, 1646.

60. Abel Barker to his much honoured father Sir Thomas Burton. Mentioning the provisions made by the writer for the entertainment of the judges, and asking to become tenant of certain of Sir Thomas's lands. "As for Sergyant Clerke," says the writer, "I appointed my undersheriffe to wayte vpon him. I hope I shall give them both content: I haue prouided the house they haue vsually lodged in with fuel & such like materials, & haue layd in beere & ale of myne owne. I intende to present them with a fatt sheepe & a calfe & some such like present." Hambleton, March 4, 1646.

61. Abel Barker to his much honoured friend Sir Thomas Hartopp, Knight, at Leicester. Sending a declaration concerning one Samuel Oates, a weaver, "who preacheth constantly in this country," for the consideration of the judges, who may see fit to issue a warrant for his arrest and conveyance to the assizes at Okeham. Hambleton, March 19, 1646.

62. Abel Barker to Sir Edward Harington, Kt. and Baronet, at his house in Seethinge Lane, London. Promising to send his Lady Day's rent by messenger to Sir Edward, as soon as the Assizes shall be over Hambleton, April 1647.

63. Abel Barker to his friend John Reene of Cherterton in Cambridgeshire. Asking where one Mistress Newman dwells, how she lives, "what her name is," and where she can be spoken with. Hambleton, April 27, 1647.

64. Abel Barker to Sir Thomas Burton, Kt. and Bart. at Holborne. About several matters of business. Hambleton, June 15, 1647.

65. Abel Barker to the Commissioners for compound ing with delinquents. Acknowledging the receipt of the Commissioners' letters, and announcing that proclamation, in accordance with their instructions, has been made in full market at Okeham and Uppingham, "the two onely market townes of this county of Rutland." Hambleton, July 24, 1647.

66. Abel Barker to John Musson at the Adam and Eve, in Smithfield. About payments of money and other affairs of business. Hambleton, August 14, 1647.

67. Abel Barker to his friend Mr. Peter Woodcooke at the Adam and Eve in Smithfield. Ordering him to receive of Mr. Johnson the sum of 100*l.* due on an enclosed bond, and to lodge the money with Mr. Lakin. Vppingham, September 8, 1647.

68. The same to the same at the same address. Instructing Mr. Woodcooke to pay the writer's Michaelmas rent and tithe (166*l.* 18*s.*) to Sir Edward Harington. Hambleton, September 22, 1647.

69. Abel Barker to Sir Richard Wingfield at Tickenote. Offering apologies for not having written sooner, and announcing that his sister, on hearing Sir Richard's proposition in behalf of a friend, finds herself "altogether unwilling to entertain that motion." Hambleton, November 27, 1647.

70. Abel Barker to Sir Thomas Burton Kt. and Bart. at Holborne. Announcing that, though Mrs. Barker's

M.A. Hambleton, December 1647.

71. Abel Barker to Sir Thomas Burton, Kt. and Bart. at Holborne. Announcing that Mrs. Barker has given birth to a son after a "short (if not too short) conflict." The young mother is "very hearty;" Mrs. Kneeland, the midwife, reports well of her patient; and the writer begs his father-in-law to be one of "the witnesses to the baptisme" of his grandson. Hambleton, December 26, 1647.

72. Abel Barker to Mr. Lion Falkener at Vppingham. Regretting that he cannot be present at a commission on Monday next, by reason of "the sad accident which hath befallen me." The writer describes himself "your sorrowful friend." Hambleton, January 14, 1647.

73. Abel Barker to the same at Vppingham. Respecting the business to be transacted by the commission, when the writer cannot be present. Hambleton, January 15, 1647.

74. The same to the same at Vppingham. Consenting to sit on the commission against a person named Tayler, at Leicester, on Thursday. Hambleton, January 1647.

75. Abel Barker to his honoured brother Henry Caluerly, Esq. at Caluerly. Announcing in pathetic language the birth of his son and the death of his wife; and begging for a continuance of his correspondent's affection "though it hath pleased God to take to his mercy the first occasioner thereof." Hambleton, January 17, 1647.

76. Abel Barker to his euer honoured father Sir Thomas Burton Kt. & Bart. at Holborne. Giving particulars respecting his wife's death; and entreating Sir Thomas to cherish love for his godson and grandson. Mrs. Barker's death is attributed secondarily to "her owne feares and the too much haste of a hard-hearted midwife." Hambleton, January 26, 1647.

77. Abel Barker to his uncle Mr. John Farbecke at Ketton. Beginning "Good Uncle, I have herewith sent you five yards of Spanishe cloth, which I desire you would be pleased to make into a suite and cloake, and weare it as a sad remembrance of her who was a great louer of you and me." The writer hopes that he may see his uncle in a day or two, and sends love to his aunt and cousins. Hambleton, January 31, 1647.

78. Abel Barker to Mr. Richard Munne, rector of Stockerson. Inviting Mr. Munne, the rector of Mrs. Barker's native parish, to attend at the delivery of her funeral sermon. "I desire therefore that I may haue your company at Hambleton on Tuesday next to heare a sermon and dine with me, and that you would doe me the fauour to invite in my name your neighbours of Stockerson to come with you. Onely because some of them perhaps are not provided of horses for such a journey, I desire you would giue to so many of the poorer families as to you shall seem convenient five shillings a peece and invite all the rest." Hambleton, February 5th, 1647.

79. Abel Barker to Mr. Andrew Butler, rector of Hallaton. Inviting him and Mrs. Butler, in regard for their intimacy with the writer's "deceased wife," to "meete the rest of her friends at Hambleton vpon Tuesday next to heare a sermon and dine with their sad but assured friend." Hambleton, February 5th, 1647.

80. Abel Barker to Mrs. Thomasyn Collin at Easton. Informing her that the funeral meeting at Hambleton has been postponed to next Wednesday, and asking her to bring "little Euerard Goodman along with her." Hambleton, Feb. 5, 1647.

81. Abel Barker to his "euer honoured brother Henry Caluerly, Esq. at Caluerly." Thanking Mr. Caluerly for expressing affection the writer's orphan infant, and for recommending a "gouernesse to initiate him in vertue," but observing that the boy's tender age makes it desirable that he should be left for a time in the custody of the nurse chosen by his mother. Hambleton, February 18, 1647.

82. Abel Barker to Mr. Lion Falkener at Burton, in Lincolnshire. Enclosing a warrant for Mr. Falkener's signature, and begging him to oblige Sir Thomas Barker by attending promptly to certain business. Hambleton, March 8, 1647.

83. Abel Barker to his much esteemed brother Mr. Hugh Watts at Leicester. Begging him to search the register of the town of Houghton on the Hill for the proof of the age of Thomas Heyricke, son of John Heyricke, who was born about the year 1619. Vppingham, March 25, 1648.

84. Abel Barker to his "loueing brother" Mr. Andrew Collin at Easton. Concerning 60*l.* which Mr.

Collin deposited for his correspondent with Mr. Lakin, and which the writer has lent to William Andrew of Hambleton. Hambleton, May 15, 1648.

Rev. E.
Field, M.A.

85. The same to the same at Easton. Instructing him to enquire at the Six Clerks Office what progress is being made in a certain business, and to "bring downe with" him "three latitats." Hambleton, June 3, 1648.

Though this letter and the preceding epistle are directed to Easton, their contents show that they were written to Mr. Collin at London.

86. Abel Barker to his "loueing sister" Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman at Blaston. Expostulating with her earnestly and at great length on her purpose to intermarry with her deceased husband's brother, of the half blood. After setting forth the sin and social obloquy attending uncanonical marriages, the writer implores Mrs. Goodman not "to impinge herself vpon such a rocke, which besides other discomodities will at once make shipracks of her conscience by the lawe of God and her estate and posterity by the law of man." Hambleton, May 30, 1648.

87. Abel Barker to Mr. John Wright, at the Six Clerks Office in Chancery Lane. Instructing him what to do in certain proceedings of law. Hambleton, June 7, 1648.

88. Abel Barker to Mr. Augustine Crofts, at the Naggs Head in the Old Bayly. Begging him to buy for the writer, and send to Hambleton by the Haringworth carrier, a "blacke mourning suite . . . the doublet of sattin and the hose of good Spanish cloth." Hambleton, June 28, 1648.

89. Abel Barker to the Honourable the Lady Abigail Sherrard at Stapleford. Avowing himself bound by his respect for her to do any service in his power for her tenants in Whissondine; but regretting that he can not accomplish her wishes concerning the levies for Sir Thomas Fairfax and Ireland. Hambleton, July 1, 1648.

90. Abel Barker to his "very loueing friend" Mr. Peter Sergyant at Malton. Sending a copy of Mr. Smithby's bill against them in Chancery, for Mr. Sergyant and his mother to peruse and then return to him. Hambleton, July 31, 1648.

91. Abel Barker to the same at Melton. Sending another copy of the same bill, and requesting to know by the bearer thereof what Mr. Sergyant and his mother intend to answer to it. Hambleton, August 10, 1648.

92. Abel Barker to his "honoured brother," Henry Caluerly, Esq., at Caluerly. A letter of affectionate assurances and courtesies. Hambleton, September 20, 1648.

93. Abel Barker to Mr. Henry Johnson and John Buston at Coggshall, Essex. Announcing that 150 todts of wool are on the road to them, and that 200 other todts will follow as soon as possible. The writer begs them to pay 500*l.* at the Adam and Eve in Smithfield on Friday, Nov. 10 next; and to lend him another 500*l.*, or procure a loan of that sum from "any of their neighbours hauing occasion to vse any money in the writer's country." Hambleton, October 10, 1648.

94. Abel Barker to the same at the same place. Advising them that he has sent them another 75 todts of wool, to be followed by another 50 todts, making in all 200 todts to be paid for at the rate of 2*9s.* per tod; and requesting urgently that the money may be paid punctually on Nov. 10, the writer having unusual need for money. Hambleton, October 24, 1648.

95. Abel Barker to Mr. William Haries at Keldon, Essex. Requesting payment of 8*l.* 10*s.* at the Adam and Eve, Smithfield, on the 9th of November next. Hambleton, October 24, 1648.

96. Abel Barker to Mr. Johnson and John Buston at Coggshall. Announcing that he has sent off the last 50 todts of his wool, containing 376 fleeces, and also 124 todts of his brother's wool, containing 97 fleeces. Hambleton, October 30, 1648.

97. Abel Barker to his "much esteemed" brother Henry Caluerly, Esq., at London. Regretting the failure of his endeavours to raise money for him. In talking with moneyed men he finds "them vnwilling to discourse they have any, much lesse to part with it these perilous tymes." Hambleton, October 30, 1648.

98. Abel Barker to his "euer honoured father" Sir Thomas Burton. Announcing that he takes the tythes of a close and meadow for six years at 3*4s.* rent. Hambleton, November 30, 1648.

99. Abel Barker to his uncle Samuel Barker, Esq. About the examinations of persons suspected of having stolen some of the writer's wool. Hambleton, April 9, 1649.

100. Abel Barker to Mr. Robert Gilbert at Melton Mowbray. Enquiring whether he can have assurance for the speedy payment of money due to him from William Trigge, or must enforce the bond next term by legal process. Hambleton, April 28, 1649.

101. Abel Barker to the "much honoured" Sir Edward Harington, Kt. and Baronet. Apologising for a delay in the payment of his rent, and making arrangements for the money. The writer also complains of the excessive taxes laid on his county, and speaks of the cost of the troopers quartered on him, in respect of Sir Edward's land. "Sir," he says, "I beleve Mr. Harys hath giuen you notice of 3 troopes of horse of Col. Lilburne's regiment which are come to quarter in this county. You haue foure for Gunthorps whom we quartered at Mr. Meakins at three shillings a peece per diem, which was as cheape as we could get them in respect of the dearness of these tymes. I haue since so farre preuailed with their captaine who quarters at my house that he hath eased you for the present and remoued them all to another place. I know not how longe we shall continue that, but my indeavour shall not be wantinge therein. They haue already coost 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*" Hambleton, May 5, 1649. The writer, for the first time in the letter book, signs himself "your affectionate kinsman" to Sir Edward, as well as his humble servant.

102. Abel Barker to Col. Thomas Wayte at London. Begging him to use influence to procure for the bearer, a poor kinsman of the writer, a vicarage in Leicestershire. Hambleton, May 10, 1649.

103. Abel Barker to Sir Edward Harington at London. Expressing great annoyance that his rent to Sir Edward should be again over-due, through Peter Woodcocke's remissness. "Col. Lilburne's troopes," he adds, "are still quartered in this county, & intende to continue. The captaine vpon receipt of your orders for their remouall into Worcestershyre, sent up to London to his Col. to know his pleasure, by whom he hath received orders from Maior-Generall Lambert that he shall not remoue without farther orders from him out of the country. We haue received of the troops who quartered vpon Gunthorp aboue 40*l.* so that your charge will not be more then 3*l.*, whereas if I had not taken that opportunity of the captaine's quartering at my house for their remouall, they would haue cost you 10*l.* before this." Hambleton, May 18, 1649.

104. Abel Barker to Sir Edward Harington at London. About rent and taxes. The writer regrets that his kinsman is offended with him, and attributes Sir Edward's displeasure to malicious report. Hambleton, May 30, 1649.

105. Abel Barker to Mr. William Gladwine at Cogshall in Essex. About wool and payments of money. Hambleton, Aug. 1, 1649.

106. Abel Barker to Mr. Augustine Crofts at the Naggs Head in Old Bayly. Requesting him to buy and send down by the Haringworth a "good handsome coat" for the writer's son who "is about a yeare and a halfe olde, and hath newly begun to goe." Hambleton, August 11, 1649.

72. Letter from Lady Barker at Hambleton to her husband, Sir Abel, "at Mr. Pawlins, a shoemaker in the Strand, betweene the Maypole and St. Clement's Church, London." Announcing her sore need of a fit mourning costume, wherein to render fit respect to the corpse of her uncle. "I would not if I could auoyd it meat the body of my unkell, by reson I haue nothing hansom to goo in, at such a time." May 16, 1670.

73. Letter from the same to the same, at the same address. Giving particular directions for her new mourning costume. "Let the goune," she writes, "be a plane black sattine, with a peake, and a pare of sad colered glufs, and a twisted role for my head, lased with blake satten, and one lase with a wealt abote the hem, and a pare of sleeves to it, which is the fashon for morning this sommer. My Lady Mackworth toulde me so. The Ladys at Wisindine are so; and Mrs. Mackit toulde me the like last Sondag, who cam on purpose to let me know the gentill man, her son was a prentis with, deed worke to the young duchis of Albemarle, and tow other duchis, and that he is a very fashonabel tayler." Hambleton, May 17, 1670. The name of the dead uncle is not given in these letters, but probably he was Sir Jeffrey Palmer, who died in the last-named year.

74. Letter from the same to the same, at London. Giving the gossip of the Hambleton neighbourhood. "I had," says Lady Barker, "a grate dale of compnay all the 3 halladays, which hath drunke us dry." Mr. Mathi's child has been christened, and a matron of Hambleton has broken her leg in playing at ball. Hambleton, June 1, 1672.

75. Letter from Walter Kirkham, Esq., to Sir Abel Barker. Making overtures for the marriage of Sir Abel's son and heir with one of Mr. Kirkham's kinswomen. "She is left," says the letter, "by her father, Sir Walter Walker, three thousand pounds; she is a handsom lady, and well bread." May 20, 1674.

76. Letter from Lady Barker to Sir Abel, "at Mrs. Slaughter's, a stationers ouer against Sergyant's Inne in Chancery Lane." Assuring the writer's "Dear Heart" that their son Thomas looks after the farms and business. Hambleton, November 25, 1675.

77. Two lists, in Sir Abel's handwriting, of things bought, or to be bought in London.

78. Small 12^o MS. volume, containing, in 283 pages of singularly small and accurate penmanship, Sir Abel Barker's private accounts from the year 1665 to the Michaelmas of 1677. Furnishing evidence that Sir Abel carried on his business of a large sheep farmer in his later years, this volume contains much precise information as to the expenses and profits of farming in the 17th century. It gives also the particulars of the baronet's domestic expenditure, whilst he and his wife and children maintained friendly relations with the first families of their county. From the "Accompt ux. M. Barker," it appears that Lady Barker's allowance for housekeeping was 200*l*. per annum, and that she spent no more than 50*l*. per annum in dressing herself and three daughters. The page of the record, headed "Remembrances," gives the full list of the writer's children, two of whom died in infancy. The account book gives also the particulars of John Musson's will and estate.

79. MS. newsletter from London. May 6, 1678.

80. Do. do. May 8, 1679.

81. Inventory of the chattels in Sir Abel Barker's house at Lindon, at the time of death, dated Sept. 30, 1679. Shortly before his death, Sir Abel moved from Hambleton into the house which he built on his estate at Lyndon.

82. Inventory of his plate.

83. Letter from James Armeston, Esq., to Christopher Dighton, Esq., Elm Court, Temple. Requesting Mr. Dighton to buy a sword for the writer. Hinckley, October 31, 1687.

84. Letter from Andrew Noel, Esq., to his nephew, Christopher Dighton. Requesting him to buy a present of sturgeon for Lord Ganesborough; and mentioning a false report that many "thousands of Roman Catholics" were up in arms about Northampton, by which news the country has been greatly alarmed. December 15, 1688.

85. Letter from Andrew Noel, Esq., the younger, to Christopher Dighton. Announcing that Lady Northampton has obtained for him the place of a gentleman usher to the King; and enquiring if he would do well to accept the office. Exton, March 1, 1688.

86. Letter from A. Noel, Esq., senior, to Christopher Dighton. On the same subject. Exton, March 4, 1689.

87. Letter from Andrew Noel, Esq., the younger, to Christopher Dighton, Esq. Announcing the death of Lord Ganesborough, and ordering new mourning to be worn in token of respect for that nobleman. Exton, April 2, 1689.

87a. Letter from Andrew Noel, Esq., the younger, to Mr. Hingle, "at the Hon^{ble} John Noel's lodgings, near 'the Hand and Periwig in the Pell Mell.'" Ordering clothes for the writer to wear on Lord Burleigh's birthday, and perhaps at the wedding of his (the writer's) brother. April 24, 1695.

88. Letter from Colonel Parsons to his brother-in-law, Sir Thomas Barker. Describing minutely the pomp with which the writer's wife (Sir Thomas's sister) was buried at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. December 25, 1697.

89. Letter from Thomas Clerke, Esq., to Christopher Dighton, Esq. Advising what steps should be taken for Mr. Noel's advantage in respect to his interests in Ireland. Dublin, March 19, 1697.

90. Letter from Richard Allin to the Revd. William Whiston at Lowestoft in Suffolk. In reply to Mr. Whiston's criticisms of the writer's opinions on certain questions of biblical chronology and theology. Whitchurch, November 29, 1699.

91. Letter from George Antrobus to the Revd. William Whiston. On the marriage of the writer's daughter with Mr. Whiston. Tamworth, June 12, 1699.

93. Letter from Marm. Alford to the Reverend Dr. Richard Bentley, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. Announcing that Dr. Bentley's "Patent was passed the 'Broad Seal, and perfected,'" and enclosing the "particulars of the Fees and Expenses in passing the 'Patent.'" Whitehall, June 26, 1707.

94. Letter from Richard Allin to the Revd. Mr. Whiston, at Tamworth, in Staffordshire. On questions of biblical chronology. Sydney College, August 29, 1707.

95. Inventory of the chattels in Sir Thomas Barker's house, at Lyndon, at the time of his death. Dated March 7, 1708.

96. Circular (dated May 1706) announcing the revival of a social club, called "The Honourable Order of 'Little Bedlam,'" and giving the list of the members of the association, together with the names they bore at the meetings of the society. "Whereas," runs this singular record, "the Right Hon. John Earle of Exeter, 'lately deceased, did in the year 1684 constitute a 'Society, called the Hon^{ble} Order of Little Bedlam at 'Burghley.'" And whereas no chapter or assembly of the members had been held since his decease. These are to give notice, That the Right Hon. John (now) Earle of Exeter, intending to renew & continue the said hon. society, did upon the 18th day of May 1705 call a chapter to be held in Little Bedlam by some members of the society who were near at hand, and as Great Master of the Order did take upon himself the title of Lyon. At which chapter were elected and admitted in this hon^{ble} society:—

The Hon ^{ble} William Cecill	- Panther.
Sir Thomas Mackworth	- Badger.
The Hon ^{ble} Charles Cecill	- Bull.
Charles Tryon, Esq.	- Otter.

At which chapter it was ordered, amongst other things, that the former rules shall stand good, and that the register shall give notice hereof to all such members as were formerly of the society, and were not present at this chapter, to know whether they are pleased to continue in the society, under the Right Hon^{ble} the Lyon, Great Master of the Order. Which intention to continue in this hon^{ble} order, you are desired to give notice to the register, Daniel Clark, at Burghley, before the 15th day of May 1706. Otherwise your picture will be taken downe, and the master will proceed to a new election to fill up your place, that the society may be kept full.

97. Letter from William Whiston (the mathematician and theological disputant) to Robert Nelson, Esq., in Ormond Street, near Gray's Inn, London. Replying combatively to an epistle in which Nelson (the author of "Festivals and Fasts of the Church of England") urged Mr. Whiston to recant opinions set forth in his "Sermons and Essays." "I run no hazard," writes Whiston, "as to another world, because I keep close to 'the Faith and practice which was once delivered to 'the Saints, without suffering any synod or humane 'authority to turn me at all out of the way: whereas 'you venture the most sacred concerns to believe and 'practice as the countrey & church wherein you were 'educated happened to instruct you, and seem to 'think it a piece of impiety to do otherwise." Cambridge, July 31, 1710.

98. The MS. volume in which William Whiston kept the minutes of the proceedings of "The Society for 'promoting Primitive Christianity."

99. Letter from William Whiston to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. Explaining why the writer has become an infrequent attendant at the meetings of the society. Union Court, December 1710.

100. Letter from William Whiston "To the Right 'Rev. my Lords the Bishops and the Lord Bishop of 'Lincolns in Deans Court, Westminster." Entreating for "a fair and publick examination of his MS. papers 'before any censure be past upon him." The writer says, "I still offer to suppress my books in case that 'a tenth part of the original evidence, which I have 'to produce on my side, can be alleg'd for the opposite 'doctrines." March 17, 1717.

101. Letter from Roger Cotes to William Whiston. Respecting one of Mr. Whiston's scientific proposals. Cambridge, December 2, 1714.

102. Letter from William Whiston to Samuel Barker, Esq., at Lyndon near Okeham, Rutland. Alluding to one of his projects for discovering the longitude, and accepting Mr. Barker's proposal for marriage with his daughter, who is however regarded by her father as too young at present for wedlock. London, January 27, 1717. William Whiston's daughter became in due course the wife of Samuel Barker, a member of Abel Barker's family.

105. Letter from John Jackson to William Whiston. Extolling the disputant's Primitive Christianity. Repington, October 31, 1716.

106. Letter from the same to the same. On questions of theology. April 17, 1717.

107. Letter from William Whiston to Samuel Barker, Esq., at Lyndon. Announcing the return of his wife and children from the country. November 9, 1717.

108. Letter from William Whiston, junr., to his sister Mrs. Samuel Barker, at Lyndon. Giving the news of the town, and its talk about quarrels and dissensions in the Royal Family. December 26, 1717.

109. Letter from William Whiston, junr. (son of the mathematician) to his sister, Mrs. Barker, junr., of Lyndon. In which the writer says, "My mother having sent you an account of Dr. Sacheverell's proceedings in order to exclude my father from St. Andrew's Church, I need not trouble you with it over again. Only I shall let you know that he is not obliged to stand in the isles on Sundays, as he did lately; for the lawyers of Staples Inn have ordered their butler, who opens their pews, to let him into one of their pews, which is in the middle isle." London, February 11, 1718.

110. Letter from the same to the same. Alluding to the agitation caused by "the Peerage Bill." London. April 15, 1719.

111. Letter from Mrs. Samuel Barker to her husband in London. Imploring him to return to her, and rejoicing at the failure of the design of certain persons to prosecute him for heresy. July 24, 1721.

112. Letter from the Reverend John Jackson to William Whiston. On theological questions. November 4, 1721.

113. Prospectus (and list of subscribers) for raising a fund to enable William Whiston to continue his observations for discovering the longitude at sea. 1721.

114. A letter from William Whiston, senr., to "His Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, at his Palace at Lambeth." Recalling past courtesies and kindness from the primate to the writer, who regrets his Grace's change of sentiment on certain matters, and speaks at considerable length of incidents arising out of the religious controversies occasioned by his writings. Cross Street, Hatton Garden, May 18, 1721.

115. A letter from William Whiston, senr., to the Right Honourable the Lord Trevor, Lord Privy Seal, at Peckham, Surrey. Soliciting Lord Trevor's patronage for the writer's sons, who have been educated at Cambridge under Dr. Laughton of Clare Hall, so that they are "qualified for several posts of life." Great Russel Street, over against Montague House, March 8, 1723.

116. A letter from William Whiston, senr., to his nephew Mr. William Whiston, at Luton, Bedfordshire. Expostulating affectionately, but in terms of strong reprobation, with the young man on his vanity, extravagance, and dissolute habits. It appears that the nephew had formerly been in Sir Isaac Newton's service, and that on leaving it he entered on a course of self indulgence and profligacy. London, September 14, 1725.

117. Petition of William Whiston to the Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament for the discovery of the longitude at sea. 1730.

118 and 119. Letters from William Whiston, junr., of the Inner Temple, to his brother George. Announcing the arrangements for his marriage with Miss Plaistow. Aug. 1734.

120. Letter from the same to the same. March 2, 1734/5.

121. From the same to the same. 1734.

122. William Whiston, senr., to his son, Mr. George Whiston, at Samuel Barker's, Esq., at Lyndon, Rutland. Announcing that the Master of the Rolls is highly pleased with George Whiston's reports of his pupil, Mr. Jekyl. The writer proposes that his son should come up to town to see the Master of the Rolls, and consult Dr. Crowe, the physician. London, March 29, 1735.

123. A letter from the same to the same, at the same address. In which George Whiston is affectionately and urgently entreated to take steps for the benefit of his health, which is suffering greatly from excessive application to study. "Dr. Crowe," the father writes, "thinks that if you could abide cold bathing, which might be come into at home gradually, it would go a great way in your cure. He has also a great opinion of Islington waters for your case." London, April 21, 1736.

124. Letter from William Whiston, junr., to his brother George. Giving the particulars of Queen Caroline's death. November 22, 1737.

125. Letter from the same to the same. Containing the particulars of the will of Sir Joseph Jekyll, Knt., Master of the Rolls, who left William Whiston, the elder, an annuity for life of 20*l*. Sept. 30, 1738.

126. Letter from the same to the same. On the same subject. October 7, 1738.

127. Letter from the same to the same. Enclosing prescriptions for George Whiston from Dr. Wilmot, who recommends his patient to drink the Stenfield waters, which are similar to the Scarborough waters. June 9, 1739.

128. Letter from the same to the same. Commending the speech made by Mr. Speaker on presenting the Supply Bills. June 16, 1739.

129. The elder William Whiston's receipt for 12*l*. 10*s*., one quarter's payment of the pension granted him by the King's warrant, dated March 22, 1737. The receipt bears date April 1740.

130. Letter from William Whiston, junr., to his brother George. Containing the political news of the week. April 19, 1740.

131. Letter from William Whiston, senr., to his son at Lyndon. Announcing that Mr. Edwards wishes to place his nephew, Mr. Salmon, as a pupil with George Whiston on such terms as the tutor had for teaching Mr. Jekyl. May 17, 1740.

132. Letter from Mr. Chetwoode to William Whiston, junr. Condoling with him on his ill health; and urging him with equal affectionateness and firmness, to resist his disposition to melancholy. August 28, 1740.

133. The memorial of William Whiston, clerk, sometime professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, to the Rt. Hon. the Commissioners for exercising the office of the Lord High Admiral of Great Britain. June 20, 1740.

134. Letter from the Rev. John Jackson to Mr. George Whiston. On questions of biblical theology. March 19, 1742.

138. Letter from the same to the same. On questions of biblical history. Nov. 13, 1742.

139. Letter from the Rev. John Jackson to Mr. George Whiston. For the most part on points of ancient history. Feb. 18, 1743.

140. Letter from the same to the same. On questions of ancient history. April 16, 1743.

141. Letter from William Whiston, senr., to the Earl of Westmoreland, Hanover Square, London. Asking for 50*l*. to enable the writer to bring out his projected edition of "the Four Gospels; according to the Greek part of the MS. of Beza." Lyndon, May 23, 1744. Lord Westmoreland having taken no notice of this application, the writer sent him another copy of the letter, with an additional postscript.

142. Letter from the Privy Council to the Deputy Lieutenants of Rutland. Announcing the landing of the Young Pretender in the north-west of Scotland, and requiring them to disarm all "papists, non-jurors, and all other persons that shall be judged dangerous to the peace of the kingdom," within the said county. May 10, 1745.

143. Brief note:—"By express that arrived at 1 o'clock this afternoon come into Derby 2 quartermasters and demanded billets for 12,000 men, and we expect them there to-morrow. That is all the information at present as to the situation of our army." Leicester, December, 4 o'clock, in the evening. No signature or direction to this note.

144. Letter signed J. Wyche, and beginning with "My Lord." Announcing that "the Chevalier's advanced guard marched yesterday to Mansfield, and the body to Allfreton," and that the rebel army, numbering only 4,600 men that can fight, is sure to be surrounded and destroyed. Stamford, December 6, 5 o'clock, afternoon.

145. Unsigned note, announcing on the authority of Lord Gainsborough's messenger, who has just returned from Nottingham, that the rebels have left Derby and re. marched again for Ashbourn. December 6, 1745, $\frac{1}{2}$ after 7 at night.

146. Letter from the Reverend John Jackson to Mr. Samuel Barker, of Lyndon. Describing a sharp encounter between the rebels and some country people; and giving particulars of the entry of the Royal army into Lancaster. December 31, 1745.

147. Unsigned letter, giving the latest news of the rebel army. Thursday, 8 o'clock, night.

148. Letter from J. Whiston in London, to his sister Mrs. Barker, of Lyndon. Reporting the panic in London. "Many are in great fears about them, and a camp will be certainly formed on Monday on Finchley Common" of about 5,000 regular troops and 2 regiments of our "trained bands. I have just heard that the Duke is 'got between these plunderers and us.'" December 7, 1745.

149. Letter from the Rev. William Whiston to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Reflecting strongly on the remissness of the Church of England in neglecting to offer up prayers to God for the abatement and removal of "the long and sore murrain or plague now destroying the horned cattle;" and begging that search may be made at Lambeth for an "admirable collect of 'thanksgiving and prayer on occasion of the Great Storm of November 27, 1703.'" Lyndon, January 13, 1744.

149. Copy of the Archbishop's reply to the last-mentioned letter, together with a copy of the form of prayer asked for by Mr. Whiston. "What you hint," the Primate observes, "about the Form of Prayer, your age, and 'learning and experience give you a right to say, but it 'becomes those who have less of all those to be a little 'more reserved.'" Kennington, January 28, 1747.

150. Letter from the Rev. William Whiston to the Lord Chancellor, in Ormond Street. Soliciting his lordship's influence in behalf of the writer's son George, who is seeking under the government a place "that may be 'easy and advantageous to him, and that without 'burdening with what his weak nerves will not at 'present bear.'" The writer alludes to the death of his son, William. London, February 6, 1743.

151. Letter from the Rev. William Whiston to Samuel Barker, Esq., at Lyndon. Announcing that the writer's autobiography is ready for subscribers. London, August 31, 1748.

152. Letter to George Whiston from his old pupil, Mr. Jekyll. Inviting the latter to stay with the writer for four or five months, in order that they may resume their studies. Nov. 15, 1751.

153. Letter to the same from the same. Regretting that George Whiston cannot accept the flattering and affectionately worded invitation. Dalkington, December 10, 1751.

154. Letter from Thomas White (brother of Gilbert White of Selborne) to the Rev. William Whiston. "Reverend Sir, from the various performances that you 'have favoured the world with (the nature, as well as 'the number of them), and from the memoirs you have 'given us of your own life, I can plainly discern that 'Nature designed you to be silent in your generation. 'This I thought good to let you know, before you leave 'a world, that, in fact, you have been of so little true 'service in. I am, sir, your plain speaker, but your 'real friend, Th. White." This curious piece of incivility to an aged and virtuous man is dated January 1, 1752, the year of William Whiston's death.

155. Letter from George Whiston to Speaker Onslow. Regretting that "severe miseries" forbid him to undertake at once the office of a librarian in the British Museum, and begging earnestly that he may for a brief while be allowed to discharge the duties of the place by deputy. February 12, 1756.

156. Letter from the Rev. J. White (a brother of Gilbert White) to Thomas Barker, Esq., at Lyndon, Giving measurements of rainfall at Gibraltar, and speaking of the death of the writer's sister at Selborne. Gibraltar, May 22, 1771.

157. Papers, containing a collection of facts, made by Mr. Samuel Barker, William Whiston, junr., and others, with a view to a new edition of Wright's History of Rutland.

158. A curious collection of tradesmen's bills, bearing dates from the year 1647 to 1760. The earlier bills, especially those from tailors of the seventeenth century, are interesting, and might be studied with advantage by writers on the costumes and fashions of that period. One of the more noteworthy of these accounts is an undertaker's bill for the funeral of Madam Leigh (Christopher Dighton's sister) in London, in the year 1697. The lady, though not necessitous, was far from wealthy, and the interment cost 38l. 5s. 4d. Sending the account to Sir Thomas Barker, Mr. Dighton asks the baronet if he will "contribute anything" towards its payment.

In addition to the letters, noticed in this list, the Barker Correspondence comprises several letters of sympathy or compliment, addressed to William Whiston, the elder, by his friends in England and in foreign parts. There are also letters, that passed between the younger members of the mathematician's family; letters of no considerable interest, on matters of history and science, addressed in the eighteenth century to Samuel Barker and Thomas Barker of Lyndon; and a number of letters by Gilbert White, grand-uncle to Mr. Field, who could not show them to me on the occasion of my visit to Lancing, as he had unfortunately lent them to a friend at a distance. All that is of public interest in these last-named letters will appear in the edition of "The Natural History of Selborne," now in course of preparation by Professor Bell, F.R.S.

(c.) Papers relating to Taxation and Public Affairs in Rutland and adjoining counties in the 17th century.

(1.) Indenture (parchment roll) made July 4, 22 James I., between the Commissioners of co. Rutland for collecting the first of three entire subsidies granted to the King by Parliament, of the one part, and John Butler of Okeham, co. Rutland, the High Collector, appointed by the said commissioners, of the other part.

Names and titles of the Commissioners:—Edward Lord Noel, Sir Edward Harington, Knt. and Bart., Sir Thomas Mackworth, Bart., Sir William Bulstrode, Sir Guie Palmes, Sir Henry Myn, Knt., Richard Halford and Abraham Johnson, Esqs. The roll gives the complete assessment of county, under the headings of the several hundreds and parishes, with the amount assessed on each person. Those who refused or failed to pay the amounts charged upon them are marked "recusant."

(2.) May 13, 1625. Writ addressed by William Bulstrode and Guie Palmes to the Chief Constables of the Hundred of Martinsley (in compliance with letters from the Lord Lieutenant of Rutland and the directions of the Privy Council), requiring the said Chief Constables to appear before them at Okeham on the next Monday at 7 a.m., and to give notice to every petty constable of the hundred to appear at the same place and time, bringing with them 2, 4, or 6 men (according to requisition laid on each parish) not of the trained bands, ready to march forth to Plymouth and serve the King beyond seas. The petty constables are required to collect under-written moneys from their respective parishes for the coats, conduct money, and other charges of the recruits. Any petty constable, failing to bring the men required of him, will be himself impressed to serve the King as a soldier.

(3.) February 15, 1626. Writ from Justices of the Peace (signed Ed. Harington and William Bulstrode) to the Chief Constables of the Hundred of Martinsley. "These are in his Maties name to will & require you, that 'you make your warrants to all the petty constables 'within your hundred, that they and ev'ry of them 'give warninge to all taverne keepers, inholders, ale-housekeepers, cōoks and butchers to appear before 'vs at Uppinghame vpon Tuesday next, being the xxth 'day of this instant monthe of February, by eight of 'the clocke in the morninge there to enter into recognizance with suertes, that they and eu'y of them will 'not kill, sell, dresse nor utter any fleashe dureinge 'this tyme of Lent, accordinge to his Maties. proclamation, which wee haue receaved for such purpose."

(4.) Indenture (parchment roll) made August 14, 4 Charles I., between the commissioners for collecting the two first of five subsidies, in co. Rutland, of the one part, and John Butler, of Okeham, Gent., of the other part. Commissioners, Sir Edward Harington, Knt. and Bart., Sir Henry Mackworth, Bart., Sir William Bulstrode, Sir Guie Palmes, and Sir Henry Mynn, Knights, and Thomas Lovitt, Esq. The roll displays the complete assessment of the county, with the names of the taxpayers, and the amounts charged upon them, arranged under the names of their parishes and hundreds.

(5.) Similar indenture, of the same date, with list of assessments for the county of Northampton.

(6.) January 27, 1629. Warrant from Justices of the Peace (signed Henry Mackworth, Guie Palmer, Francis Bokenham, Thomas Lovet), to the High Constables of Martinsley Hundred, Rutland, requiring them to raise in the several parishes of the hundred certain underwritten sums of money for providing two hundred (95.) A curious collection of 93 receipts for rents, tythes, and taxes; the earliest of the acknowledgments bearing date April 16, 1595, and the latest bearing date 1789. Several of the older receipts are in Latin, and acknowledge payment of rent from the tenant of lands called "Ladyfeld parcell manerii de Greensnorton," co. Northampton, pertaining to the Crown. The receipts of the Commonwealth period are noteworthy.

It would be well for students of our Commonwealth history, and all readers who take especial interest in the affairs of Stuart England, if one of our archaeological societies would undertake to publish Mr. Field's 17th century papers, and engage him to edit them.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF A. C. RANYARD, ESQ., OF LINCOLN'S INN, BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

Among the manuscripts which Mr. Ranyard sent for examination are the following:—

A quarto volume of parchment, 68 leaves, writing of the end of the 12th century. It contains, 1st, A short account in Latin of the doings of the Crusaders in the Holy Land, A.D. 1095-1099. It is the first of the works printed by Bongars in the Gesta Dei per Francos (fol. Hanov. 1611) and occupies there 29 folio pages. The MS. varies slightly from the print, and in some parts contains a little more. Some of the names of persons are given more correctly than in the print. Some leaves of the MS. are absent, notably the last three of this tract, containing the last four lines of p. 28, and the whole of p. 29 of the print.—The second tract in the volume is seemingly an edition of so much of Paul the Deacon's Historia Miscella as contains Eutropius's Roman History. But it is much abbreviated, and differs (in the additions) from Paul's History as printed in the Augustæ Historiæ Scriptores. Some leaves of the MS. are absent and it ends imperfectly at section 14 of Book 10 of Paul's work, and at section 10 of Book 8 of Valpy's edition of Eutropius.

At the top of the first page of the MS. a 13th century hand has written Lib. S. Marie de Kenill., and below is the autograph T. Marore (16th century).

Folio, vellum, end of 14th century.—Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, beautifully written by an Italian hand. At the end of the work the scribe has added the letter of Theophrastus, which Jerome sent to his friend Jovinian to dissuade him from matrimony.

The volume came from the Pinelli collection.

YARD, ESQ.

A. C. RAY-
LAND, Esq.

Folio, 25 leaves, 17th century.—Letters between Sir Kenelm Digby and Lord George Digby about traditions, &c. Copied out of one lent by . . . 1646, &c. The volume has the book plate of Jeremiah Miller, D.D. (The contents were printed 12° Lond. 1651.)

Folio, 9 pp., 17th century.—Part of the Duke of Buckingham's relation of proceedings when the Prince was in Spain.—(This contains in brief the substance, with some slight additions and variations, of pp. 224–232 of vol. 3 of the Lords Journals.)

Fol., 50 pp., 17th century.—A list of what ships and goods have been condemned in the Admiralty Court since the beginning of the Warr (from 1 Feb. 1664 to 26 Sept. 1667). The first entry is "The Bergan of Alogmark & goods in the same not claymed." The last is "The Charity of Amsterdam Course, Johnson, Mr. and goods not claymed."

Folio, paper, 342 pp., 17th century.—Latin explanations of words in the first 12 and part of the 13th books of the Iliad of Homer.

The Greek words are in red ink.—Half of the first page is occupied with an introduction, which begins "Priusquam ad explicationem verborum incedit Eusta-
"thius nonnulla quasi prelude loco premittit," and ends "Homerus hic atque illic prout bonum arbitretur
"quæ novem annis precedentibus Troie facta sunt
"miro cum artificio intertextit. Sed hæc hactenus."
The text begins Μηνιν est accusat. cas. nominis μηνης, μηνιος; and ends with the word χρυσόθρονος . . . aureum solum habens. The first four books occupy 182 pp.

Folio, paper, 88 leaves and 74½ leaves. 16th century. This is a beautifully written Greek manuscript, in Eastern binding. It contains two works, the first is astronomical, and the second is a comment on Aristotle's treatise on generation and corruption.

On the first flyleaf is the following sentence by a 16th century hand towards determining the authorship of the first and perhaps the second treatise:—καὶ τοῦδε πρὸς τοῖς ἀλλοῖς δημοτρίου Ἰωάννου . . . Ἰωαννῶν, τὸ περὶ οὐρανὸν καὶ τὸ περὶ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς.

The first treatise is headed υπομνημα συνοπτικὸν καὶ ζητημα εἰς τὴν περὶ οὐρανὸν πραγματείαν. It begins [E]ἰ οὐτὶς ρηθλὺς εἰς πολὺν μεγίστηνδε; and ends *νοομένης τε καὶ νο . . . 5 There are many diagrams in the work.

The second treatise is headed υπομνηματα καὶ ζητηματα εἰς τοὺς ἀριστοτελεῖους περὶ γενέσεως καὶ φθορᾶς βιβλίον κ. τ. λ. It begins, Ἀπορία οὐ μῆρα τοῖς ἐξηγηταῖς.

Quarto, paper, 15th century, 33 leaves. A treatise called Computus cyrometralis in 2 books. It consists of a number of hexameter verses (many of them made up of words of no real meaning, but as a memoria technica) accompanied by an extensive commentary and several diagrams. It is an astronomical work composed chiefly with a view to assist ecclesiastics in determining the feast days and proper services of their churches. At the end is the colophon in red ink, with "Et sic est finis

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF MISS CONWAY GRIFFITH. CARREGLWYD, ANGLESEY, AND BERW, NORTH WALES.

MISS C.
GRIFFITH

The labour of examining Miss Conway Griffith's manuscripts has been considerable, but far from fruitless. Comprising some two thousand separate documents, the collection is very miscellaneous. It is also notably deficient in arrangement. Indeed, save that Miss Conway Griffith, who takes an antiquary's interest in her literary possessions, had gathered into separate folios a few of the more attractive writings, no attempt had been made to classify her documents, or to reduce their mass by withdrawing worthless material, when they were entrusted to me for inspection. In consideration of its heterogeneousness and general neglect, the collection may be described as one of those undigested accumulations of domestic and official manuscripts, which grow steadily in families whose chiefs, from superstitious tenderness for the writings of their forefathers, or from indisposition for the labour of bringing them into order, allow their moth-eaten records to rest undisturbed, whilst covering them from time to time with comparatively recent bundles of receipted bills, obsolete indentures, cancelled bonds, and old letters.

Such an accumulation necessarily contains a considerable proportion of uninteresting parchments and papers. Comprising bonds for the payment of small sums of money from obscure individuals, drafts of bills and answers in trivial law suits, attorney's letters about insignificant affairs of strictly private business, friendly notes yielding no single illustration of character or manners, pecuniary memoranda that can have scarcely been intelligible to the writers twelve months after they were made, tradesmen's bills affording no new information respecting the details of commerce, shreds of unsigned papers covered with numerals which may be presumed to have some reference to items of personal expenditure, and imperfect records of the receipt of cottagers' rents, which at the present would not afford so much as a note for the local annalist or parochial antiquary; the majority of the Carreglwyd manuscripts lie far outside the fields of historical research. The proportion of these papers is the larger because, whilst some are in duplicate and even in triplicate, others of them have been multiplied four times by the copyist's industry.

In dealing with a multifarious collection, so largely loaded with literary refuse, I have exercised my discretion in dividing the valuable material from the material of no value. Of the several items of the latter element of the collection, no mention is made in my lists. It is well, however, to observe that, whilst declining to swell my catalogues with entries which could not be serviceable to any inquirer, I have made my comprehensive schedules of selected papers with full consideration for the needs of topographers, antiquaries, and social illustrators, as well as of labourers in higher departments of history.

Commencing with a few parchments and papers of the fourteenth century, the oldest of the Carreglwyd documents are comparatively modern. The important writings of the collection are, without exception, of dates subsequent to Henry the Eighth's time. Some of the letters and indentures, penned in the reign of Elizabeth and the three earliest of her Stuart successors, are of considerable interest. Attention may be claimed for the leases which show that, from the time of Elizabeth down to the later decades of the seventeenth century, it was usual for the tenants of farms in Anglesey to pay their rent in the three separate forms of money, presents, and service, and that in cases where a tenant was exempt from the two last-named kinds of obligation, his lease generally stated expressly that the money, which he had agreed to pay as rent, covered the dues commonly rendered to landlords in labour and gifts. The presents thus exacted by landlords and rendered by their tenants, were for the most part articles of agricultural produce. Sometimes, however, they were offerings of another kind. For instance, so late as Charles the Second's time, Hugh ap William held a small farm. the Tythin Clay, in the county of Anglesey, of Mr. Owen Holland at a yearly rent "of 6l. 0s. 0d. in money, two "capons, and a hundred red herrings in presents, and six "days of mason's work in service." It would be interesting to ascertain whether this practice, on the part of landlords, of inserting in their leases special stipulations for the payment of presents at principal feasts of the year, first became general in Anglesey in consequence of a growing disinclination, on the part of tenants to render dues which had been purely spontaneous before custom made them unavoidable obligations. The Carreglwyd leases are not of sufficient oldness to show whether the practice prevailed in Anglesey before the middle of the sixteenth century, when the farmers of various parts of England exhibited decided reluctance to pay the customary tributes, which they had come to regard as extortionate exactions rather than as items of their landlord's just and proper rent.

Another class of legal instruments, contributing in no small degree to the general value of Miss Conway Griffith's writings, consists of settlements of property drawn in anticipation of marriages celebrated amongst her ancestors of the seventeenth century. The marriage settlement, dated Feb. 13, 1642, which settled on the bride of Mr. Owen Holland, of Berow, co. Anglesey, and her issue, certain "seates, sittinge, kneelinge" and buryinge places in Llanerhangel Eskeivioge in the same county, may be esteemed nothing more than a curiosity of the conveyancer's art, produced for the gratification of a proprietor who had, at considerable cost and after much vexatious opposition, established his right to and property in the seats and burying-places. Regarding it as an illustration of life and manners, the reader will not fail to assign a greater value to the indenture in which a gentleman of Denbighshire, in the reign of James the First, whilst settling a landed estate on his son in tail male on the eve of his marriage with a gentleman's daughter, stipulated that during his life the young man should "worke" and labour for him "as a labourer," and that the bride should during the same time "labour and work" for him as domestic servant.

But though the writings which illustrate the social condition of Anglesey and other northern parts of the Principality, are of considerable interest, even higher value may be assigned to those of the Carreglwyd documents which relate to the public affairs of North Wales during the Civil War and the Commonwealth. For many of these writings, as well as for the majority of her official and domestic papers having reference to the public affairs of England in the seventeenth century, Miss Conway Griffith is indebted to her ancestor John Griffith, Esq., a lawyer of Gray's Inn, who acted throughout several years as private secretary to James the First's Lord Privy Seal, Henry Earl of Northampton, the second son of the earl and poet, Surrey. In discharging the various important duties of this office, Mr. John Griffith gained his patron's confidence so completely that, having first appointed him a trustee of a deed for the execution of benevolent undertakings at Greenwich, co. Kent, Rising, co. Norfolk, and Clun, co. Salop, the Earl made him one of the executors of his last will. Of the several noteworthy papers, which coming into Mr. John Griffith's hands during his residence in the Earl of Northampton's household, remained in them after that nobleman's death, one of the most interesting is Robert Fletcher's "Briefe and true" discourses of the King's majesties cart-takers," particular mention of which will be found in my list of English writings. Surviving the Commonwealth, and persevering in official habits formed in the service of his first patron, Mr. John Griffith continued to the last to watch public events attentively, and to maintain relations with men of political affairs. Most of his papers are endorsed in his own handwriting; and though the majority of them consists of copies of papers well known to students of history, they comprise a minority of more or less noteworthy documents which, like Fletcher's "Cart-takers," have never been given to the world. The Carreglwyd collection contains also some writings from the hand of John Griffith's near kinsman, Dr. Griffith the Bishop of St. Asaph, and a large number of private or official documents drawn by Dr. William Griffith, the chancellor of the dioceses of St. Asaph and Bangor, and a notable advocate of Doctor's Commons, in the seventeenth century.

It should be observed that before she sent her manuscripts to the Record Office for examination, Miss Conway Griffith, acting on my suggestions, branded every parchment and paper of the collection with this stamp, "Carreglwyd papers, Anglesey, N.W." At the same time, she had the forethought to number every document and separate scrap of writing. Her labour in thus numbering all the manuscripts of the miscellaneous and unarranged collection has enabled me to produce lists which, whilst exhibiting the nature of the valuable part of the documents, may also serve as indexes to the inquirer who wishes to extract any of the registered writings from the mass of valueless material, in which they are put away. The same number, which precedes an entry in the catalogues, will be found on the manuscript to which the entry refers.

1. English Writings, i.e. Documents illustrative of social life and public affairs of England; and more particularly of England in the seventeenth century.

(No. 698.) Copy of Perkin Warbeck's proclamation beginning, "Whereas wee in our in our tender age" escaped by godes might out of the tower of London "and were secretly conveyed ouer the sea into diuers" countries," &c.; published on his entrance into England, with the "ayde and supportacion of the kinge of" Scottes."

(No. 786.) 1 Elizabeth. "Copy of the petition of Gregory Fynes, esq., brother and heir of Thomas Fynes, esq., who was son and heir to Sir Thomas Fynes, knt., late Lord Dacres of the Sowthe (attainted of felony temp. Hen. VIII.); praying her Highness the Queen that he may be restored in blood."

(No. 792.) 20th November 1579. Copy of the "Commissio serenissimæ dominæ Reginæ Elizabethæ pro matrimonio tractando inter ipsam dominam Reginam et Franciscum Valois illustrissimum Andegaviæ ducem." Also copy of "Articuli contractus matrimonii inter serenissimam Angliæ reginam Elizabetham et Franciscum Valois illustrissimum ducem celebrandi anno 1581."

(No. 710.) 24 October 1584. The certificate of Ambrose Potter, "portreve of Gravessend," under "the towne" seale of Gravessend," that Roger Bolker and Robert Selbye, pencioners in Gravessend bulworke, and Rychard Warde and William Banckes, pencioners in Mylton bulworck, "are in full lyffe, desyrryng youre" honour of youre certificathe vnto the quenes maiesties Receyvor of Kent, acording to mylorde Treasurers warrant, which the said receyvor hathe for "the payment thereof."

(No. 905.) 1590. Paper endorsed "Gentlemens Protestations att Ely." Containing a copy of orders from lords of the council (i.e. Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer and Lord Chamberlain) to the officer having charge of the Catholic gentlemen imprisoned in Ely Palace, for the considerate and better treatment of the said prisoners. From this document (dated from the court at Otlandes, 26 August 1590) it appears that the imprisoned gentlemen had complained of the needless hardships of their condition. Although they perceive "by the reporte of those gentlemen, to whome" it was committed "to examyne the griefes of the recusants vnder your" charge that the occasion of their complaint was not "altogether so great" as the sufferers represented, the lords of the council admit that the complaints were not groundless, and add, "Therefore you shall accordinge" as the said gentlemen tooke order haue care that they "maie haue sweete and holosome water both for the" dressing of ther meate and other necessarye vses, "and permitt theym to inioye the libertye of the" gardens and orchardes and the leades to walke in. "And for the better preservacion of ther healthe you" shall not onelye suffer them to take the aire of a mile "or two in your companye, but the companie of suche" other trustie parsons as you may be assured of, so they "may be in safety." Then follow copies of declarations of loyalty and allegiance to the Queen, embodying protestations of the readiness of the declarants to imperil their lives and estates in the defence of her person from the attacks of her enemies, and of her realm against the pope and every potentate whatsoever.

(No. 806.) List of the "Captens casired by the Erle of Essex in Ireland." Giving the names of thirty-nine captains.

(No. 794.) A survey and sketch of Romney Marsh on a single sheet of paper, with an estimate of the small population of the level, and remarks on the indefensible nature of the district in case of a foreign invasion. The entire population of level (28 miles in compass) is computed at 590 men. "The danger," the draughtsman observes, "in landinge of the enemye is greates for they may lande where they will (takeinge their tyme and provision agreeable) from the west part of Bromehill unto Heth which is some xii miles longe, and beinge landed they may not only boorne and destroe Romeney, but also in one houre may cutt vpp and make gutters crosse Romeneymershe walle, and the walles about Wallanmarshe and Bromehill to lett in the sea and drowne the saide marshes, containing as aforesaid 43000 acres."—No date.

(No. 755.) Causes of the decay of the Harborough alias Rye Haven. No date.

(No. 793.) No date.

(No. 985.) Fragmenta Regalia Or Observaciouns on the late Queene Elizabeth, her tymes and Favourites. Written by Sir Robert Naunton, Knt., Master of the Court of Wards and Liveries. A carefully executed copy of Sir Robert Naunton's sketch of Elizabeth and her times; made probably by an amanuensis in the service of the Earl of Northampton, several of the copies of papers, endorsed by Mr. John Griffith, being in the same handwriting.

(No. A. 825.) Paper entitled "Her Highenes ordynary corses vsually taken in her house, and in all townes and villages neare the court." A set of directions to "the clarke of the cheeke, the queenes porters," and the marshal of the royal household; for excluding unauthorized visitors from the Queen's (Elizabeth's) court, and for relieving its neighbourhood of vagabonds and other suspicious characters. No date.

(No. A. 45.) The congratulatory address of an orator, addressing James the First in a highly euphuistic style, and "in the names of these grave magistrates," the king's "most faithfull sheryves of London and Middlesex," and giving His Majesty a loyal and hearty welcome to the city of London. The references to Queen Elizabeth indicate that the speech was delivered soon after James's accession to her throne. No date.

(No. B. 51.) 12 March 1604. Patent, under the great seal, of a grant from the crown to Richard Prytherch of the Inner Temple, London, Esq., and Tobias Mathews, their heirs and assigns, for ever, of the manor of Penryn, co. Carmarthen, and of the Little Forest of Brecon, alias the little forest of Brecknock in the lordship of Brecon; with lands and tenements in Carnethaar, co. Anglesey; and also of lands and tenements in Westminster, viz.:—(1.) a piece of waste ground, near the stone wall, which surrounds the old palace of Westminster, and between the Parliament "stayres" and the "sluce" running down from the college of Westminster to the Thames; (2.) a piece of waste ground, opposite the aforesaid piece, and between the Parliament stairs and another sluice, running down from the Parliament-house to the river; (3.) another piece of waste ground, recently laid out in gardens, between the said wall and the way leading from the inner "chort" of the said palace to the slaughter-house; (4.) another piece of waste ground, recently laid out in gardens, between the said wall on the east, and the way leading to the slaughter-house on the west; (5.) another piece of waste ground, likewise laid out in gardens, between the said wall on the west, and the said way to the slaughter-house on the east; (6.) a tenement called the "Blackhowse," lying near and within the palace called "Whitehall"; (7.) a tenement lying within the aforesaid "chort" of the palace of Westminster; (8.) a small area, opposite the east part of the said tenement, and enclosed with walls, late in the occupation of Charles Hanmer, deceased; (9.) a piece of waste ground, lately used for three separate gardens, with the building upon it, called the "water-woorke," for conveying water from the river to divers houses and places in Westminster;

(10.) all the tenements on the said piece of ground; (11.) the stable or "le coachehowse," on the east of the same piece, with the entrance thereto; (12.) a piece of ground, granted for a garden by letters patent of Queen Elizabeth, and since that concession used as a way to the "wood warff"; (13.) a piece of open ground, used by tolerance as a footway to the messuages lately in the tenure of John Dore and John Bennett; (14.) the tenement or "gardinhouse" lately built in a garden, lately held by Hugh Brown; (15.) another garden-house lately built on ground lately held by William Lancaster; (16.) a little garden-house, on ground lately in the occupation of Thomas Hamlett; (17.) another small garden-house, lately built on ground held by William Carter; (18.) the little "shed" or garden-house in a garden lately held by Francis Morris; (19.) another shed, in a garden lately in the tenure of John Bennet; (20.) another "shed" in a garden lately held by Robert Briggs; (21.) a shed or garden-house, in a garden lately held by Ralph Foster; (22.) and also a piece of open ground, taken out of the river near to the stairs on the north, and to the wood-wharff on the south, which was appointed for the convenience and use of "le water-woorke."—The local historian, dealing with the topography of Old Westminster, should examine the minute and carefully precise descriptions of the purlieus of the palace, contained in this charter.

(No. 764.) 29 Aug. 1605. Oratio Serenissimi Regis Jacobi habita in ecclesia Sanctæ Mariæ, 29^o mensis Augusti 1605.

(No. 696.) — 1605. A list of the officers and servants appointed to attend Charles Earl of Nottingham on his journey into Spayne; together with a list of the lords, knights, and gentlemen of ranck which go with his lordship on this journey. The officers and servants numbering 144; and the lords, knights, and gentlemen, making a retinue of 40 persons.

(No. 701.) — 1605. A list of "my lord of Hartford his company to the Archduke," viz., The Lords Cromwell, Saye and St. John of Bletso, Sirs Edward Hobby, John Hollis, John Seymour, Henry Goodyer, John Hungerford, John Brooke, Giles Wroughton, Sir Edward Gorges, Sir Hughe Smithe, John Rodney, Francis Popham, Jasper Moore, John Earnley, Thomas Thynne, Knts.; Mr. Portman, and Sir John Stanhop's son, of Nottinghamshire.

(No. 634.) 15 October 1605. A briefe and true discours of the kings majesties carttakers, or rather a description of them and their offices; bothe for the removes of the kings most honorable household, &c. from Standing House; as in the progress tymes with the nobilitie, &c. Intituled to the most honorable and woorthy of Titles, for honor, learning, wisdom, and judgement, as also for the tender and most regardful care and love to countrie, Henry earle of Northampton, &c. By Robert Fletcher, yeoman-purveyor of carriages for the removes onely of his majesties most honourable household; wherein he hath servid 30 yeares and more with great trowble, losses, and skandall.

Written by the James the First's yeoman-cart-taker (who had served Queen Elizabeth in the same capacity) for the information of the Lord Privy Seal, when the conduct of the royal cart-takers, as on the occasion of the King's progresses to Farnham, Basing, Salisbury, and Wilton, and their still worse conduct on the return journeys from Winchester to Wilton, and from Wilton to Hampton Court, had provoked a general outcry against the grievances of wainage and the corrupt practices of the officers, empowered to impress horses and vehicles for the King's service on his journeys; this tract gives a singularly vivid picture of the dishonesty of individuals, and of the abuses of a system. Affording a great deal of minute information respecting a department of the public service that was a fruitful source of popular discontent, it abounds with illustrations of character and manners that should be considered by historians of Elizabethan England. The staff of the King's regular cart-takers consisted of four officers, viz., the yeoman cart-taker and his three grooms, who during "every progress time or midsommer quarter," were assisted by two "aids" or "extraordinary cart-takers," sworn into the cart-takers, office for the season, and empowered by "the grenecloth," to seize carts and animals, like the permanent officers. In the previous reign Robert Fletcher had replied to murmurs against the excesses of his subordinates by reducing the number of carts, impressed for a royal progress, from 600 to 400; and though an adverse official influence defeated his endeavours to limit the baggage-train to so small a number, he assures the Earl of Northampton with proper management, 400 carts ought to be enough for the requirements of the court on a journey. At the same time the writer "propounded a limitation of myles, and " within the compas of twelve myles procurid that " cartes should serve to the full at all generall removes " at the rate of xs. a cart, and iid. a myle, the quenes " price, which xs. a remove was paid by those dwelling " without the list of xii. myles, and this held as the best " compos and most easy composition that ever was " ordained, vntill her late majestie deceased." The extraordinary number of carts impressed for the progress of the King and his court from Wilton to Hampton is accounted for by the unusual number of His Majesty's retinue, by the badness of the roads "in the " deep of winter," and also by the fact that "the " Scottish people knewing no facion but their own ladid " there cartes with half lodes of stuff, and overloadid " the same with people. There was some tymes 16 and " more great bodies of men and women vpon one cart." Robert Fletcher speaks in strong terms of the outrageous dishonesty of grooms, still serving under him, as well as of grooms who sold their places and retired from the service, which they had disgraced, shortly after Queen Elizabeth's death. Having described the condition of his own department, the writer speaks with similar frankness and minuteness of detail of another service of royal cart-takers, styled "the cart-takers of London," during the last four years or otherwise called the "yeomen purveyors of carriages for his majesties " buttry, &c. and spicerie," consisting of chief and subordinate officers, authorised to impress carts and animals for conveying provision to the King's palaces in the neighbourhood of London. This service is said to have originated in the obligation of the city to provide means for carrying provision to "his highnes howses," not more than "25 myles from the citie"; and an interesting sketch is given of the growth, suppression, and revival of the department, which is represented as surpassing even the writer's own department in corruption and fraudulent usage. "These are the cart-takers," Robert Fletcher says, "of whom preachers " in their pulpitts do proclaime, as namely Mr. Dean " of Pauls in a sermon before the late Quene, vpon " Ashwensday, 1585, and Mr. D. Neale before all the " lords in the chapell at Whitehall, when her late " majesties corps lay there not interrid. These are " those cart-takers, whoe doe daily and owerly take " carts in London, whether there be cause or noe cause; " and whoe are said to take money owerly and continewally. And these do som tymes straie vpon an ignorant poor carter, who having laiden his cart, for " Norwich Yermouth or places of like distans from " London. He is taken by one of thies cart-takers, " commaunded to unload, and to load a Tunn of drinck " and convey the same to the courte &c. There he sheweth a commission—Brode seale &c. The poor man drawith his purs and payeth v li., iii li., v markes, &c., " to be freed of this cart-taker and his broade seal. A " nakid sworde were even as lawfull." The concluding part of the tract, of twenty closely written folio sheets, relates to the insolence and extortionate practices of other purveyors, viz., the King's purveyors of sea-fish, his purveyors of wine, and his purveyors of oats, hay, and straw for the royal stables.—This official paper should be published. Students of social history would like to have it on their shelves.

(A. 154.) Copy of a petition to James the First for more effective measures against the agents of the Roman Catholic Church. The recital alludes to the gunpowder plot as a recent event.

(A. 797.) 2 May 1607. Copy of part of the warrant to the Keeper of Wardrobe, to furnish the Earl of Salisbury and the Lord Viscount Bindon, and either of them, with xviii. yards of "velvett crimson for their " lineries for the order of the garter viz. for roabe, " kirtle with hoods and tippetts at xxxiii. the yard," and "xii. yards di. of white Taffata to line the same " robes at xvs. the yard."—The same paper exhibits the copy of a similar warrant for the Duke de Hulst, dated at Greenwich, 22 April, 3 Jac. I. The endorsement of the note states that the robes of the Earl and Viscount were to be worn "at the installation of the " garter."

(No. 785.) 24 March 1608. Copy of circular letter from the Privy Council, respecting the best means of levying an aid for making the King's eldest son, Prince Henry, a knight. It recommends composition, as a better process than inquisition, in that it is less troublesome to individuals, and requires no production of evidence, capable of prejudicing its producers on future occasions, under certain contingencies. Signatures:—Rich. Cant., Tho. Ellesmere, Chaunc, R. Salusbury, H. Northampton, Nottingham, T. Suffolke, E. Worster, E. Wotton, L. Zouche, J. Stanope, Jul. Caesar, Tho. Parrye.

(No. 293.) Copy of instruccions gyven to his majesties commissioners for the Leavying of ayde to make the most highe and noble Prince Henry his majesties eldest sonne knight. No date.

(No. A. 795.) 24 April 1610. Indenture of agreement between Henry Earl of Northampton, of the one part, and John Foyle, gentleman, of the other part; whereby the said earl grants to Mr. John Foyle, the next presentation to the rectory or parsonage of Cattistocke, co. Dorset, in case the present incumbent, John Mayo, clerk die within the next four years.

(No. A. 779.) Sept. 1610. A Declaracion of the quarrel between my Lord of Walden and Sir Edward Herbert. Signed by J. Peyton (who accompanied Lord Walden to the ground appointed for a duel between his Lordship and Sir Edward Herbert, in consequence of a challenge sent by the latter to his antagonist, who had struck him a blow), this lengthy narrative was drawn in Lord Walden's interest, to preserve his honour from any injurious misrepresentation of the affair. Sir Edward Herbert's challenge was dated 11 Sept. 1610 at Disseldorpe. The adversaries failed to meet one another in the appointed wood, though each is credited by the narrator with an honest purpose of fighting.

(No. 735.) Copy of instructions for the most Reverend Father in God, George Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, concerning certain orders to be observed and putt in execution by the severall bishops in his province. Endorsement of the paper in the handwriting of Mr. John Griffith. No date.

(No. 796.) The liste of my lordes (i.e. Lord Northampton's) servantes appointed to waite and attend my Lorde to Windsor. Giving the names of eleven "howshold servaunts," and twenty-nine "receyuours." No date.

(No. 808.) 3rd November 1612. Copy of the articles of the contract of marriage between the Palsgrave and the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of James the First.

(No. A. 809.) 24 February 1613. Copy of "The " Inscription upon the first stone laid with my lordes " (i.e. Earl of Southampton's) "his owne bandes of the " hospitall at Grenewich, devoutly kneeling vpon his " knees in fervent prayer to the holy Trinitie to blesse " and prosper the foundation." In the hand-writing of John Griffith.

(No. A. 790.) 1 Mar. 1614. Letter from the bishop of Chichester to the bishop of Lincoln, respecting the recent difference at Cambridge between the vice-chancellor and senior regent. "The blaze of this ignis " fatuus," says the writer, "hath flashed as farr as the " court at New Markett."

(No. A. 847.) 2 March 1613. Letter from the Bishop of Lincoln to Mr. John Griffith. Excusing himself for calling so seldom to inquire after the Earl of Northampton, and charging Mr. Griffith to assure the Lord Privy Seal of the writer's respect and care for him.

(No. B. 22.) 14 June 1614. The last will (in the testator's own hand-writing) of Henry, Earl of Northampton, baron of Marnehill, Lord Privy Seal, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, Knight of the Garter, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and one of the Privy Council. Avowing his gratitude to God for "deliveringe " him "in many and sondry tymes, from the most " subtile and entrappinge combinaciouns and practizes " of his enemies," the testator says "I die a trewe constant servaunt of his, and a member of the catholike and " apostolike church, sayenge, with St. Jerome. In qua " fide puer natus fui, in eadem senex morior." After directing his executors to inter him in the chapel of Dover castle, and declaring his loyal affection for the king, he continues, "I most humbly besech his excellent " majestie to accept, as a pore remembrance of me his " faithfull servaunt, a cupp of gold of one hundred " pounds value, with one hundred Jacobine peces of " twenty-two shillings a-pece therin, on which cup " my desire is there shold be this inscripcion 'Detur " Dignissimo.' To the most noble and hopefull Prince " Charles I give my best George. To my most dere " and entirely beloved nephewe, the earle of Suffolke, " I give my jewell of the three stones, on of them " beinge that Ruby, which his excellent majestie sent " me owt of Scotland as his first token." He bequeaths to the same earl "a cross of diamondes given me by my lady, my mother"; and his second George to the earl of Somerset. that the testator should remember this nephew, in "respect of Clunn intended by his father vnto him, "and now come to my hands"; a "suite of new "dressed hangings," formerly in the possession of Lord Barckley, "to the nowe L. Barkeley, my warde"; an annuity for life of 20*l.* out of the lease-lands at Greenwich bought of the Earl of Salisbury's executors, to Jhon Southerwood; an annuity, for life, of 40*l.*, out of the same lands to Jeames Symondes; 20*l.* to the poor of the parish of St. Martin's in the Fields, co. Middlesex; a piece of plate of the value of 20*l.* to Lord Worcester; twenty nobles to each of the gentlemen, and five marks to each of the yeomen, being menial servants then attendant on the testator in Northampton House, (the said legacies being given to "bye them blackes"), with the use of their several lodgings in Northampton House; and their allowances till Michaelmas next; and furthermore the following special legacies to certain of his servants,—200*l.* to Edward Willys; remission of a debt of 100*l.* and restoration of a patent to Thomas Jermy; 100*l.* a-piece to Francis Wyndham, Jhon Heydon, Giles Savage, Hughe Chomeley; 50*l.* a-piece to William Holler, Robert Lewyes, Jhon Wynn, Thomas Culpeper, Jhon Hickes, Henry Mildmay, Edward Gent, Andrew Juill, Christopher Harris, and Arthur Lenney; 100*l.* to John Taggard and his wife; 40*l.* a-piece to Pancroosse Fathers, William Foxe, Samuel Fissehe, Richard Larder, Peter Webster, and Thomas Scott; 20*l.* a-piece to Ferdinand Kelley and Jhon Holmes the taylor; 10*l.* a-piece to William Sowland and William Bland; 5*l.* a-piece to William Yomans and Jeames Foster; 40 shillings to Will the boy; 500 marks to each of the testator's executors, besides their expenses in executing the will; 20*l.* to the chapel of Dover Castle; 20*l.* to the poor of Dover; and 10*l.* to Thomas Willies. The executors appointed by the will are the testator's servants, John Griffith, William Burge, and Robert Cole, gentlemen, who are required to render a yearly account of their proceedings in respect of the testators will, at Northampton House, to the Earls of Suffolk and Worcester, and Lord William Howard, who are appointed overseers of the testament. Directions are given for the founding and incorporation of the testator's hospitals at Risinge and Greenwich, and for the completion and endowment of his hospital at Clonn. "I will," the testator says of the two first-named of these charities, "myne heir for ever shall haue "the nominacioun, placinge and displacinge of the pore "of the hospitall of Risinge; and the Company of "Mercers in London, of the pore in the hospitall at "Greenwich, yet so as they chose xii. out of Greenwich, "and thother eight out of Shotesham in Norfolk, where "I was born." It is also mentioned in the will that the testator has leased, for 10 years, to his executors, all his "jewelles, goodes and other thinges in that lease "expressed," in trust for the payment of his debts and legacies, and for the performance of "other things mentioned in the same lease." The will was proved 18 June 1614.

(No. A. 830.) 8 July 1614. Sets of Latin verses by Serjeant Hoskyns. 1. On his committal to prison on the above-named day. 2. After his liberation, 8 July 1615. 3. De seipso, 1634. Also, on paper No. A. 828, two sets of Latin verses, endorsed by Mr. John Griffith thus, "6 June, 1630. A coppie of verses made by Dr. Sharpe and Serjeant Hoskins upon the appearance "of a starr that day in the sermon tyme at Paules "Crosse (the kinges majestie beinge present) of the "birth of a Prince."

(No. 791.) 17 November 1614. Copy of a letter from John Griffith, at Graye's Inn, to Lord Norreys, about the dress to be provided for the late Lord Northampton's almsmen, after the fashion of the "almesmens gounes "at Thame," and other matters connected with the earl's charitable bequests. The writer undertakes to enjoin Lord Northampton's almsmen to pray for Lord Norreys, and adds, in excuse for the shortness of his letter, "my recesses from all attendance in Court disables me to geve your lordship any advertisementes of "newes."

(No. 778.) 16 June 1614. Copy of Sir John Brooke's acknowledgement of lviii. vs. iiiiid. received from Sir Robert Brett, Knt., by the appointment of the High Treasurer of England, being part of the money received by the said Sir Robert of the executors of the late Earl of Northampton, "for the repayre of Deale Castle."

(No. 897.) 16 July 1614. Copy of "a Schedule Indented of all such evidences and writings concerning "the manor of Clunne and Bishops Castle, in the "countie of Salop, late the inheritance of the right "honourable Henry late earle of Northampton, de"ceased: deliuered by John Griffith, esq., the sixteenth "day of July, 1614 to the right honourable Thomas "earle of Suffolk, Lord High Treasurer of England."

(No. 752.) 12 of August 1614. Letter from the earle Clan Ricard, at Sommer-hill, to Mr. John Griffith (or Griffin, as the name is spelt by the earl), entreating Mr. Griffith to "delever the mony allotted for Ferdorogh "O'Kelly nowe vnto hym befor yo' departur from "London into the country," as urgent affairs require O'Kelly's speedy return to Ireland. From John Griffith's endorsement of this paper it appears that "the "money" was the legacy bequeathed to Mr. O'Kelly by Lord Northampton.

(No. A. 789.) 5 Feb. 1615. Lord Chancellor Ellesmere's letter to James the First, praying, in consideration of his infirmities, to be discharged of his great place. "Most gracious Soueragene," he begins, "I find through "my great age accompanied with many greifs and "infirmities my sense and conceite is become dull and "heauy and memorie decayed, my judgment weake, my "hearing imperfect, my voice and speech fayling and "faltering, and in all the powers and faculties of my "mind and body great debilities." The plaintive petition ends, "I am unable to sustaine the burthen of "this greate seruise, for I am come to St. Paul's desier, Cupio dissolvi et esse cum Christo." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 889.) 24 September 1616. An abstract of the accounts between Mr. John Griffith, Henry Howard, and Lord Arundel, in respect of the late Earl of Northampton's charities.

(No. 930.) 27 Sept. 1616. A note of the moneys to be received, the debts and legacies to be paid, and the works and other things yet to be performed, by Mr. John Griffith, as executor of the late Earl of Northampton.

(No. 801.) 21 March 1617. A coppie of Sir Walter Rawleigh's lettre to the Kings Secretarie of England. Written from the island of St. Christopher at the above-given date, and beginning with, "Sir, as I haue not "hitherto given you any account of our proceedings "and passage towards the Indies: so haue I no other "subject to write of since our arivall ther of the greatest "and sharpest misfortunes that haue euer befallen any man."

(No. 777.) April 1617. Copy (in the handwriting of John Griffith) of a letter of petition from the Earl of Arundell, in Scotland, to Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, praying from the Lord Keeper a decree that the writer may enter into possession of the lands which his uncle of Northampton leased to his executors for 10 years in trust "to be a "suplye to his personall estate towards the perform- "ance of his will and other charitable workes by him "intended; the rents and profittes wherof haue been "since receyued and imployd by Mr. John Griffith to "the use accordinge to the late Lord Chancellor's orders "and decrees." The earl represents that he has suffered in this business from delays occasioned by the late Lord Chancellor's sickness and the negligence of his lawyers. He also solicits from the Lord Keeper a speedy hearing of a "cause dependinge befor you between me and one Parkes." At the close of this private letter the earl describes himself as the Lord Keeper's "affectionate true frend."

(No. A. 787.) 19 March 1620. Copy of Lord Bacon's letter to the House of Peers, of that date. Endorsed by John Griffith, "My lord St. Albans letter to the lords "of the parliament."

(No. 824.) Two sets of verses made by the Kinge his majestie (i.e. James I.) when he was at Burley Howse, intertayned by the Marquis of Buckingham.

(1.) The heavens that wept perpetually before,
Since we came hither, shewe theyr smiling cheere;
This goodly howse it smiles and all this store
Of huge provisions smyles vpon vs here.
The Buckes and stagges in full they seeme to amyle, God sende a smiling boye within a while.

(2.) A Vow or Wishe for the felicitye and fertility of the owners of this howse.

If ever in the Aprill of my dayes
I sat vpon Parnassus forked hill,
And there inflam'd with sacred fiery still
By pen proclam'd our greate Apollo's prayse,
Graunt glistening Phoebus with thy golden ruyes
My earnest suite, which to present thee here
Behold my * * of this blessed couple dere,
Whose vertues pure no tounge can duly blaze,

My prayer heare: sweete Jesus intercede.

(No. A. 818.) Copy of Lord Bacon's humble submission to the House of Lords. Signed, Francis Saint Alban, Canc.

(No. 695.) Jan. 1621. A true copy (with a translation into English) of the Latin oration addressed by Lord George Offolinski (chamberlain of and ambassador from the King's Majestie of Poland) to James the First at Whitehall, on Sunday, 11 March 1620.

(No. 754.) 1 May 1621. Copy of the Latin entry on the close roll of the circumstances under which the Great Seal passed from Francis, Viscount St. Alban, to Lord Keeper Williams.

(No. 772.) 4th of May 1621. Copy of the acknowledgment, by the commissioners for raising the first payment of the second of two entire subsidies granted to the King by Parliament, that Simon Thelwall of St. Andrewes, in the Wardrobe, London, has paid his contribution to the said tax.

(No. 785.) 7 June 1621. Copy of a note, stating for the information of Mr. John Griffith where the writer has left in safety the great standard, the pulpit cloth, the communion-table cloth, and other articles, including the "evidences for the hospitall and thother two hospitalles." The copyist's endorsement certifies that the letter was written by Mr. Swale, who was probably relinquishing some subordinate office having relation to the late Earl of Northampton's trusts for charitable uses.

(No. A. 804 and 805.) 12 August 1622. Letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury (George Abbot) to the Bishop of London, for the correction of the extravagances of unsound preachers; embodying a copy of the King's letter to the primate on the same subject; and enclosing the schedule of orders for the restraint of the same preachers and the encouragement of catechismal exercises on Sunday afternoons. The third of the said orders directing, "That noo Preacher of what title soever under the degree of a bishop, or deane at the least, doe henceforth presume to preach in any popular auditory the deepe pointes of Predestination, Election, Reprobation, and of the Universality, efficacy, resist-ability or irresistibility of God's grace &c." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.—See also, No. 80. A copy of the foregoing (circular) letter from the primate to the bishops of his province, with a copy of the afore-named orders.

(No. 687.) 1622. Petition of Hugh Barker, D.C.L., commissary and chancellor of the Bishop of Oxford, by letters patent under the episcopal seal, (granted 19 July, 17 James I., and subsequently confirmed by the dean and chapter of Christ Church in Oxford) to the Bishop of Lincoln, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal; praying for an injunction to restrain the said Bishop of Oxford and one Humphrey Jones from combining to deprive the petitioner of the powers and emoluments of his said office; and praying further that the said Bishop of Oxford may be required to appear before the Lord Keeper in the Court of Chancery, to answer to the allegations of the petition.

(No. A. 887.) 4 Sept. 1622. Letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Bishop of London; for the staying of unsound and dangerous preaching. Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith, as the primate's "second letter" on the subject, to the bishop.

(No. 714.) 5 Sept. 1622. Copy of a letter (signed John Lincoln, C.S.) from Lord Keeper Williams to the Custos Rotulorum and justices of the peace of Berkshire, ordering them to put in force the laws, for suppressing vagrancy, &c., against the "whole troupe of rogues, beggars, Ægyptians, and idle persons," who infest their county to the injury of the King's poor subjects, and "the deepe aspersion" of the present government. Requiring them, furthermore, "to correct the extortionate prices charged, in their county, for hay and oats at inns and hostleries, for flesh at shambles, and bread in bakers' shops," by "apportioninge such reasonable rates on all these particulars as in equitie and conscience shall be found fittinge."

(No. A. 798.) 17 Jan. 1623. Letter (signed Isabell Stafford) from Lady Stafford to her much respected friend Mr. John Griffith, begging him, as the executor of the late Earl of Northampton, to deliver to her cosen, Thomas Forster, or to the writer's brother, "the cove-nants which Lord Stafford entered vnto," and deposited with the Earl of Northampton, "when he acknowledged the statute of his land;" the lady having especial need of them "for settlinge of my daughter's joynture while my lord Stafford is living, which before my sons death was left raw and vnperfected." She adds, "If we now neglect it, perhaps hereafter my lord will not be in so good a mynd."—Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 713.) 15 March 1623. A coppie of Dr. Turner. his proposalles at a committee that day in parliament. Comprising six articles of enquiry against the Duke of Buckingham.

(No. 789.) 17 June 1623. An inventory of John Griffith's "beddinges and other implementes of house-hold" in his lodging at Greenwich.

(No. 788.) 9 October 1623. "A note of my disburse-mentes of 6l. 5s., that I receyued for one yeare and a quarter ended at Michaelmas last of the annuities of 5l. payable to the hospitall at Rysinge out of the Marsh land purchased at Greenwich with the stock of my lords hospitalles." For the hand-writing of John Griffith who, at the foot of the bill, makes note of the expenses of a journey to Rising. "Besydes my charge in travell from London to Rysinge, wherin spent 8l. 9s. 6d."

(No. 787.) Nov. 1623. "A note of my disbursements of 7l. that I receyued for one yeare ended at Michaelmas last of the annuities payable for keepinge of my lords tombe, and of the Earl and Countes of Surrey their tombe out of the marsh land purchased at Greenwich." In the hand-writing of John Griffith (secretary and executor of the late Earl of Northampton), whose signature is attached to the account, which contains three entries of moneys spent on the Earl of Surrey's tomb in "the church of Framingham," i.e. Framlingham, co. Suffolk. At the foot of the account, a "Mem. that these annuities are hereafter as they be receyued to be payd to the warden of the hospitall at Grenwich, and he is according to statute to pay them severally in one entyre payment yearlie at Allhaloutyd in such sort as therein is provided for the mayntenance of the sayd tombes.—John Griffiths."

(No. C. 103.) Copy of the articles of an agreement for marriage between Charles, Prince of Wales, and the Infanta; i.e. "Articuli m^ronalis conventus habiti inter Seren^m. Wallia Principem et Seren^m. Infant et comines eorund^m commissarios."—Endorsed by John Griffith, secretary to Henry Earl of Northampton.

(No. 685.) A coppie of a letter from the Spanish ambassador to the kinges Majestie; with the heading "Legatus Regis Catholici apud Anglos Jacobo Regi." The letter in which the Ambassador spoke indignantly of the Duke of Buckingham's demeanour in Spain:—"An Dux Buckinghamius contra auctoritatem et reverentiam Serenissimo Principi multa non fecerit? Si stante et presente Principe non solitus fuerit sedere, modo indecenti, pedes alteri sedi innixus? &c." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 707.) Paper, endorsed "Some Parliamentary Newes." On the latest particulars respecting Prince Charles's adventures in Spain, and the explanations given to Parliament by the Prince and the Duke of Buckingham with regard to their action in that country. "The Spanish ambassador," says the letter-writer, "demands Buckingham's head, in justice to his master. . . . The king refers all to his Parliament, who have honourable acquitted the Duke." No date.

(No. 759.) 23 April 1624. His Majestie's answer to a petition, deliuered him by the Houses of Parliament.

(No. 899.) 28 Nov. 1624. Memorandum that James the First (by letters patent under the Great Seal, 3 Sept. in the first year of his reign, directed to the Lord Treasurer of England), put an impost of ten shillings on every hundredweight of white starch imported into his realm, and of five shillings on every hundredweight of starch made by the company of starch-makers within his realm, and that, on 21 March in the said first year of his reign, his said Majesty leased the same impost for twelve years, from the next Feast of the Annunciation, to Henry Earl of Northampton, at a yearly rent of one-fourth of the profits thereof: and further that (on a surrender of the aforesaid lease), his said Majesty, on 28 November, in the sixth year of his reign, granted to the same earl another lease of the same impost on white starch for twelve years, at a yearly rent of 333l. 6s. 8d. The paper is endorsed by John Griffiths, thus, "28th November, 1624. A coppie of the note that I deliuered that day to Sir Jo. Ingram of the Generall Grauntes to my Lord of the imposition vpon starch."

(No. 709.) The Duke of Buckingham's speech to the Commons on the requirements of the navy, and his measures for keeping an adequate force at sea. Alluding to his public service and private embarrassments, the speaker says, "My journey into Spayne was all of my owne charge. I had not one penny of my master. To France I confesse my charge was borne. But that of the Low countries was my owne charge without any thing from the king. I am accused to be the cause of the losse of the narrowe seas, and of the damage there sustayned." Deriding the suggestion that the fleet was sent out last summer at the instigation of private resentment; the Duke speaks of the King of Spain's manifest attempts for an invasion, which compelled the King of England to send out a fleet. Admitted that, in discharging the duties of his office, he has made mistakes, the Duke palliates his errors by declaring them no offspring of ignorance, corruption, injustice, or oppression. No date.

(No. 686.) The copie of one of the Kinges speeches to the Lords and Commons assembled in parliament. Condemning the shameful disorder of some of his subjects in resorting to the houses of foreign ambassadors, and in contriving "that their children should be so bred here as if they were brought up eyther at Madrid or in Rome." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 811.) 7 Feb. 1626. Letter from Lewes, Bishop of Bangor (whilst in London for Charles the First's coronation), to his father-in-law, Sir Sackvill Trevor, Knt. at Place Newydd. Containing particulars of his gracious treatment by the King and the Duke of Buckingham, and other great personages; and of the success of his suit with the King and Duke on behalf of his correspondent. After stating that, on the night of the last Monday in January, he "allayed at the red lion in Grayes Inne lane where the plague has not been all the Infection tyme," the writer says, "On Tuesday, the next day, I wayted on the king at dinner. After I had kyssed his hand and received as gracions a welcome as ever I had in my life, I moued his majestie in your behalf with no littell earnestnes. Tyme will not suffer me to write the summe of the wordes, but the effect of his majesties answere was this, that by his troth he would do for you, and that you weare a very honest and able man." Further on he says, "I thancke god I never had so much favor in my lif from his majestie, as I had synce I cam vp last. I was one of the Busshops who held the cloth over his head whilst his majestie was annoited, and after his annoiting he graciously kissed me and some 5 busshops that weare at the annoiting, as the ceremony is, and when his majestie sate vpon his throne, on a high scaffold with a crowne on his head, we did our homage to him and then wee kissed hym. I thank god I am now growen againe in extraordinary favor with the Duke of Buckingham." The writer of this long and interesting epistle observes, "My Lord of Rutland at the very coronation holding the sworde asked me very hartlie how his cosen Anne did, and whether she was come vp to London, and whether she had a boy or a girle and very chearfully glad to heare of her." Dated from the writer's lodging in Mr. Frost's house, in Westminster Cloyster.

This endorsement is in the handwriting of Mr. John Griffith. The papers set forth, 1. An abstract of the king's address to the Lords and Commons; 2. The Lord Keeper's speech; 3. The King's additional and concluding remarks to the Commons.

(No. A. 145.) 6 April 1626. Copy of the humble remonstrance of the Commons, now assembled in Parliament, to the King's most Excellent Majesty. Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 740.) 8 April 1626. An abstract of Sir William Walter's speech that day at a committee in the Lower House of Parliament. This endorsement of the paper is in the handwriting of Mr. John Griffith. The paper itself is headed "S^r William Walter his speech in the Lower House of Parliament," and begins with these words, "On Munday afternoone Sir William Walter proposed that the cause of all the greivances was that all the Kings Counsell ride upon one Horseback, and therefore that the Parliament was to advise his Majestic, as Jethro did Moses, to take vnto him assistants, with their qualities. Exod. 18. 21." The qualities which the speaker desired to see in the King's advisers are then set forth in eight separate articles.

(No. 768.) 1 May 1626. Articles of the Earle of Bristol, whereby he chargeth the Duke of Buckingham the first of May, 1626. Endorsed, in the handwriting of the body of the paper, "The Earle of Bristolls Articles against the D. of Buckingham."

(No. A. 775.) 6 June 1626. Copies of Charles the First's complimentary letter to the University of Cambridge, on the election of the Duke of Buckingham to be chancellor of the University; and of the Duke's letter in acknowledgment of the distinction conferred on him by the professors of learning, whose good opinion he prizes highly, notwithstanding his want of scholarship. "Yet I cannot," the Duke says, "attribute this honour to any desert of mine, but to the sacred memory you beare to my dead M^r the king of schollers, who loved you and honoured you oft with his presence, and to my gracious M^r now livinge, who inheriteth with his blessed father's vertues the affections which he bore to your University."

(No. 898.) 19 Aug. 1626. Paper of memoranda endorsed by John Griffith, "Remembrances of sundry businesses whereof I may have use vpon many occasions." The first of these memoranda is that, on 11 May, 1625, he had carried to Lord Arundell the copies of the statutes of the hospitals of Clunn and Rysinge, together with certain books, and a list of "the names and ages of the poore men and women in both houses beinge xxvi who make between theym two thousand eight and twenty." Another memorandum is that he must caution "Sir Robert Howard hereafter not to be so forward in disposing his vncles charitie contrary to his will and institution to pleasure either freind or seruant."

(No. A. 41.) 26 Jan. 1627. Letter from Hugh Owen at Worcesthowse to his worthy cousin John Griffith, Esq. at Bloxham, near Banbury. After giving his correspondent the latest gossip of the town about the blockade of Rochell, "by sixty men of warre frenche and spanishe," and about "a huge great pavier a-preparing in spain," the writer adds, "Your noble frend, and our best shelter and succour (I meane my Lord Privie Seale) is sicklie, but whither of the gowt his owne disease or otherwise we can not discerne. He kept his bedd this 3 weeks or more, soe weake in bodie that he hath taken nothing but a little broth and gelie, till Thursday last that he called for beefe and brewes, but could not eate it, and yesterday he desired a dishe of buttered eggs, and did but tast it, yet he speaks better within these 2 or 3 dayes then he did before, makes his bargains himself and calls for his accomptes of vs; which puts us in great hope of his recouerye. Thus with my dearest love to yourself, to Mr. Griffith, and your good brother, his bedfellow, my cousen Richard Hughes, I rest, &c." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 761.) 17 March 1627. The Lord Keeper's speech in Parliament on March 17, 1627, beginning with "My lords and you the knights and burgesses of the house of Commons. If I had bene delighted in long speakinge, yet the example and commaunds of his Majestic were more than enough to restraine the superfluitie of that humor. But there is yett more for that excellent compacted speech; which we haue heard from his Majestic, beginning with a reason, that this is a time for action and not for speech."

(No. 790.) 30 of April 1627. A paper entitled "The effect (i.e. purport) of the speech delivered by the Lord Primare before the Lord Deputy and the great assembly at his Majesties Castle of Dublyn the last day of April, 1627."

(No. 270.) A list of the names of the persons slayne and taken prisoners in y^e Isle of Ree.

(No. A. 313.) A relation of the armyes landing in the isle of Retz. A lucid and graphic account of the naval and military operations by an eye-witness.

(No. 803.) 2 March 1628. Copies of Sir John Elliottes and Mr. Selden's speeches at the breakinge up of the parliament.—The endorsement of the paper in John Griffith's handwriting.

(No. 747.) 6 of May 1628. The Lord Keeper his speech that day to the House of Commons.

(No. 783.) 30th of January 1629. A coppie of his majesties and the Commissioners Orders in the cause between the Deane and Canons of Christchurch and the students of that house. Being a minute of the proceedings at Whitehall on 30 Jan. 1629, when the king was "gratiously pleased to heare the complaints of the studentes against the Deane and Canons of Christ Church in Oxen, with their learned counsell on both sides about the gouernment of the house, and the allowances of the revenues belonging to the same for the maintenance of the studentes, whoe pretended to haue bene of late much abridged of their allowances by the said Deane and Canons." Failing to prove their case to the satisfaction of "his majestie and the lords to whom the hearinge of this business was committed," the students were censured for "their impertinente complaints," and were "enioyned by his majestie to returne backe to their studies and submitte themselves to the Deane and Cannons."

(No. 894.) 9 Feb. 1629. Letter from Richard Hughes to Mr. John Griffith. About the late Lord Northampton's charities, and the action of the Mercer's Company, Lord Arundell, and Lord Suffolke in respect to them.

(No. 775.) 17th of March 1629. Copy of the articles proffered by Mr. More to the Lords Commissioners against the warden of New Colledge about the choise of the proctor. The articles charged the warden of New Colledge, with exercising unfair influence in the election of a proctor, to the prejudice of Mr. More and the advantage of Mr. Stringer, candidates for the office. Endorsed by John Griffith.

(No. 942.) 17 April 1629. The last will of Richard Williams, "auncient-bearer vnder Captaine Thomas Powell" and nephew of Mr. John Griffith; containing numerous legacies of minutely described articles of wearing apparell. It would be serviceable to a writer on costume in Charles the First's England. It appears from one of the legacies that the auncient-bearer's monthly pay was iii li. v s.

(No. 410.) Packet of sixteen papers, receipts for rent of a set of chambers in Doctors Commons. The earliest of these acknowledgements runs thus:—"Rec'd. this xxth of October 1629 of Mr. Dr. Griffith for one halfe yeares rent of certaine Chambers situate in the Dcora. Com'ons London late in the possession of Dr. Woodhouse deceased due to Mr. Fellowes and Schollers of Trinity Hall in Cambridge at the feast of St. Michael the Archaungell past the sum of—xs. George Cole "Recr." The series of receipts shows that the advocate continued to be tenant of the same chambers at the same rent, till Lady Day 1641.

(No. A. 845.) 28 May 1630. Copy of a letter from the Bishop of London (Laud) to "his vice-chauncellor and the heades of houses" of Oxford University. Urging the careful observance of "formalities which are in a sort the outward and visible face of the university." Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. A. 859.) 7 July 1630. A coppie of a decree in Chauncery in a matter between the bishop of Durham and Sir Harry Martyn. Endorsed by Mr. John Griffith.

(No. 925.) 23 Jan. 1631. A codicil to the last will of John Griffith, Esq. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, formerly secretary to the late Earl of Northampton, Keeper of the Privy Seal to James the First. It revokes two conditional legacies of 100l. to each of his nephews George Griffith and John Griffith, clerks, as they have each obtained an ecclesiastical benefice worth more than 40l. a year; and divides the money, thus recalled, amongst three of the testator's neices.

(No. 858.) 23 May 1631. Memorandum of the settlement made by Sir Henry Marten, Knt., (Dean of the Arches), of certain "differences in poynt of jurisdiction" that have fallen out betwene the Lord Bishop of Bangor and his Chauncellor." Signed Lewes Bangor.

MISS C.

Dated from Yorke Howse. Signed, Northumberland.

(No. A. 822.) 1641. Verses on Lord Strafford's Fall, entitled "My Lord Lieutenant of Ireland his Farewell." A poem of nine stanzas.

Goe emptie ioyes
With all your noyse,
And leaue me here alone,
In sweet sad silence to bemoane
Your vaine and fleet delight:
Whose danger none can see aright,
Whilst your false splendor dims his sight.

Goe and insnare
With your trimme ware
Some other easie wight;
And cheat him with your flattering spight:
Raine on his head a shower
Of honour, favour, wealth and power,
Then snatch it from him in an houre.

3.

Fill his bigge minde
With gallant wind
Of insolent applause;
Let him not feare ill-curbing lawes,
Nor King nor people's frowne,
But dreame on something like a crowne,
And climeing toward it tumble downe.

Now tis too late To imitate
Those lights whose pallidnesse
Argues not inward guiltinesse;
Their course one way is bent,
The reason is, theres no dissent
In Heaven's high court of Parliament.

(No. A. 831.) 12 May 1644. A copy of "The Speech of Thomas earle of Strafford, intended to bee spoken on the scaffold the day hee was beheaded (12 May 1641); but being interrupted hee delivered it to his brother, S^r George Wentworth: from whose originall copy vnder the earl's owne hand, this is word for word transcribed."

Nov. 28. The account gives a vivid picture of the affair, and the subsequent attitude of the two forces. The writer estimates the strength of the rebels before the attack at 4,000, and their loss at 300 men, left dead in the streets and backsides of the town, and many wounded.

(No. 47.) Two sets of satirical verses. 1. A copy of one of the several attacks which Sir John Suckling brought upon himself by his famous gift of a troop of horse to Charles the First, beginning—

I tell thee, Jack, th' ast given the king
So rare a present, &c.

And ending—

Since under Mars thou wert not borne
To Venus glide and thinke no scorne
Let it be my aduise,
Leaue warre and thankful be to fate
Recovered hath thy lost estate
By carding and by dice.

• Sir John Suckling's Answer, beginning—

I'll tell thee, Fool, who ere thou be
That made a fine sing-song of mee,
Thou art a very sott
Thy very lines doe thee betray,
Thy barren witt makes all men say
"Twas some rebellious Scott.

(No. 732.) Oct. 1642. A Declaration of the Battaile late fought between Keynton and Edghill by his Majesties Army, and that of the Rebels. Together with other successes of his Majesties army happening since.

(No. 45.) Verses against the Presbytery and Parliament, beginning—

The wisest king did wonder when he spied
The nobles march on foote, the vassalls ride;
His Ma^{tie} may wonder now to see
Some that would needs be kings as well as he,
A sad presage of danger to the land
When Lower strue to gett thupper hand,
When prince and peares to peasants must obey
When laymen must their teachers teach the way.

(No. 46.) Copy of a royalist poem ("as with great applause it was presented to the king in his most just arms to suppress the rebellious practises in the kingdom of Scotland,") beginning—

But you who whiles you would to heaven aspire
See heaven torment and sett the world on fire
Bould sonnes of tumult, that so long assay
To rule the sunne vntill you loose the day
What rage enflames you that see deepe yee wound
Your nations honor and profane her ground.

(No. 741.) 12 June 1643. The Names of those Parliament Men and Divines, which make up the Assembly at Westminster for the Reformation of the Church of England in Doctrine and Discipline, convoaked and entitled by ordinance, 12 Junii, 1643.

(No. 760.) 30 Sept. 1644. Charles the First's proclamation, "declaring his majestyes resolution for settling "a speedy peace by a good accommodation, and invitation to all his majestyes lovinge subjects to ioyne "together for assistance therein." This proclamation was printed by the King's printers, Robert Barker and John Hill, at Bristol, 1644.

(No. 766.) Propositions offered to the consideration of the Honorable Houses of Parliament. Nine satirical proposals for the amendment of usages observed at "the "tyme of good tidings which the kings men commonly "call Christmas." The ninth and last of these proposals urges that, having sequestrated for the public use the revenues of the bishops, cathedrals, and many laylandlords, the Parliament would do well "to sequester "all new yeares guiftes, as capons, turkys, hens, geese, "and such things as will live, for the use of the king "and parliament."

(No. 737.) Paper having on the one side a copy of "The Officers and Souldiers of S' Jho: Fairfax his "Army Their demands" (no date), and on the other side a memorandum of "A petition exhibited (21 April, "1647, being Wednesday in Easter Weeke) to his "Majestie by an Officer in the name of the army," praying the King to commit himself to the army, "who "would restore him to his former honor," with His Majesty's reply to the petitioner.

(No. C. 258.) 25 September 1660. Letter from Dr. William Griffith (Chancellor of St. Asaph and Bangor), Doctors Commons, London, to his cousin John Griffith, Esq., of Carreglyd. After touching on an affair of business, the writer says, "The news that is, is new and joyfull: just now I am retired to my chamber from seeing "the noble Princes, the Princes Royall of Orrang, landing

"att White Hall with his Maiety and the Duke of York, "which went to meet her to Graues end. Att her passing the tower there was about a hundred ordinances "shott. All thinges are well and quiet here. The army "is every day disbanding."

(No. A. 713.) Temp. Car. II. Curious letter to Mr. John Rowlandes, written by Edward Lloyd, one of the grooms of the Privy Chamber to Charles II., giving directions for the suitable interment in Westminster Abbey of Mr. Morris Wynn, also a groom of the same chamber, "For "though," says the writer, "he often sayd he desired a "private decent funeral and no rings unless to his "brethren, yet for the respect I had for him, and that "he may be interred according as he lived with credit, "I desire it may be handsomely carry'd on, that I hope "those who were his friends att Whitehall, and our "countreymen in town who were acquainted with him "may be invited to the funeral, and have rings, of such "value as are usually given on the like occasion, only "our brethren the gromes ought to have 20s. rings or "thereabouts, and my Lord of Rochester." The writer has no doubt that "the Lord of Rochester will give leave "that he may be interred in the Abby as his desire was," and gives directions for bringing together a proper train of coaches for the procession. "I think," he says, "it is "gloves that is usually given to coachmen."

(No. 951 to No. 972.) Twenty-one neatly written paper of pedigrees, and extracts from records and muniments of various kinds, illustrative of the family of Talbot.

(No. A. 80.) 3 Oct. 1688, Badminton. "Having had "the King's grace by his gracious letter under his Privy Signett and Signe Manuall to give deputations to as "many of those gentlemen whose commissions I had by "his order called in, as I should judge ready & fitt to "serue him againe in that employment. Looking upon "you to bee one of that number, I send you this, to lett "you know yow are restored, and desire you will act by "the commission you formerly had, (the supersedeas to "which I hereby supersede), and which I doubt not you "will make use of for his Majesties service. And so "bidding you heartily fare well I remain.—Your Loving "Friend—Beaufort."—To John Griffith esq., Anglesey. (No. A. 814.) A list of "The names of the persons that "voted for a Standing Armie." life, of a certain tenement and lands in Kefn y Vyrwen aforesaid, at a yearly rent "of the somme of thryttie " and three shillings and fourepenne of currant money " of England at the feastes of Phillippe and Jacobe " thapostells and All Saintes by equal porciouns, for " all maner of rentes presentes and services, due vnto the " said Owen Holland or his heires and assignes out of " the same."

(No. B. 303.) Aug. (), 1596. Indenture of agreement between Owen Holland, of Berrowe, co. Anglesey, Esq. of the one part, and Griffith Bagnall, second son of Sir Henry Bagnall, Knt., of the other part; whereby the said Owen transfers to the said Griffith, all his lease to farm for thirty years of crown lands in Eskiviock, in the hundred of Meney, co. Anglesey, with the right to raise and sell coals therein, during the said term; in consideration of the sum of 150*l.* to be paid to the said Owen by Sir Henry Bagnall, Knt., and of the said Sir Henry's undertaking to assure the fee simple of the residue of the township of Eskiviock to the said Owen and his heirs. The agreement reserves to Owen Holland a moiety of the coals, coal mines, and waste grounds affected thereby. The recitals of the instrument are interesting, viz.:—I. Lease to farm for forty years, granted by Hen. VIII., in the 23rd year of his reign to William Sackvil, one of the grooms of the King's chamber, of the township of Eskiviock, and of all lands and tenements, &c. there pertaining to the crown, with licence to take and sell coals therein, at a yearly rent of vii li. viii s. viii d. to be paid into the King's exchequer at Carnarvon; the said farm and lands to be held and enjoyed by the grantee as fully and completely as they were held and enjoyed by "Llwelyn ap Rces ap Tudder ap Llwelyn, a native of the townshipp" aforesaid.—II. Lease to farm of the premises, 1 July 7 Eliz., from the crown to Sir Nicholas Bagnall, knight, with liberty to dig and sell coals, for twenty-five years from the Michaelmas of 1571, or from any earlier time at which Sir Nicholas's interest therein should terminate, at the yearly rent of vii li. viii s. viii d. to be paid into the receipt of the exchequer at Westminster, or to other authorised receivers. III. Lease to farm of the premises, 16 Dec. 18 Eliz., from the crown to Henry Harvy, Esq., one of Her Majesty's "gentlemen penciouners," for thirty years from Michaelmas, 1595, at the same rent, with "license " to take and sell the sea-coales within the townshipp " aforesaid." IV. The deed, 20 Feb., 18 Eliz., whereby the said Henry Harvy conveyed his interest in the premises to Owen Holland aforesaid.

(No. B. 79.) 10 August 1596. Indenture of agreement between Sir Henry Bagnall, Knt., of the one part, and Owen Holland, Esq., of Berowe, co. Anglesey, of the other part, for the definition of interests and rights, affected by, but insufficiently considered in, a previous agreement, whereby on 8 August 38 Eliz., the said Owen Holland "granted and assigned to Griffith Bagnall " second son of Sir Henry Bagnall, diuerse landes and " tenementes with thappurtenances within the towne- " shippe of Eskyvioge in the countie of Anglesey, " amounting to about the value of moytie or an half of " the said townshipp of Eskyvioge for the tearme of " thirtie years."

(No. B. 293.) 8 Aug. 1596. Indenture of an assignment by Sir Henry Bagnall, Knt. to Owen Holland, of Berrowe, co. Anglesey, Esq., and his heirs, of an assignment of a moiety of the township of Eskyviog, with right to raise and sell coal there, held by the said Sir Henry Bagnall, his heirs and assigns, in fee farm for ever under grants from the crown. The deed recites the already mentioned grants to Sir William Sackevile, Sir Nicholas Bagnall, and Henry Harvy.

(No. B. 297.) Last day of February 1598. Indenture of a lease for twenty-one years, granted by Owen Holland of Berowe, co. (No. C. 308.) 9th of March 1634. A true and perfecte Inventory of all such goodes, catells, chattells, and credit of Rees ap Mathewe, late of Llangeinwen, co. Anglesey, and in the diocese of Bangor, deceased, intestate, as remayne as yett unadministered by Elizabeth Griffith, his late wief and his administratrix.

(No. B. 292.) 25 November 1635. Certificate on illuminated vellum, under the signature and seal of John Borough, Knt., Garter Principall King of Armes, that Sir Thomas Holland of Berrow co. Anglesey (whose right to bear for his arms Azure a Lion Rampant Gardant between five flowers de Lice Argent, has been challenged on the ground that the said arms belong properly to the family of Holland sometime Duke of Exeter) has demonstrated his descent from Hockin alias Roger Holland, who lived temp. Edw. III., and has furthermore demonstrated that the said arms have been borne by divers gentlemen, his kinsmen, being descendants of the said Hockin: In regard for which demonstrations, and also for the unquestionable gentility of Sir Thomas Holland (who, besides being dignified with knighthood, is a justice of the Peace and Deputy Lieutenant of his county), it is further certified that the said Principal King at Arms has declared the said Sir Thomas Holland and his heirs entitled to bear the said arms.

(No. 836.) 8 June 1636. Letter, signed by the Archbishop, authorising the son of the late Bishop of Bangor to receive from the clergy of that diocese, a tenth granted by way of benevolence to the said bishop towards his expenses in repairing the church of Bangor; the money to be spent in carrying out the late bishop's intentions respecting the cathedral.

(No. A. 319.) 30 Aug. 1636. An elegie vpon the much lamented death of the vertuous gentlewoman, Mrs. Margaret Lewis, who decessed the 30th of August 1636. Composed by her poorest servaunt, who unfeignedly laments her death. The following lines of the poem show what district of the island of Anglesey was supposed to be most familiar with the lady's virtues:—

Mourne, Llyvon mourne, for thou alasse hast lost
Thy hopeful mistress, neyther canst thou boast
Of any thing but grieve, since she is gone
Who was thy dearest, and thy onely one.

(No. C. 186.) Hilary Term, 1636. Copy of Sir Thomas Holland's affidavit in the Court of Exchequer, respecting the course of the river Kefney, co. Anglesey, and injury done to him by Richard Bulkley, of Bewmares, and Thomas Cheadle his undertenant, who have stayed and diurterd the said river by means of a stagne, placed across and athwart the stream, contrary to the engagement made by them seven years since, when the complainant first had recourse to the Court of Exchequer for protection in this matter. This dispute had its origin thirty years before, when Sir Richard Bulkeley, Knight, grandfather of the aforementioned Richard Bulkeley, constructed a "stagne" in the river, and was indicted for so doing in the Great Sessions for Anglesey by the deponent. Several of the legal papers of the collection have reference to this cause of quarrel, and litigation arising therefrom.

(No. B. 306.) 26 Nov. 1636. Inspecimus of proceedings in a suit, PRYTHERG v. HOLLAND, in the court of the council of the Marches of Wales, whereby the plaintiff, Richard Prythergh of Mevirian, co. Anglesey, Esq., sought to establish his right to a certain way, in Trevirith, leading from his ancient dwelling-house and estate over the lands of Sir Thomas Holland, Knight, of Berrowe, in the same county, with the depositions of several witnesses in the suit; and also with the decision of the council of the said Marches, which was in the plaintiff's behalf,—leave, however, being granted to the defendant to have the case tried and decided by Nisi Prius, within the county of Salop, within the space of two years, after which time, should he neglect to avail himself of the privilege thus accorded to him, he must abide by the aforesaid judgment of the court of the Marches of Wales.

(No. 44.) 8 Nov. 1636. General synod of all the clergy of the diocese of Bangor held and celebrated by Edmund, by the divine providence, bishop of Bangor, on above-named day. The list contains the names of all the clergy present, with their respective offices, preferments and cures.

(No. 812.) 15th of December 1636. Writ from the council in the marches of North Wales, to underwritten officers within the principality and marches, for the apprehension of Katherine Lloyd and Robert ap William ap William, who are to be brought as "rebells" before the said council.

(No. A. 987.) 3 July 1637. The humble petition of Edward Moris of Llansilin to the archbishop of Canterbury, praying that he may be dismissed out of the court of High Commission, where he "is questioned for setting up a seate in the chancell of the said parish church, which was formerly pulled down by the churchwardens of the said parish by order of Dr. William Griffith, the chauncellor of the lord Bushoppe of St. Assaphen." The petitioner urges in justification of his action in thus replacing the pew, that Dr. Griffith had ordered the churchwardens to restore it, when he had ascertained that "the seat was in no way prejudiciall" either to the standing of the communion table alteration "ways or to eny other part of the said chancell." The petition is referred by the primate to Dr. Griffith for proper examination and treatment.

(No. C. 168.) 28 Sept. 1639. Return of an inquisition held on a writ of "diem clausit extremum," at Beaumaris co. Anglesey, respecting the estates of Arthur Bagenall, deceased.

(No. 773.) 20 Feb. 1640. Letter (obscurely worded on some affair of business) from John bishop of St. Asaph (Joh: Asaphen) to his "right worshipfull and his very loving cosen Dr. Griffith chauncellor of St. Asaph and Bangor."

(No. C. 44.) 9 Feb. 1641. Forty-four sheets of a mutilated copy of the petition, presented to the Rt. Hon. William viscount Say and Seale, one of his Majesty's Privy Council, and Master of the Court of Wards and Liveries, in behalf of Nicholas Bagenalle, a minor, son of Arthur Bagenall, deceased, who was elder son of Sir Henry Bagenall, "knt. and marshall of the kingdome of Ireland." Only the opening pages are preserved of this petition, which is a strong exparte statement of the intercourse between Sir Henry Bagnall and the Hollands of Berow, in which Sir Henry (who lived habitually in Ireland, and was imperfectly acquainted with his interests in Eskiviock and other parts of North Wales) is represented to have been outwitted and over-reached in various bargains by the Hollands who, as resident proprietors keenly alive to their interests, were still persisting in a course prejudicial to the said minor. Having set forth several more substantial injuries done to the estate of the minor, the petitioners urge, "And the said Sir Thomas Holland hath erected seates or puses in the chauncell of Eskeiviog church, the same places where he soe erected the saide seates beinge, and all or most parte of the saide chancell belonging to the said Nicholas Bagenall and his ancestors as well as in regard of his and theire ranke and quality as in the "right of the saide seuerall messuages, tenements, and greate estates here and they time out of memory hadd and haue in the said parishe." It is further alleged that "of late, takinge advantage of the minority of the said Nicholas Bagenall, Sir Thomas Holland of Berowe had, on some partial information "unduly procured from the archbishop of Canterbury without any suite, and the see of Bangor being then full, within which the saide parish is, a faculty or license to breake downe the chauncell wall of the North side of the saide churche, and there to erect a chappel for him the saide Sir Thomas Holland and his heires to the disinherison of his majesty's warde, whose hath right on the seate and sittinge-place adjoininge and annexed to the saide wall, so licensed to bee broken down, notwithstandinge the Bishoppe of the diocese refused to grant any such license."

(No. B. 307.) 13 Feb. 1642. Indenture (covering four large and closely written skins) of settlement of property (belonging to Sir Thomas Holland, Knt., of Berow, in the parish of Trevarthyn, co. Anglesey, and his nephew Owen Holland of the same places), made between the said Sir Thomas and Owen of the first part, and Piers Lloyd of Llygwy, co. Anglesey, Esq., John Griffith the elder of Llyu'n, co. Carnarvon, Esq., Owen Woode of Llangwyfen, co. Anglesey, Esq., Robert Wynne of Voylas, co. Denbigh, Esq., Hugh Wynne of Llannuda, co. Carnarvon, Esq., and Robert Wynne of Holyhead, co. Anglesey, of the second part: Whereby, in consideration of a marriage agreed upon between the said Owen Lloyd and Jane daughter of the said Piers Lloyd, and of the sum of 1,300*l.* to be paid to them by the said Piers Lloyd, as a marriage portion for his daughter, the said Sir Thomas and Owen convey to the persons of the second party, in trust for the purposes of the agreement, the manor-house and demesne of Berow aforesaid, with messuages, lands, tenements, &c. in the towns, fields, and hamlets of Bedfordd, Keneglwys, Rhoscolyn, Caerdegoe, Mathe-warne, Wyan, Pentraeth, Nanlynrva, Bodlen, Klynoche, Vechan, Llanvaes, Bewmares, Swydryn, and elsewhere, together with all their "seates sittinge kneelinge and buryinge places easementes commodities and advantages in the parish of Llanerhangel Eskeivioge in the said county of Anglesey and all that chapel in the said church pertaining and lately built by Sir Thomas Holland and all the seates sittinge kneelinge and buryinge places in the south side of the chancel of the said church, and all other seates sittinge kneelinge and buryinge places &c. in the said church or any other of the premises &c. &c. used or enjoyed by the said Sir Thomas Holland or any of his auncestores."

(No. B. 296.) 18th of Feb. 1642. Indenture of agreement (between William Griffith of Carnethour, co. Anglesey, Doctors of Law, and Chancellor of the diocese of St. Asaph, of the first part, Robert Owen, son and heir apparent of John, Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, and Francis Owen of London, gentleman, of the second part, and the said bishop of the third), whereby "in consideration of a marriage heretofore had and solemnized between him the said William Griffith and Mary his now wife daughter of the said lord bishoppe of St. Asaph, and of the marriage portion of the said Mary," the said William Griffith conveys to the said Robert and Francis his mansion-house at Carnethour, with other estate of land in for the benefit of his said wife and their issue.

(No. 945.) 15 Aug. 1642. Letter from Hughe Johnes and William Thomas to Mr. Doctor Griffith at his house in Carnethor, co. Anglesea, respecting the death and last will of his uncle Hugh Owen.

(No. A. 172.) 1642. Copy of the decree (pronounced by Sir John Lambe, Doctor of Laws, and Judge of the Arches Court of Canterbury) dismissing, with costs, the petition of Sir Arthur Terringham, Knt., now deceased, and his wife lady Terringham for the revocation of the faculty conceded to Sir Thomas Holland to build a chapel on the north side of the chancel of the church of Eskivioge.

(No. A. 193.) 3 July 1643. Copy of the articles preferred, in the Great Sessions of the county of Anglesey, against Arthur Michael, Roger Phillips, Symon David, William ap Jennr and others, who are accused of riotous conduct in the parish church of Eskiviog.

(No. A. 783.) 5 Oct. 1643. Writ to the high sheriff and others of the county of Anglesey, for the suppression of riotous meetings near the parish church of Eskiviog, and the apprehension of persons concerned in the disorderly assemblies.

(No. A. 773.) 1 Dec. 1643. Last will of William Griffith, D.C.L. of Caernether, co. Anglesey. After making a general bequest of his household stuff to his wife, should there be no necessity to sell it or any part of it for the payment of his debts, the testator adds, "To this bequest of Household stuff my meaning is that my wife should have the vse of all during her life, but the propertie of all standards together withall Bedsteeds, Tables and Linery Cubbord I giue and bequeath to my heyre." He appoints for executors his "well beloved Brethren George Griffith of Llanymyneck in the county of Salop, Dr. of Divinity, John Griffith of Llanvaithlô in the county of Anglesey, cleark and Mr. of Arts, and Hugh Griffith of Caernetherr aforesaid, gent."

(No. A. 55.) Letter from the commissioners of array for the county of Anglesey to a right honourable person (whose name does not appear), praying him to prevail on the king to follow the example of his royal predecessors and "exempte this island from any presse of men, att his time." This entreaty is provoked by the king's writ, lately directed to the said commissioners, requiring them to "presse and raise twoe hundred and fifty alle" (Pable) "men in this county for his majesty's service." The petitioners ground their petition on the burdens they and their fellow-islanders bear, and the difficulties they encounter for the safe custody of an island, which is exposed to the attacks of Irish rebels and the parliamentary forces. "First we are," they say, "an island situat betweene Ireland and Lancashire, lyinge open and subject to invasion on all partes, beinge dayly robbed on our coaste by the rebbells of Ireland and parliamentary shippes, which are many in number att this time in Luerpoole, and threaten dayly to invade and possesse themselves of this Island, being of the greatest consequence of any other place in these partes vnto them."—No date.

(No. A. 786.) 21 Sept. 1645. Captain Hugh Griffith's memorandum of money received by him of the cessment made for the providing of new armes instead of those sent to Denbighshire and repayment of the advance money then paid to the souldiers.

(No. 235.) 14 April 1644. Muster-roll of the Trayned Band of Tallybolion.

(No. 219.) 21 Feb. 1645. List of the soldiers selected from the Trained Band of the hundred of Talabolion, to serve in the force of "sixteene able and sufficient fire-men of the trayned men and auxiliaries of each comott," of the county of Anglesea, appointed to guard the "river of Menai."

(No. A. 833.) 21 Feb. 1645. Letter from John bishop of St. Asaph (signed John Asaphen) respecting the disturbances in and near Conway. The town is in a ferment; but the writer does not think it needful at present that his son, and his correspondent's son, should forsake the school there.

(No. A. 838.) 8 April 1645. Memorandum of the bequests made (the day before her death) by Mrs. Griffith, wife of William Griffith, doctor of laws, to her nearest kindred and servants. The legacies to her children are expressive of maternal tenderness. The lady's gifts to her servants are, also, characteristic:—"To Jane Stoddard my painefull and carefull maid I giue 5*l.* and the rest of my better sort of wearinge apparell. Some of my more ordinarie cloaths I desire should be giuen to my other maydes that haue taken paines with me. And to Eliu Pugh, my children's nurse, I giue first the frize gown I now weare. To Mary Draycott, poor wench, 5*l.* besides her share of some of my cloathes."

(No. 232.) 12 Dec. 1645. Captain Hugh Griffith's accompt of Powder, Match, and Bullets bought and received for the use of the Trained Soldiers of the Hundred of Tallybolion.

(No. 613.) Not dated. Draught of 9 resolutions to be adopted by the gentlemen of Anglesey, respecting the taxation of the island for the maintenance of the forces of the Parliament. 1. That the state was att no charge for the reduction of Anglesey, whereupon it may justly be desired that they contribute not for the reduction & payinge of the soldiery in other counties. 2. That they of Anglesey have maintained the parliament forces quartered in their countie, & payd them duly, without the helpe and assistance of any other countie ener since their submission, though it were to the charge of a fift part of their yearly meanes generally. 3. That the gentlemen who mett at Denbigh had no commission from the countie to encrease the charge, that layes heavy upon them, nor to consent to pay any proportion of the 1200*l.* mencioned, or to any greater proportion of troopers. 5. That they are ready to make paym't of the assessm't of their share of the 60,000*l.* as is required, however disproportionably soever, till the hon'ble houses relieve them. 6. That if there be any arrears, due to the commanders & soldiers, they may be payd out of their assessments of the 60,000 li. 8. To have the garrison as much decreast as may be. The Island being of the nature of a garrison in itself, able to defend itself agst any ordinary invasion.

(No. 77.) Copy of the humble petition of the Gentry Commons and Inhabitants of the Iland of Anglessy in Northwales, To the right honourable the Lords and Commons of England assembled in Parliament at Westminster.—Sheweth, that euer since the warre began we haue made much preparation for a defensive posture to Preserue the inoffensive Iland from incursion of the Irish Rebells and other insolencies incident to warre, without any thought or ingagement to oppose the honourable parliament, which we haue esteemed to be the onely meanes to preserve the churches peace and the subjects right. Neuertheles the king's partie appearing amongst vs (and no particular invitation or protection from the parliament), we were necessitated to some compliance with them, yet with such caution and distance that we permitted not the Lord Byron, who was made gouernor of this Island by his Majestie, nor none of his forces, nor any els to rest themselves nor possess any strong hold at all amongst vs, being resolu'd vpon the firste opportunitie to render our obedience to the kinge and Parliament, which after a solemn summons from Maior Generall Mytton, your honours most faithfull agent and chiefe commander in these partes, wee did seriously in seuerall publike meetinges debate and willingly and readily submitt vnto him as may appeare by subscriptions vnder our hands to his commissioners employed in that service. How- ever since some particular distractions happened touchinge the surrender of Beaumaris Castle, which wee were no way off but laoured and endeavoured to compose a reconciliation as the Commissioners can testifie. In tender consideration and in regard of our vnanimous constant resolution to remaine firme for Kinge and Parliament against all opposers. Wee most humbly pray your honours dispensacion of delinquencies for the Island according to Maior Generall Mitton's mediation, and we shall ever pray for a blessinge vpon your honours vnwearied labours which shall be recorded to all posteritie. No date or signatures.

(No. A. 784.) May 1646. Copies of letters that passed between General Thomas Mytton, and the Lord Bulkeley, and other gentlemen of Anglesey. 1. General Mytton's demand (dated Carnarvon, 7 May 1646) that the gentlemen of the island comply with the Parliament and surrender their garrisons to him for the service of the King and Parliament. 2. The reply of Lord Bulkeley and the said gentlemen to General Mytton's letter (dated Bewmares, 12 May 1646); urging that they have raised a force only to preserve peace and testify their obedience to the King, and requesting that they may send a gentleman (protected by the General's "pass") to His Majesty. Signed by thirty-five gentlemen, including three of the family and name of Griffith. 3. General Mytton's letter (dated Carnarvon, 13 of May) enclosing a copy of an order which precludes him from allowing them to send one of their number to the King. 4. The copy of the said order, "Whereas you intimate you have "given a Passe to Sir William Byron and two servants to "goe to the King, we desire that henceforth there may "be noe passes granted to any of the enemy, vpon what "pretence soever, we conceauning that it may proue "prejudiciall to the state. Signed in the name, and "by the warrant of the committee of both kingdomes "by your lovinge friends, P: Wharton, Charles Artkin." "Addressed to Colonell Mytton, and dated Darby House, "24 April, 1646."

(No. 749.) May and June 1646. Copies of four letters that passed between General Mytton and the gentlemen of Anglesey. 1. Letter from the general requiring, amongst other things, that "Beaumaris Castle, "and all other forts and garrisons in the said island be "delivered into his hands." Dated, 26 May, 1646, at Denbigh. II. Reply to General Mytton from Lord Bulkeley and ten other gentlemen of the island, declaring their "readiness to comply with the Parli- "ment." Dated 30 May, at Beaumares. III. The letter to General Mytton, whereby the said gentlemen of Anglesey submit themselves to the King and Parliament; only renewing a former prayer for leave to send one or more gentlemen to speak for them at Westminster. Signed: Bulkeley, Rich: Prythergh, Wm. Griffith, John Bodwell, H. Owen, O. Woods, Row: Bulkeley, Ow: Holland, Hen: Owen, Ri: Owen Theodor, Wm. Bold. Dated, 2 June 1646, at Llangefin. IV. General Mytton's answer to these two letters from the gentlemen of Anglesey. Consenting that the said gentlemen may send a deputation to the Parliament at Westminster, and promising to use his influence with the Parliament in their behalf; but insisting that they immediately surrender Beaumaris Castle, or be prepared for a siege of the said castle, to cover the costs of which their estates shall be confiscated.

(No. A. 568.) 13th of May 1646. Letter from General Thomas Mitton to lord Bulkeley and the rest of the gentlemen and inhabitants of the island of Anglesey. Gentlemen, I received yours verie late last night in answer whereto I thought fitt to send this bearer with theis lines, and to deale plainly with you. I feare by your answer and acciouns in receiving those that come vnto you out of the towne of Carnarvon and releuinge of them you will bring miserie vpon your selves, it being no lesse then open hostilitie against the parliament, the great counsell of the land, which I must endeavour as much as in me lyeth by all meanes to prevent, it being also repugnant to that parte of your answers whereby you conceaue your selves by your demeanour to giue no just cause of offence. As for your desire to haue a passe fur a gent To goe to the king, were it for your good and in my power, I should withall readilie grant it. But giue me leaue to acquaint you that the disafeccioun of the king to the kingdomes and churches cause by reason of the euill counsellors that were and are about him hath brought vpon vs all theis miseries, and therefore for you to send vnto him will tender you enemies to the State. But I conceane that parte of your answer was deuised by some of those forenamed counsellours, that are by God's greates power beaten out of all the rest of the kingdomes into your Island undone all places by the way wherein they came, which I desire you seriously and with all speede to consider.—That it lieth not in my power to grant you such a passe, I haue sent you the enclosed, which I desire you to send me by bearer; noe way doubting but it will satisfie you therein.—Gentlemen, I haue been somewhat tedious, but it proceeds from my desire to saue shedding of blood and the ruine of your countrie, which you will surely bringe vpon yourselves, if you persist in your way, I being commanded by the Parliament to endeavour the reducing of all such places and persons into their obedience in those partes that stand out against them, and I beleue you cannot be ignorant of the power God hath put into their hand, by blessing their vnwearied pious endeavours for this his cause. Carnarvon, 13th of May 1646.

(No. 782.) 4 January. Letter from the committee of the Lords and Commons for the army, to the Commissioners for raysinge the monthly assessment for the army in the counties of Northwales. Praying for the appointment of a day for the hearing of the petitioner's cause to be tried before his lordship, at "this present greate Sessions in the county of Denbigh." With underwritten appointment of a day, signed—Jo Bradshawe: Tho: Fell.

23 April 1656. Bill in Chancery, of Richard Stacy, shoemaker in the parish of Saint Martins in the Fields, against Owen Holland and Arthur Bulkeley of the county of Anglesey; in which the plaintiff asserts his title to certain lands, &c. in the township of Cardegoge and elsewhere in co. Anglesey, formerly belonging to his maternal grandfather, Arthur Williams late of Llanbadrig, co. Anglesey, gentleman, and alleges that he is fraudulently excluded from his said inheritance by the aforementioned Owen Holland, Arthur Bulkeley, and others.

(No. B. 117.) 7 October 1656. Tallabolion co. Anglesey. A True and Perfect Rentrowle of the Chiefe Rent (in Welch, Cylid) of the Commotte of Tallabolion aforesayd for one whole yeare made at Llanvairynhornwy in the sayd commotte the seaventh day of October, in the grace of our Lord God 1656.

(No. C. 174.)—1663. Copy of interrogatories ministred for the examinaciouns of witnesses on the parte and behaulfe of Thomas Holland, esq. plaintiff against Robert, Lord Bulkeley, viscount Cassells in Ireland, defendant.

(No. C. 177.) — 1663. Bill of Complaint to the Hon. Timothy Littleton, Sarjeant att Lawe, and Thomas Jones esq., his majesty's justices of the Great Sessions cos. Anglesey, Carnarvon and Merioneth, by Thomas Holland of Berrw, an infant aged seventeen years (prosecuting by his mother, Jane Holland, a widow) alleging that wrong has been done him, in respect to the boundary of his estate in Eskivioeg and adjoining parishes by Robert Lord Viscount Bulkeley of Barnhill in the same county, grandson of Sir Richard Bulkeley the elder of Bewmares, knt., deceased.—The bill recites the deeds by which the complainant's greatgrandfather, Owen Holland, acquired the property in Eskivioeg; and sets forth with sufficient clearness the several stages of the long enduring controversy between the two neighbouring families, respecting the bounds of their estates.

(No. C. 173.) 23 Sept. 1663. Copy of bill filed on the above-named day in the same suit; with the defendant's answer.

(No. C. 176.) 3 Oct. 1663. The Answer of Robert Lord Buckley viscount Cassells in Ireland Defendant to the Bill of Complaint of Thomas Holland, esq., an Infant, by Jane Holland, widowe, his mother and guardian, complainant, filed on abovenamed day.

"Edward lord Herbert of Cherbury is colonel," under Lord Carbery's command.

(No. C. 8.) 28th of Jan. 1663. Part of the memorandum of an agreement, whereby George Griffith, D.D., bishop of St. Asaph, and brother of the late William Griffith, doctor of laws, consents to accept, in annual instalments of one hundred pounds ten shillings and sixpence, payment from his nephew John (son and heir of the said William, deceased) of the sum of 603*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, which he (the said bishop) has provided at divers times for the use and benefit of the said nephew during his minority; and whereby the said bishop engages to take up a sum of 200*l.*, on which the John Griffith stands indebted to Edward Cotton of the town of Salop: Provided that the nephew gives his uncle sufficient security in land for the payment of the said sums.

(No. A. 525.) Sept. 1664. Last will of Jane Griffith alias Wood, "the now wife of John Griffith of Caernether co. Anglesey."

(No. B. 224.) 17th of July 1666. Commission of John Griffith of Carreg Loyd, to be a deputy-lieutenant for co. Anglesey, by the appointment of the Earl of Carbery, Lord President of Wales and the Marches.

(No. C. 236.) 9 July 1668. "A Perfecte rentrolle of" Mr. Owen Holland's late lands as they were sett in his "time, and how they are now sett," from which it appears that most of the tenants on Mr. Holland's estate paid their rentes in money, presents, and service. For instance, Evan ap Roberts held his tenement at the yearly rent, in money, of 7*l.* 10*s.*, in presents, of four geese, two capons, and, in service, of two days harrowing, two days' reaping, two days of carrying corn. In like manner Hugh ap William John, held Tythin Clay at a yearly rent of 6*l.* in money, of two capons and a hundred red herrings in presents, and of six days of mason's work, in service.

(No. 798.) 28 Sept. 1668. Warrant from John Griffith of Caernether (his majesty's fee-farmer of the township of Caerdegeg, co. Anglesey), to his bailiffs Rees Jones and Owen ap Richard David of Llanvaithley, to collect the King's "chiefe rents" and pay them into the Exchequer, or to his Majesty's receiver-general for North Wales.

(No. 800.) 28 Nov. 1668. Treasury warrant (bearing the signatures of Albemarle, Ashley and Clifford) to the commissioners of assessments co. Anglesey, for the immediate levying of the eleven months tax, "lest any" trouble or doubt should arise amongst the commissioners of the county of Anglesey whether the same "can be assessed after the first of February next."

(No. 517.) 16 May 1678. Warrant signed by deputy-lieutenants of the isle of Anglesey for levying money by rate, wherewith to provide ammunition for the forces of the island, and afford encouragement to the inferior officers of the said forces.

(No. 518.) 18 Jan. 1678. Warrant for the same purpose, for money to be levied in the hundred of Tallabolion.

(No. 519.) No date. A returne of the comott. of Tallabolion, according to the contents of the deputy-lieutenants warrants, giving the number of the arms formerly charged upon the hundred.

(No. 237.) No date. A list indented of the trained bande of the Comott of Tallabolion in the countie of Anglesey, and the names of the captain and officers of the bande.

(No. C. 203.) Anglizy: Com. Talabolion. A List of the Trained Band of the said Commote with the names of the officers of the said band. No date.

(No. 218.) Talabolion: Account of the Powder to be delivered to the Trained souldiers of the said hundred. No date.

(No. 217.) Two papers, tattered and defaced; part of a muster roll of a trained band in the county of Anglesey. No date.

(No. 236.) Muster Booke of all the inhabitantes of the hundred of Llyvon with the armes cessed upon them accordinge to the last general muster holden at Beumares, before Sir Richard Bulkeley, Sir Sackville Trevor, knightes, Richard Bulkeley, Esq., and William Griffith, Esq., deputy-lieutenants of the said county of Anglesey. No date.

(No. 633.) Paper Roll (frayed and moth-eaten). The Muster Roll of the Trained Bands of the Hundred of Livon. No date.

(No. 221.) No date. List of "The names of the most frequent Defaulters at Musters within the hundred of" Llyvon, co. Anglesey.

(No. 222.) Paper much defaced, with date torn away. List of horse soldiers to be raised, within a comote of the island of Anglesey, to serve "in a moving body

"under the command of Capt. John Owen." It is ordered that "theas horsee are to be serviceable wth hall, wth able riders, and wth swords pistolls or Carbiners, and to haue for their mantynance seaven shillingis a weeke allowance by the owners, to be repaide by the hundred." With names of the persons on whom the horses (31) are levied.

(No. A. 791.) An agreement of seven articles, made by certain of the gentlemen of Anglesey, for lessening the burdens laid on the high sheriffs of the county. 1. That no sheriff (elected from the subscribers to the compact) shall have more than twelve livery-men attending on him at Great Sessions or elsewhere. 2. That the liverymen shall wear buff coats with buff belts, and bear javelins (instead of halberds) to be bought by the subscribers, and kept for the use of the sheriff's attendants. 3. That no sheriff shall lend the said coats, &c. to any person, or allow them to be abused or torn. 4. That the charge at the sheriff's ordinary shall not exceed eighteen pence for himself and friends, or eight pence for his men. 5. That the subscribers to the agreement shall pay their own scores at the sheriff's table. 6. That in case any sheriff (being a subscriber to the compact) is fined by the judges on a slight or frivolous account, his fellow-subscribers shall combine to procure the remission of the fine, or pay it in equal shares levied amongst themselves and friends. 7. That the articles of the compact may be amended by a majority of the subscribers. The preamble to this curious agreement states that, notwithstanding an Act of Parliament of the 13th year of the present reign for diminishing their charges, the sheriffs of the co. have been put to "insupportable" expenses by dietinge the judges, defrayinge the charge "of their lodgings, servants, and horses and other extravagant and vaine glorious expenses."—No date. The reference to the statute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 21 proves however that the agreement was made in the time of Charles the Second.

(Nos. 280 to 300, and Nos. 351 to 394.) Two packets of schedules of assessments of taxes in parishes of Anglesey (for the most part of the hundred of Talabolion); and of receipts for rents, paid in respect of lands held by John, William, or Elizabeth Griffith, of the Principality of Wales or of the crown. The schedules of assessments are of the years A.D. 1663, '67, '74, '83, '84, '88, '92, '93, '97, '98, '99, 1700, 1706, 1709. The receipts for rents were given in the years 1694, '97, 1709, '24, '34, '38, '43. The local historian, dealing with the hundred of Talabolion, would do well to look at these papers.

(No. C. 271.) 1696. Eleven papers: being list of assessments of the king's taxes in different places of the hundred of Talabolion.

(No. C. 199.) 4 Nov. 1596. Letter from Edward Lhwyd (at Oxford) to the honoured Howel Vaughan, Esq., at Aberffrydion, Montgomeryshire (Salop post, Montgomery bag). Begging for the loan of four manuscripts from Mr. Vaughan's library, and announcing that "Mr. W^m Wyn has just finish'd Cradog of Lhan Garvan's "History with Dr. Powel's notes &c., and will put it in "the Presse before Christmase. He has put it into "modern English and has a very large preface to it, "wherein he maintains Geoffrey of Monmouth's History " (the ridiculous fables therein excepted) with very "plausible arguments as they seem to me, and good "judgment and ingenuity. I was telling him that your "grandfather had writ some Notes upon the Triades." The writer with the enthusiasm of a special student declares, "I can think of nothing more necessary than "the perusing our ancientest Welsh MSS."

(Nos. A. 443 to A. 519.) Notice to pay rents, delivered to John Griffith and William Griffith, of the island of Anglesey, to be paid and receipts for rents duly paid by them, to the use of the king and parliament, the commonwealth, or the king (temp. Car. I., Commonwealth, Car. II., Jac. II., and William and Mary), in respect of farms of crown lands, &c.

(No. B. 168.) 10 Aug. 1703. Commission of William Griffith to be a deputy-lieutenant of co. Anglesey, by appointment of Hugh Viscount Cholmondeley, lord-lieutenant of the cos. of North Wales, and of the county-palatine of Chester.

(No. C. 306.) 15 July 1706. Tallabolion: Schedule of assessments in the hundred by virtue of an Act of Parliament for granting an aid to Her Majesty by a Land Tax, to be raised for the year 1708.

(No. B. 52.) 10 Nov. 1740. Acknowledgment (engrossed on vellum) by the Rev. Henry Williams, rector of Llanfaethly, that, though he has watered his cattle, levant and couchant on his glebe and other lands, during his residence at Llanfaethly, at the brook or rivulet running by Carreglwyd, he has done so not of his own right, but at the permission of William Griffith and Griffith, Esqs., of Carreglwyd.

From the diversity of the spelling of names of persons and places, the reader has of course inferred that in each entry names are spelt as they appear in the writing to which the entry refers.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF ROBERT WALTER PRIDEAUX, ESQ., OF DARTMOUTH.

The following 34 documents are selected from about sixty in the possession of Robert Walter Prideaux, Esq., of Dartmouth; who very courteously placed them before me for my inspection, when visiting Dartmouth, and lent me them for further examination, and notice in the present Report.—

R. W.
PRIDEAUX,
Esq.

A small parchment deed, in Latin, dated "at Dertemue, on Wednesday [dis Mercurie] the morrow of "St. Lucy the Virgin," 18th Edward I.; whereby Hervey Makeglad grants to his son, John, a tenement in Cliftone of Dertemue, which he had of the gift of John Aubin, situate between the tenement of Juliana Boys and that which William de Ho and John Webba hold: at a yearly rent of 7 pence. Witnesses, Gilbert de Fawy, Ralph Reynot, Robert de Pole, William Hemmeng, William de Puce [of Prussia], Ralph Makeglad, "and "others." The seal, in green wax, slightly broken, represents a galley, with one mast, and a star on either side of it.

A parchment deed, in Latin, with an oblong seal in green wax, a flower, with legend; whereby Isobel, relict of Thomas Wodegrene, grants to William Brento and Joan, his wife, her right and claim in a tenement in Hyesthardenasse, which the said Thomas and Isobel bought of Sir Peter de Fissacre, it being near the tenement of Roger Solaz; for a yearly payment of 6 pence to the said Sir Peter, at Christmas, and 2 shillings for relief, when falling due; they having paid to the said Isobel 27 shillings sterling beforehand. Witnesses, Gilbert de Fawy, William Joye, William Hemmyng, Yllary Crok, Richard the Baker, Henry Peryes, Richard Kalewa, "and many others." Without date given, but temp. Edward I.

A small parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Elias, son and heir of Thomas Wodegrene and of Isobel, his wife, quit-claims his right in a tenement which William Brento and Joan, his wife, bought of his mother, Isobel, for 5 shillings to him paid. Witnesses, Gilbert de Fawy, William Joye, William Hemmyng, Henry Peryes, Edward Salcok, "and others." Without date, but temp. Edward I. Only a fragment of the seal, in green wax, is left.

A small parchment deed poll, in Latin, wherein Sir Peter de Fissacre states that he has inspected a deed of William Brento, from Isobel, relict of Thomas Wodegrene, stating that she had granted to the said William and his heirs, all her right to the tenement in Hardnasse which the said Thomas and Isobel bought of Sir Peter de Fissacre, near the tenement of Roger Solaz, the said William, his heirs, and assigns, rendering yearly, at our Lord's Nativity, 6 pence to the said Sir Peter de Fissacre; the said William Brento having given to the said Isobel 27 shillings sterling beforehand. Witnesses, Gilbert de Fawy, Gilbert de Pole, William Joye, William Hemminge, Hillary Crok, Richard the Baker, Henry Bissop, Richard Cowla, "and others:"—which deed he thereby confirms and ratifies. Witnesses, William Gora, William de Cumbe, Nicholas Adam, Henry de Colapitte, William Man, "and others." The deed belongs to the earlier part of the reign of Edward I. On the seal, in green wax, somewhat broken, a shield with a chevron may be traced, also for legend, "Petri . . . ssaker."

A small parchment deed, the seal broken, in green wax, with fleur-de-lis and a legend; whereby Roger Tubbe grants to Henry Miller, for his homage and service, a messuage and garden in Hardnasse, at the nearest corner of the land of Sir Martin de Fissacre; between the way which leads from Hardnasse to Fluteshaud and the cliff [falesiam], to hold to him, his heirs and assigns, religious houses excepted; for a yearly rent of one pair of white gloves, at Easter, and to Sir Martin de Fissacre, his heirs, or assigns, 12d. yearly, in four payments: 4 shillings being paid beforehand. Witnesses, John Clobard, Martin du Bois, William Albin, Edward Burd, Bartholomew de Fawy, Elias de Hamme, "and "many others." Temp. Edward I.

R. W.
PRIDEAUX,
Esq.

A Latin deed, on parchment, whereby John Sangere, of Hardinasse, grants to Stephen de Portelemuthe, and Joan, sister of the said John, a moiety of his messuage in Hardinasse, between the tenement of John de Coletone and that of Roger Swengelot, and near the high road leading to the chapel of St. Clair; to hold to them and the heirs of their bodies, at a yearly rent of 12 pence to Richard de Woleston, his heirs, and assigns. Witnesses, Richard Pody, Geoffrey Ode, Gilbert Salcoke, John Bregeman, Odo Jay, William Person, "and many others." Dated 3rd Edward III. The seal is lost.

A small parchment deed, in Latin, the small seal, in red wax, mutilated, with a fanciful device; whereby John, son and heir of Martin Fakes, grants to John Marchaunt of Dertemuth, his freehold curtilage in Southtoundertemuthe, extending from the road leading from Dertemuth to Stokefleming, on the west, towards the harbour [portus] on the east, and near the curtilages of Richard Gordoun and William atte Wylle; for a yearly rent of one penny to the chief lords of the fee. Witnesses, Richard Gordoun, William Smale, William Polymond,—Heremyte, John de Launceton, "and others." Dated at Southtoundertemuthe, on Friday the Feast of St. Germanus the Bishop, 13th Edward III.

A Latin deed, on parchment, finely written, whereby Joan, daughter of William Verst, "in my pure virginity," grants to Joan, daughter of John de Hamele, and Alice, her daughter, a piece of land out of her curtilage at Hardinasfeorde, between the curtilage of John le Man and the land of Roger Dauwa, and near the road from Hardinasfeorde to the church of St. Clement at Tunstall; at a yearly rent of 4 pence to the chief lords of the fee. Witnesses, William Bacon, John Gordon, William Hemmyng, Gilbert de Pole, Walter Gordon, John Sangere, John Selman, "and many others." Dated at Hardinasse, in the 14th year of Edward III. The seal, in brown wax, has a fine impression, a child kneeling before a figure seated, apparently in the act of benediction; with the legend, "S. Thome de Coletone:" perhaps the former seal of Thomas, a priest of Colyton.

A small parchment deed, in Latin, the seal lost, whereby Joan Keadelond, widow, grants to William Alayn her messuage in Hardenasse, near the tenements late of Thomas Wodegrene and of Roger Solaz; also, her curtilage "in the Cumbe," between the curtilage formerly belonging to the pillory "in the Cumbe," the curtilage of Richard Modberd, and the curtilage, with piece of land adjoining, in Monkenestrete. Witnesses, Thomas Borberel, Nicholas Peris, Stephen Borne, John Henery, Richard Veysi, "and others." Dated at Hardenasse, the Friday after our Lord's Epiphany, 26th Edward III.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Simon Gardiner, and Dionisia, his wife, grant to Richard William and Letice, his wife, all their part of a tenement, and 2½ feet without the wall thereof, which they had of the gift and feoffment of Roger Beamund; such tenement being situate in Hardinasse, near to the mill-dam and the tenement of John Raleghe and Dionisia, his wife; for a yearly rent of 2 pence sterling. Witnesses, William Ayschedene, Mayor, John Mathu, John Clerk, John Whetene, William Henry, "and others." Dated in the 32nd year of Edward III. Of the two seals, in red wax, fragments only are left. One, representing an anchor, would seem to have been of great antiquity.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Coggere, of Kyngiswere, grants to John Ralegh and Dionisia, his wife, a piece of ground at the Roptacle [? Rope-walk], situate between the ground of Walter de Cornesende and that of John Seygger, and between the curtilage of the men of Hardenasse, on the south, and the way from Hardenassefeorde to the church of Tounstalle, on the north; at a yearly rent of one penny to the chief lords of the fee. Witnesses, John Clerke, Mayor of Dertemuthe, William Assheldene, John Whetene, William Henre, "and many others." Dated on Sunday after the Feast of St. Peter's Chains, 36th Edward III. The seal, in red wax, has, on a shield, a fanciful cross.

A parchment deed, in Latin, the seal lost, whereby Alice, daughter of Martin de Estone, grants to Richard Stokehaye a moiety of a messuage and of a curtilage, between the messuage and curtilage of Joan, widow of Martin de Estone, and the tenement of John le Maan, and the curtilage of Joan, daughter of William Vere, and the way from Hardinasfeorde to Thounstalle; to hold to the said Richard, and to the heirs of the bodies of the said Richard and Alice, lawfully begotten. Witnesses, William Asseldene, John Clerk, William Henry,

John Wetone, Roger Pole, Walter Gordone, John Matheu, "and others." Dated at Clyftone Dertthemouth. in the 38th year of Edward III.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Paytefyn grants to Alice, daughter of Richard Stokehaye, his curtilage in Hardinasse, near the curtilage of Agnes, widow of Adam le Hopere, and the king's highway, leading from the Flutesheuede towards the church of St. Clement of Tounstalle; to hold of the Lord Abbot and Convent of Torre, the said Alice paying to them one penny of silver, in equal portions, at the 4 principal terms of the year. Witnesses, William Henry, John Clerke, Roger Pole, Walter Gordon, John Matheu, John Weton, William Asseldene, and others. Dated in the 38th year of Edward III. The seal is lost, and the writing so faint as to be hardly legible.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Raleghe and Dionisia, his wife, grant to John Edward and Isabel, his wife, a moiety of a piece of ground in Hardinasse, walled in, with 2½ feet without the wall, between the lands of John Hawele and John Clerk; at a yearly rent of one penny, in equal parts, at the four principal terms of the year. Witnesses, John Hawele, William Hyllay, Peter Cok, William Bovy, John Totyng, "and others." Dated in the 48th year of Edward III. The small seal, in green wax, a fine impression, represents the sun, the moon, a star, waves, and a fanciful key, the legend, "SEEL FORIS IVANOS;" a seal significant of travel, and befitting a Raleghe. It had once belonged probably to a foreigner.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Nicholas Lange, tailor, and Roger Piers, Chaplain, grant to Henry Cooke and Isabel, his wife, the tenement in Clifton Dertemuthe Hardenasse, with 3 gardens adjoining, which they had of the gift of the said Isabel, situate in Newportstret, in Hardenasse, between the tenements of Isabel Roweley, Robert Rendel, and John Loperige, on the east, and the tenements of Richard Prallynge and William Bovy, on the west, the mill-dam, on the south, and the tenement of Henry Canele on the north. Witnesses, John Bakere, William Bovy, John Loperige, William Aleyn, "and others." Dated in the 48th year of Edward III. Two small seals are attached, of green wax, with fanciful devices.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Roger Wythenow and Alice, his wife, and John Leyman and Margery, his wife, grant to Hugh de Westone and Alice, his wife, a tenement and a moiety of a garden adjoining, at Hardenasse, between the tenements of Peter Paris and John Sampson. Witnesses, John Hauleye, Mayor of Dertemouth, John Clerke, Thomas Assheldene, William Henry, William Knolle, "and others." Dated in the 49th year of Edward III. Of the four seals, only a small fragment of that of Roger now remains.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby William Aleyn, and Joan, his wife, grant to John Sodbiry and Alice, his wife, a messuage in Hardenasse, "within the liberty" of the vill of Clifton Dertemuthe and Hardenasse, and between the tenement of Nicholas Pipere and that of John Piers and John Skynner, and the tenement of Richard Modberd, on the west, and the sea, on the east. Witnesses, John Hawlegh, Luke Bacon, Bailiff of the vill, William Harry, Gilbert Fawy, "and others." Dated in the 50th year of Edward III. There are two seals, in red wax, one of which, with the legend "Sobir" bears the impression of a cross, of fanciful design.

A small parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Joan, widow of John Dartour, of Dertemuthe, quit-claims to Hugh Westone and John Westone, all kinds of actions, real and personal, from the beginning of the world. Sealed with her own seal, and that of the office of Mayor. Witnesses, John Prestecote, John Kentecombe, Richard Henry, "and many others." Dated in the 51st year of Edward III. The small seal, of Joan, representing an ape's head, in red wax, is slightly broken; that of the Mayoralty, in green wax, is in fragments.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Leyman and Margery, his wife, grant to Hugh de Westone and Alice, his wife, his moiety of a garden in Hardenasse, the other moiety having been lately granted to them by the same grantor, by fine levied in the Court of Clyftone Dertmouth Hardenasse; such garden being between the tenements of Peter Parys and John Sampson. Witnesses, Richard Henry, Mayor of Dertemouth, John Hauleye, Thomas Assheldene, William Henry, William Knolle, "and others." Dated in the 3rd year of Richard II. The seals, in red wax, are tolerably perfect; that of Margery round, with a fanciful cross and the letters M. I. (not L.), and that of John Leyman, a shield, bearing, apparently, a lion rampant. A contemporary endorsement states that a fine was duly levied thereon, in the Court of Dertemouthe.

An official extract, or copy, in Latin, from the Court rolls of Dertemouthe, Monday after the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, 3rd of Richard II.; being an acknowledgment by John Leyman and Margery, his wife, that the 2 several moieties of a garden, in Hardenasse, are the right of Hugh de Westone and Alice, his wife, as being the gift, by deeds and feoffments, of the said John and Margery; John Berrye, Seneschal of the liberty of the vill aforesaid, setting his seal of office thereto. The large seal, in brown wax, appended thereto, is in fine condition. It has for legend, "Pro officio Senescalli de Dertemuth Clift. H." The steward's horn is represented laid transversely upon the arms of Guido de Brienne, the lord of the Liberty; the horn bearing reference probably to the original meaning (as supposed by some) of the word "Senescallus," one who calls the flock together; represented also by the word "Steward," or "Steward."

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby William Hicke, and Blissa [elsewhere Blissota], his wife, grant to Robert Justis and Alice, his wife, a piece of land within the liberty of the vill of Cliftone Dertemouthe Hardenasse, at Hardinasse, near the Chapel of St. Clair, between the tenements of John Olyvere and Adam Bers; they rendering yearly 4 pence to the chief lords of the fee. Witnesses, John Haule, Richard, Henri, Nicholas Miltone, Richard Clocke, Adam Bers, "and others." Dated in the 3rd year of Richard the Second. The seals, in green wax, are still attached, but the impressions are very indistinct.

A parchment indenture, in Latin, whereby William Ferreris, son of John de Ferreris, of Churchetoune, grants to Thomas Hoygge and Amy, his wife, for term of their lives, a messuage and two gardens in Hardinasse; the messuage being between the tenements of William Bovy and Martin Ferreris; remainder to William Hoygge, their son; at a yearly rent of 8 pence, payable at Michaelmas and "le Hokke" [Hocktide]. Witnesses, William Bovy, Richard Scoys, John Leperygge, John Gefferey, William Kent, "and others." Dated at Hardenasse, in the 11th year of Richard II. The seal is lost.

A parchment deed, in Latin, with two seals in red wax, the impressions nearly effaced; whereby Richard Stochay and Alice, his wife, grant to Hugh Weston and Alice, his wife, a tenement near the tenement late of John Tosere, and the way leading from the chapel of St. Clair towards Hardenasworth. Witnesses, John Haule, Mayor of Dertemouthe, Richard Harry, William Harry, Walter Worthi, Edward Justyse, "and others." Dated in the 12th year of Richard II.

A parchment deed, in Latin, with a small red seal, representing a star, formed by intersecting triangles; whereby Margery, relict of John Leyman, releases and quit-claims to Hugh Westone and Alice, his wife, her right in a tenement and garden in Hardenasse, bought of her late husband and herself (as above stated, under the third year of this reign). Witnesses, John Hawele, Mayor of Dertemouthe, Thomas Aysscheldone, Richard Harry, Walter Worthi, Edward Justyse, "and others." Dated 12th Richard II. The seal of the Mayor, which, it is stated, was originally appended, is lost.

A large parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Richard Stochay and Alice, his wife, of Brodehomstone, grant to John Bodele and Rose, his wife, one messuage with curtilage adjoining, in Cliftone Dertemouthe Hardenasse, between the messuages of Joan, widow of Martin of Estone, and of John le Maan, and between the curtilage of Joan, daughter of William Veere, and the way from Hardenasseforde to Tounstalle, south and north; at a yearly rent of 4 pence sterling to the chief lord of the fee. Witnesses, John Hauleigh, Mayor, Walter Worthi, Bailiff, Thomas Asshendene, Hugh Westone, Walter Russell, "and many others." Dated in the 12th year of Richard II. There are two seals, in red wax, one of which is the seal before used by John Ralegh, but not from the same matrix; the other having a very similar fanciful device.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Ralegh, of Hardinasse, grants to Hugh Westone and Alice, his wife, a piece of land at Ropetacle, between the land of Walter de Tounesende and that formerly of Nicholas Clerck, and the curtilage of the men of Hardinasse, on the south, and the way from Hardinasforde to the church of Tounstalle, on the north; at a yearly rent of one penny to the chief lords of the fee. Witnesses, John Combe, John Pers, Gervase Cottebi, John Dau, John Nicol, "and others." Dated at Hardinasse, in the 13th year of Richard II. The impression of the seal, in green wax, is like that given under the 48th of Edward III., and from the same matrix.

A parchment indenture, in Latin, with a small seal, in red wax, with a fanciful device, stars, and apparently, a beacon; whereby John Ralegh, of Dertemouthe, grants to Hugh Westone and Alice, his wife, his tenement in Hardinasse, near the tenement of John Polkysfen, and the highway leading from Hardinasforde to the church of St. Clement of Tounstall on the north, and the tenement of Stephen Modberd and the palisaded place [palatium] of Edward Justyse, on the east; for a yearly rent of 10s., for the life of the grantor. Witnesses, Edward Justyse, Henry Dele, Stephen Modberd, John Polkysfen, Walter Bayle, "and others." Dated on Thursday after the Feast of St. Matthias the Apostle, 13th Richard II.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby William Brege tone grants to William Croft and Soremunda, his wife, all his messuages at Hardenasse in the manor of Nortone, which he lately had of the gift of the said William. Witnesses, William Clerke the younger, Mayor of Dertemouthe, Walter Worthi, Gervase Cottesbury, Nicholas Hake, Richard Harry, "and many others." Dated at Hardenasse, the first year of Henry IV. The seal, in red wax, has a diminutive impress of a cross, of fanciful design.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby Peter Coke, of Hardenesse, and Margery, his wife, grant to Blissota Hicke a rent of 4 pence to be received from their piece of ground in Hardenesse, near the Chapel of St. Clair and the place of William Scherefild; with power of distress. Witnesses, John Persone [? the Parson], John Sampson, Henry Dele. Dated at Harderfesse, in the 2nd year of Henry IV. Of the two seals, in red wax, one represents a fanciful cross, the other, apparently, the Virgin and Child.

A parchment deed, in Latin, with a fragment of a fine seal, in green wax; whereby Blissota Hycke, relict of William, grants to Peter Coke, of Hardenesse, and Margery, a piece of land in Hardenesse, in the manor of Nortone, near the Chapel of St. Clair, and the land of William Scherefilde. Witnesses, John Hauley, Mayor of Dertemouthe, William Knolle, Gervase Cottebury, Edward Justice, John Knolle the younger, "and others." "Given at the Burgage of Nortone," the Tuesday after Easter, 2nd Henry IV.

A large parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John atte Wode and Elinora, his wife, grant to William Brokedone, and Isabel, his wife, a tenement in Clyftone Dertemowthe called "the Wellehowse," between the tenement of William Clerke, on the south, and the tenement of the aforesaid William Brokedone, on the north, and between the garden of William Rowe, on the west, and the lane near the churchyard, on the east; rendering to the chief lords of the fee the services due and accustomed. Witnesses, Thomas Asschendene, Mayor of the vill of Dertemowthe, Henry Goldsmyth, Bailiff, William Rowe, John Amery, John Boune, John Brether, Clerk, "and many others." Dated the 8th year of Henry VI. This William Brokedone, it may be observed, was not improbably an ancestor of Brokedon, the painter of Alpine Scenery, whose picture of the raising of the Widow's Son, is over the altar in the church at Dartmouth.

A parchment deed, in Latin, whereby John Combe and John Bodrugan grant to Juliana, late the wife of John Cok, the tenement in Cliftone Dertemouthe Hardenesse, between the tenement late of John Cok, and the highway leading towards Hardenesseforde, on the north, and the deep sea, on the south; to hold for her life, with remainder to William Waryn and Cecily, his wife; who, after the death of the said Juliana, are to keep the Anniversary of the said John Cok and Juliana his wife, and of Peter Cok and Margery, his wife, in the church of St. Clement, at Tounstalle, on the Friday next before Palm Sunday in each year; they to pay in the said church for the priests, the poor, and other necessities in keeping such Anniversary, the sum of 3s. 4d. Witnesses, John Hawley, Esquire, William Clerk, John More, Hugh Yon, "and many others." Dated in the 14th year of Henry VI. There are two small red seals, with fanciful devices, attached.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER OF CANTER-
BURY.

by the Pope's command, they had made concerning matters in dispute between the monastery of St. Bertin and Margaret de Leveland. Margaret had built a chapel on her own land at Leveland, to the prejudice of the church of Throwley, and the monastery, as patrons of the church, applied to the Pope (Honorius III.) for redress. The Abbot of Faversham and two others were delegated to be judges in the cause; they called the parties before them and effected a compromise; the chapel was licensed, and the monastery obtained the patronage.

B. 392, circ. 1200. An entire skin of parchment covered by exemplifications, in different hands, of eight deeds referring to the English possessions of St. Bertin's abbey.

1. The first gift of the church of Chilham. This was witnessed by Silvester, Abbot of Saint Augustine's, and it contains a clause which provides for the maintenance of two priests, who were to live in the house belonging to the monastery, to receive all their sustenance and "victualia, tam equis quam hominibus" from the stores of the patron, except their straw (palea), which they were to furnish for themselves.

Henry de Chastell, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and his vice-archdeacon are witnesses to this inspeximus.

2. Confirmation by Hamo de Truilec of his father's donation of the church of Throwley to the abbey of St. Bertin. As a consideration for this confirmation the abbey is to receive De Truilec into society, (as a confrater), to write his name in the Martyrologium which is annually recited in the chapter-house, and to admit him to all the benefits of their masses, alms, vigils, fasts, and prayers.

Clarembald the first Abbot of Faversham, Bartholomew de Badelsmere, and Peter his son, are among the witnesses.

3. Hugo de Dover's gift of the church of Chilham to St. Bertin's. In this copy the donor is named Hugo de Chilleham filius Fulberti de Dofra.

4. Confirmation, by Adrian IV., of the churches of Chilham and Throwley to the abbey of St. Bertin's.

7. Warren, son of Simon le Pick of Dover, conveys to the abbey of St. Bertin two acres of woodland, at an annual rent of tenpence, the consideration being a money payment of twenty-nine shillings.

8. John, son of Ralph de la Dane, conveys an acre of woodland to the abbey.

At the end of the membrane is a crowded paragraph containing a list of these instruments, together with many others.

L. 383, circ. 1130. A formal recognition by Alexander Bishop of Lincoln of the title of the abbey of Bec to certain possessions in England. The churches of Wedon and Winecomb, with their lands and tithes, are mentioned, but the donors of these are not named. The other endowments, which all lie in the neighbourhood of Wallingford, are said to be presented by Milo Crispin and Matilda de Walingeford his wife.

B. 397. A confirmation by Henry III. of all the gifts and endowments, both in Normandy and England, conferred by his grandfather and others upon the abbey of Bec.

B. 371, 1190. A bull of Clement III. confirming to the abbey of Bec all the English endowments which they owned at the date. "Clemens. . . . Quociens "postulatur a nobis quod religioni et honestati convenire dinoscitur Ea propter, dilecti in Dno. "filii, vestris justis postulationibus grato concurrentes "assensu, Ecclesiam de Glinde vobis et per "vos ecclesie vestre auctoritate apostolica confirmamus, "et presentis scripti patrocinio communimus."

The leaden bulla is still attached by a silken cord.

B. 397, 1227. A confirmation by Henry III. (Manu Radulfi Excest. Epi. Cancellarii) of a charter of his grandfather.

The original charter of Henry II. had approved of endowments conferred upon the abbey of Bec by Matilda the Empress and thirty-two other benefactors. The donors, whose gifts lay both in England and Normandy, came from all classes of society, the Earl of Essex being, after the royal family, the first of a series of benefactors which descended to Wil. fil. Radl. Ostiarii, who contributed an annual sixteen shillings in tithes.

The great seal which corroborates this deed is impressed on green wax, and is the finest specimen in this collection.

S. 333. Archbishop Winchelsey confirms to the church of St. Phillibert a pension, first granted by Abp. Langton, issuing from the church of Saltwood. This pension is dealt with in the next deed.

S. 334, 1297. A commission addressed by Boniface VIII. to the Dean and Precentor of London, appointing them judges to decide a cause in which the Abbot of Bec claims a pension from the church of Saltwood. The suit had been before several officials who had delayed their decision, and therefore the Pope sent this commission, requiring the delegates to conclude the matter within three months.

The bulla secured "filio cannabino" remains affixed to this instrument.

G. 187, 1202. Abp. Hubert sends a mandate to W. Gernon, reciting a letter of Innocent III. "Innocentius Episcopus, &c. . . . Ex siquidem dilecti filii "Magistri Johannis de Columpna qui sue probitatis "obtentu, intuitu quoque consanguineorum suorum "quos sincera in Dno. diligimus caritate, carus est "nobis admodum et acceptus, fuit propositum coram "nobis quod W. de Brueira, cum quibusdam fautoribus "suis, ecclesiam suam de Gatesden per violentiam occupans, fructus ejus quos invenit ibidem contra justiciam asportavit, et ei restituere contradidit. Quo "circa fraternitati tue per apostolica scripta mandamus." &c.

P. 53, 1236. John of Ferentino gives general notice that Gregory IX. has conferred upon Gregory of Anagni the "provision" in Ch. Ch. Canterbury which the Cursor of Innocent III. formerly held, and that the proctor of the monastery has compounded by paying "decem marcas bonorum, novorum, et legalium sterlingorum," in consideration of which payment the Pope has surrendered all claim to the "provision."

Endorsed in 14th century, "Composicio inter Gregorium et procuratorem capituli, de quietancia unius "provisionis quam petebat, pro x. marcis. Tempore "Gregorii Papae IX."

S.B. a. 11, 1270. Theodosius de Camilla, non-resident rector of Wingham, has allowed the ornaments of the church to go to decay, and the Prior of Ch. Ch., with the consent of the proctor of the alien rector, has seized coin and other chattels found on the premises to furnish money with which to replace the ornaments, and also to pay a fifteenth to the King.

W. 187, 1281. A citation from the Dean of St. Andoan, addressed to the prior and convent of Canterbury, requiring them to appear at St. Andoan to answer in a suit in which Theodosius de Camilla is plaintiff. Theodosius is described as "capellanus Dñi Pape et "Rector Ecclesie de Winham" (Wingham).

S. 411, 1333. The proctor of an alien patron consents to an exchange of benefices. The proctor describes himself as "humilis et devotus clericus Bernardus Vinentis, venerabilis et discreti viri Dni. Vitalis de Testa, "Canonici in ecclesia de Sarum, et collegiate ecclesie de "Wingham Cantuariensis, et Rectoris ecclesiarum de "Schorham Roffensis, et de Henneye Sarum diocesis, "ac patroni ecclesie de Halstede dicte Roffensis diocesis " procurator."

S.B. a. 33, 1349. A mandate requiring an inquisition to be held to inquire into the status of the church of Lynsted. The preamble states that a new vicar has been presented by Raymond Pellegrini, the proctor of Peter Cardinal of Sta. Maria Nuova, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and therefore patron of Lynsted. [This Petrus (Rogerius) was nephew of Clement VI., and afterwards himself Pope, with title Gregory XI.]

S. B. c. 80. and c. 149, 1374. Inquisitions to assess dilapidations at Lymne, Teynham, and Hackington. William Judicis, Archdeacon of Canterbury and Rector of Lymne, Hackington, and Teynham, was a nephew of Clement VI., and a cardinal of the Roman Church. When he died, in 1374, his successor in the archdeaconry, Henry Wakefeld, caused these inquisitions to be made; the first of these parchments being the returns sent in by the assessors, and the second the schedules containing details of the dilapidations. Ornaments, roofs, windows, books, vestments, enclosures, and parsonages were all in a state of ruin and decay, partly caused by neglect, and due, in some cases, to the portable materials having been sold by the late incumbent. The total sum, which the assessors considered to be necessary for restoring the property of the archdeaconry to a lawful condition, amounted to 666l. 16s. 8d. in the money of the time.

Aqueduct.

In the 12th century Prior Wibert caused a copious supply of spring water, brought by leaden pipes from a hill about a mile away, to be conducted into all the offices of his monastery. There are among the Chart. Antiq. nine documents which refer to this subject, seven of the nine being agreements between the prior and the owners through whose land the pipes were carried. The contracts provide that, in consideration of a small annual payment, the prior shall have free access to the pipes when they require repairs or alterations. The canons of St. Gregory, through whose orchard the pipes passed, were allowed to attach a branch for supplying their house.

W. 224. "Theobaldus dei gratia toti Hali" dire," &c.

W. 232. Two extracts, one in French, the other in Latin, in Somner's writing, "concerning the conduits
" at Christ Church."

These are taken, 1. From a MS. in "Sir Simond
" Dewes his library; and 2. "From a martyrologium in " the library of the Earl of Arundell." The extracts, which are quite uninteresting, have translations annexed.

For details of the distribution of this spring-water, see an article by Professor Willis in the "Archæologia
" Cantiana," vol. vii.

Appointments to Offices.

These are MSS. which show the procedure in the conferring of monastic and other offices.

C. 179. Abp. Richard appoints a "custos curiæ mon-
" asterii."

S. B. a. 183, 1300. The Abp. requires the prior to admit a person whom he has appointed "senescallus
" aulæ prioratûs."

S. B. a. 183, 1304. The Abp. requires the prior to invest his "senescallus aulæ hospicii" with the office of "custos magnæ portæ curiæ prioratûs."

C. 233, 1387. The convent confirm the Abp's. appointment of a "senescallus aulæ."

A. 200, 1478. The Abp. appoints, and the prior confirms, a new bedell.

A. 19, 1529. The Abp. appoints an appraiser to serve him in the city of London.

S. B. a. 118, 1533. The Abp. appoints a "custos " manerii" for Lambeth. The salary is threepence a day, with perquisites.

S. B. c. 89, 1534. The prior appoints two woodreeves, who are to hold office for life. This is rather a lease granted for a consideration, than an appointment to an office.

A. 22, 1536. The Abp. appoints to the office of Penitentiary of Ch. Ch. one monk, selected from three presented to him by the chapter.

Archbishops, Elections of, and Transactions incident upon Vacancies of the See.

A. 30, 1125. A slip of parchment, addressed by Honorius II. to Wm. of Corboil, Abp. of Canterbury, entitled "Ne bona ecclesie dissipentur, defuncto Archiepi" scopo." The writer confirms to the church all the possessions which belong to it, and prohibits that "detest" able custom" by which, at the death of an archbishop, the goods of the monks are devastated. This spoiling of the church is prohibited by a very strong penal clause,
If any person, lay or clerical, having been once, twice, and thrice warned, shall retain ecclesiastical goods unlawfully obtained, "potestatis et honoris sui dignitate
" carere, reamque se divino iudicio existere de perpetua
" iniquitate cognoscat, et a sanctissimo corpore ac san" guine Dei ac Domini Redemptoris nostri Jhu. Christi
" aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine, districtæ ultioni
" subiaceat."

A. 187, 1206. A peremptory letter from Innocent III.
to King John, requiring him to consent to the promotion of Reginald, the sub-prior, to the archbishopric of Canterbury. This letter, the tone of which is very characteristic, hardly supports the account of the Pope's wishes on the subject of this election as it is recorded by Paris:—

"Si regias petitiones libenter admittimus, et eas, quantum honestas patitur, efficaciter promovemus, indignum existeret si nostras preces et monita recusares admittere; presertim cum nostri propositi non existat te aliquando interpellare pro aliquo quod te non deceat exaudire Licet enim tuam velimus magnificentiam honorare, ac in hiis exaudire propensius que tue sint beneplacita voluntati, quia tamen deferre deo magis quam hominibus nos oportet, nullius precibus vel amore declinabimus in dextram vel sinistram, sed via regia procedentes, quantum nobis Dominus dignabitur in-spirare, quicquid postulaverit ordo juris investigare curabimus, et non habentes respectum ad hominem, sed ad Deum, ipso duce, studebimus adimplere."

S. 369, 1233. Congé d'élire under the great seal of Henry III. The King, addressing the prior and convent, says that he has received two monks, who report the bereaved state of the church, and therefore he grants to the chapter permission to proceed to the election of an archbishop, with this caution, "Rogantes
" quatenus, deum pre oculos habentes, talem vobis et eis
" eligere curetis in pastorem, qui deo devotus et " ecclesie vestre regimini idoneus, et nobis, et regno
" nostro utilis esse dinoscatur."

A. 188, 1272. A public instrument reciting Apostolic letters received from Pope Gregory X. The letters are addressed to Abp. Kilwardby, the elect of Canterbury; they relate the exceptional circumstances of his election, and request him to provide money out of his official revenues to compensate Adam Chillenden, who, after election as archbishop by the convent, had gone to Rome and there, at the Pope's suggestion, resigned his office.

S. 372, 1278. A deed marking a stage in the long-continued dispute between the suffragan bishops of the southern province, and the priors of Christ Church who claimed archiepiscopal authority during the vacancy of the see of Canterbury.

The endorsement gives the sense of the instrument:
"Composicio inter nos et Episcopos suffraganeos ecclesie
" nostre de jurisdictione nostra, sede vacante, in diocesi
" et provincia Cantuarie, et de creatione officialis Capi-
" tuli Cantuariensis, et aliis sub signis vii. suffraganeo-
" rum."

Six of the seals remain.

S. 410, 1293. The official of the prior and convent canonically coerces some misdemeanants. That is, the prior and convent exercise, and delegate, the spiritual authority of the archbishopric, sede vacante.

A. 189, 1294. Abp. Winchelsey gives notice to the Chapter of Christ Church that certain rectors and vicars excommunicated by them during the vacancy of the see, have desired a hearing, and that he has given them a day. The prior is informed that he can appear at the same time if he consider it necessary to do so.

S. B. a. 49, 1313. Congé d'élire granted by Edward II.
after the death of Abp. Winchelsey.

A. 195, 1313. The instrument by which the monks of Christ Church depute three of their number to select seven others to form a committee for choosing an archbishop:—"Vobis plenam et specialem concedimus potes-" tatem, usque ad consumptionem finalem candelæ in " lucerna coram vobis reposita duraturam, ut vos, vice " vestra et nostra, eligatis et eligere valeatis septem per" sonas idoneas alias a vobis de commonachis et confrat-
" ribus nostris que septem persone, aut quatuor
" de ipsis, plenam habeant potestatem, usque ad presentis
" diei noctis tenebras duraturam, ecclesie nostre
" vacanti de pastore idoneo providere."

S. 392, 1328. An instrument in all respects similar to the last.

A. 196, 1333. Letters of attorney appointing two monks to be proctors of the convent, for the purpose of announcing to the Pope that the chapter had chosen John (Stratford) Bp. of Winton to be their archbishop.

S. 411, 1333. A patron presenting a clerk to a benefice requests the prior and convent, sede vacante, to institute him.

S. B. a. 47, 1333. Abp. Mepham being dead, the prior and convent ask permission from the King to proceed to the election of a successor.

S. 416, 1374. The see of Canterbury being vacant, the clergy of the deanery of Sandwich appoint a proctor who shall in their behalf profess canonical obedience to the prior and convent of Ch. Ch., the spiritual head of the diocese.

A. 192, 1374. In 1368 Abp. Simon Langham resigned his office and went into exile, having forfeited the King's favour by accepting the dignity of cardinal. Six years after, coming to England in the character of nuncio and Bishop of Præneste, he was again chosen by the convent to fill the see of Canterbury. This instrument is the formal record, under the hand of a notary, of the cardinal's re-election. The King, greatly incensed, refused to assent to the choice of the monks, and perhaps it is from this cause that the present parchment has been violently torn, not cut, into three pieces.

S. 419, 1375. The Prior of Ch. Ch., sede vacante, is authorised by the Pope's nuncio, who is also the "col" lector" in England, to absolve the rector of a parish who has been excommunicated for delaying his payments.

"Vicario de Assheford collectori procuracionum decanatus de Cheryng pro expensis suis.

"In regardo Apparitoris sui."

S. 417, 1374. The Rector of Hollingbourne certifies the Prior of Ch. Ch., sede vacante, that, in obedience to his mandate, he has imposed public penance on a culprit.

S. B. c. 119, 1485. Draft memorandum, in the writing of Prior W. Selling, reporting the death of Abp. Bourghier, and the election, installation, and enthronisation of Abp. Cardinal Morton.

A second paragraph announces that during the vacancy of the see W. de Waynflete, Bishop of Winton, had died, leaving that diocese vacant, and that the prior had performed all episcopal functions at Winchester, excepting only the conferring of orders, the consecration of churches and altars, and the granting of indulgences, these being functions inherent in episcopal orders.

S. 399, 1486. Prior W. Sellyng, for himself and his convent, sede vacante, gives this licence to Thomas Goldstone, authorising him to preach "latino vel vulgari, clero et populo," in all lawful places in the province of Canterbury.

The Scrap Books contain a large number of presentations to benefices bearing date 1349. These came into the hands of the prior in consequence of the frequent vacancies of the see at that time, there having been four Abps. within thirteen months. To the great pestilence or "Black death," which is known to have caused at least one vacancy of the see of Canterbury, may be attributed the number of these presentations. To the confusion which sprang from the same cause we may refer another group of documents in these books. These are letters of attorney by which all the clergy in each Kentish deanery commissioned a proctor to act for them collectively in ecclesiastical suits.

Archdeacon of Canterbury.

C. 15. A small neatly-written parchment addressed by Abp. Theobald to the convent of Ch. Ch.

The writer acknowledges that the monks have a right to exclude from their chapter-house not only his own chaplains, but even the Archdeacon of Canterbury. If the chapter require the advice of the archdeacon, he is bound to come at their summons without delay; in the chapter-house he shall sit on the footstool of the Archbishop's seat, but he shall not intrude his vote, or endeavour to control the proceedings of the chapter.

Also the Abp. writes that, although the convent have at their own expense roofed a house of his with lead, this shall not be construed into a precedent "cum non Conventus Archiepiscopis, sed Archiepiscopi Conventui, et edificia construere, et bona alia multa conferre, ut boni patres amore ducti filiorum, a priscis temporibus consueverint."

A. 43, Dec. 1227. "Carta S. Arepi. de revocatione ecclesiarum exemptarum tempore Baldwini et Huberti. Et de revocatione dignitatis Archidiaconatus."

In this deed the Abp., after reciting the diminution of dignity and jurisdiction which the Archdeacons of Canterbury had suffered through the injustice of his predecessors, who had wished to exalt their new foundations at Hackington and Lambeth at the expense of Canterbury, restores to the actual archdeacon (his own brother Simon) the authority which belonged to the office in ancient times. This authority consisted "tam in correctione morum, quam in ecclesiarum visitatione."

H. 99, 1227. In order to render the income of the Archdeacon commensurate with his dignity, Abp. Langton gives the churches of Teynham and Hackington to be attached "tanquam de corpore Archidiaconatus."

H. 101, 1227. Simon Langton, Archdeacon of Canterbury, guarantees that the convent of Ch. Ch. shall not in any way suffer from the appropriation of the churches of Teynham and Hackington to the archdeaconry.

A. 43 to 47, and A. 101 to 106, are documents marking the various stages of a long dispute between Rd. de Fering, the Archdeacon of Canterbury, and the Prior of Ch. Ch., concerning jurisdiction, sede vacante. Many of these are statements under the hand of a notary, and were intended to be sent to Rome to be used as evidence in the appeal which one of the parties made to the Holy See; others relate to steps taken at home.

M. 255, 1293. Henry Prior of Ch. Ch. appoints two of his officers "ad monendum canonicum Magistrum Ricardum de Feringes, qui se dicit Archidiaconum de Cantuar, ac etiam per suspensionis et excommunicationis sententias, et alias censuras ecclesiasticas, si necesse fuerit, compellendum et coercendum eundem, ne . . . impediatur seu impedire presumat; necnon ceteros quoscunque, cujuscunque dignitatis preeminencie aut status seu condicionis existant, qui iura et libertates ecclesie nostre Cantuariensis violaverint, molestaverint, seu perturbaverint . . . sententias ac censuris prenominationis coercendos, karissimo dno. nostro Dno. Edwardo, dei gratia Rege Anglie, et ejus liberis duntaxat exceptis, vobis conjunctim et divisim committimus vices nostras."

A. 45, 1298. Is the last document in the cause. The Archdeacon of Bedford, and a canon of Lichfield were appointed to arbitrate by Nicholas III., and by Boniface VIII., and, after receiving many affidavits and examining witnesses on both sides, they drew up this report. This is not a judgment deciding the suit, but rather a certificate authenticating the affidavits which were sent to Rome at the same time. The delegates seem to have been but lukewarm in the matter, for they write: "Imminent tamen supervenientis fatalitas seu eventus, videlicet regni et incolarum Anglie communis perturbationis discrimina, et adversorum negociorum personas nostras tangentium occupatio, finem nullatenus perducere permittebant."

S. B. a. 142. Not dated. The rector of Ashford, hearing that R. de Clyve, the commissary of the prior and convent, has threatened mischief to all who adhere to the side of the archdeacon, fearing that he may be included in the denunciation, appeals to Rome.

Autograph Signatures.

Royal signs-manual and signatures of persons known to history are found in the Chart. Ant., but they are not numerous.

A. 2 exhibits the crosses of William I. and his Queen, followed by the undoubted autograph signatures of Lanfranc, Hubert the Legate, Walkelin Bp. of Winton, Wulstan of Worcester, Remigius of Dorchester, and the mark of (H)erfastus of Thetford. (See under "Primary.")

Some leases are signed by Elizabeth; her minister the Earl of Leicester gives a receipt for money; and Cecil Earl of Salisbury signs a document emanating from the Court of Wards and Liveries.

Ecclesiastical dignitaries are represented by an autograph "Fiat" of Innocent VIII., and by the signatures of Hubert, Sudbury, and Warham, Abps. of Canterbury, Galfridus, Prior from 1191 to 1206, John Abbot of Abingdon, the Abbot of Battle in 1534, Prior Goldstone, Prior Sellyng, and some other officers of Christ Church.

The volume of "Ch. Ch. Letters" contains examples of the signs-manual of Henry VI., Edward IV., Henry VII. and of Elizabeth his Queen. The parchment H. 112 bears the symbol, possibly copied, of Innocent II., and the signatures, apparently in autograph, of eight cardinals.

Articuli and gravamina Cleri.

"C. 254, c. 1213. G. fil. Petri Comes Essex Justiciarius, R. Comes Bolonie, R. Comes Cestrie, W. Comes Warrenne, W. Marescallus Comes Pembrochie, W. Comes Arundel, W. Comes de Ferrariis, Will. "laicis, negotium quod inter ecclesiam Anglicanam et ipsum Regem versatum est contingentes, firmiter observabit" &c.

This is the original guarantee given to the church by twelve of the great barons, thirteen days before John's submission to the legate at Dover.

Eleven of the seals, more or less damaged, are still pendent from the parchment. The "pactum et securitas" alluded to were given by John at the same time, and the whole history is to be found in Wendover (ed Coxe, vol. iii. 248).

O. 138. Endorsed "Concilium provinciale Oxoniense," then in a later hand, "Temp. Dni. S[tephani] Langton] Cantuar Archiepi. "Anno dni. MCCXV." This is a contemporary copy, on three membranes, of the proceedings of the Council of Oxford. The endorser, misled by a reference to the Lateran Council, antedated the MS. by six years.

The canons here propounded are printed in Spelman's and in Wilkins's Concilia.

M. 260. 1299. "Articuli liberati Dno. Edwardo Regi ex parte prelatorum et cleri Anglie, in parlamento suo Londonie in quadragesima A.D. MCC nonagesimo nono, tempore R. [Winchelsey] Cant. Archiepi. Et postea in parlamento Lyncolnie in Octabis Sci Illarii, A.D. MCCC. iidem articuli liberati fuerunt Dno. Regi in presencia prelatorum et procerum totius regni."

This is a contemporary copy of thirty-four articles in which the clergy complain of grievances and oppressions. Twenty-eight of the articles deal with violations of sanctuary, imprisonment of clerks by secular judges, presentations of vicars by laymen, &c.; whilst the last six are concerned with lighter matters, such as the seizure of horses for the use of the King, and the confiscation of the goods of alien religious foundations. The substance of this document, with other gravamina, is given by Wilkins (ii. 316 seqq.) under the date of 1309.

M. 289. 1294. A general protection granted to the clergy by Edw. I., after they had yielded to him a subsidy amounting to a half of their income. This instrument is addressed "Capitaneis marinariorum, et eisdem marinariis, vicecomitibus et omnibus Ballivis." The preamble runs: "Cum prelati et totus clerus de regno nostro medietatem beneficiorum et bonorum suorum . . . liberaliter concesserint et gratanter; Nos eorundem prelatorum et cleri quieti et tranquillitati ex hac causa libencius providere volentes, suscepimus in protectionem et defensionem nostram specialem . . ." &c.

A mutilated seal is attached to the writ, and the word "Cantuar" written in the lower margin implies that the document was a "circular" of which a copy was sent to all the parties concerned. Wilkins (ii. 200) printed it from the Worcester Register.

C. 255. An undated document, endorsed "Articuli corrigendi in isto sacro concilio in diocesi Cantuar."

K. 11; 1310-11. A contemporary copy of the ordinances drawn up by the Barons' committee for the regulation of the King's household, and of the kingdom in general. Many of these provisions touch the privileges of the clergy, but as they are well known to historians it is not necessary to enumerate them here.

Abbey of St. Augustine.

The Abbots of St. Augustine's, dependent, "nullo medio," upon the Roman Church, claimed exemption from episcopal jurisdiction; on the other hand, the Archbishops of Canterbury, and, sede vacante, the Priors of Christ Church, demanded submission from the monastery, which was situated in their diocese; from these incompatible claims arose numerous law-suits and appeals to Rome, various stages of which are related in the documents forming this group.

A. 49 and A. 51, circ. 1151. Endorsed, "Professio Silvestri Abbatis Sci. Augustini Cant. facta Theobaldo Archiepiscopo ad preceptum Adriani Papæ." This instrument in duplicate, fortified by the seals of the Bishops of London, Evreux, Bath, Norwich, Chichester, Hereford, and Lincoln, relates how Silvester the Abbot professed canonical obedience to the Archbishop of Canterbury in the presence of the subscribers.

This MS. is valuable inasmuch as that it contradicts the historians who assert that Silvester received benediction without making his profession. The abbot is said to have yielded on the production of the record of a precedent which was inspected by the attesting bishops.

C. 117. 1099. This is the precedent which convinced Abbot Silvester:—

"Ego Hugo, ecclesie Sanctorum Petri et Pauli, et beati Augustini Anglorum primi Archiepiscopi, electus Abbas, promitto Sancte Dorobernensi ecclesie et tibi reverende Pater Anselme, ejusdem ecclesie Archiepiscopo, tuisque successoribus canonicam per omnia obedientiam."

A. 48. Writ from William II. to the Abbot of St. Augustine's:—

"W. Rex Anglie, Abbati Sci. Augustini salutem. Defendo ne alium ordinem, neque consuetudinem, in ecclesia Sci. Augustini ponas, quam habuisti tempore Lanfranci Archiepiscopi; et illum honorem quem tempore Lanfranci Archiepiscopi, et subjectionem erga matrem ecclesiam Cantuarie, habuisti, illum eundem ei modo obediendo impende, tu et monachi tui, tam in campanis sonandis, quam in aliis consuetudinibus. Et vide ne inde amplius audiam clamorem. T. Endone Dapifero."

A. 209. Alexander III. to the elect of St. Augustine's.

This appears to be addressed to Abbot Clarembald, the intruder, in 1163. The Pope writes: "Quia tua benedictio ultra quam decuit sep. noscitur dilata fuisse, et inconveniens prorsus existit ut religioso conventui preesse debeat, et officio ac nomine magistri carere; per apostolica tibi scripta precipiendo mandamus, quatenus a venerabili fratre nostro T[homa] Archiepiscopo, . . . opportunitate suscepta, benedictionis munus accipias, et eidem omnem reverentiam . . ." &c.

A. 50 to A. 60 are papers in suits and appeals in which Christ Church and St. Augustine's were alternately plaintiffs and defendants, A. 53, A. 54, A. 55 being compromises and agreements which failed to bring peace. The dates extend from the middle of the thirteenth century to the early years of the fourteenth.

A. 193. In a letter to the prior, Archbishop Winchelsey forbids him to communicate consecrated oil or chrism to St. Augustine's Abbey, which he says would be to assist his adversaries.

A. 62. Endorsed, "Qualiter Augustinenses venerunt ad falsa privilegia sua."

This MS., of which A. 61 is a duplicate, tells an extraordinary tale of forgery, executed by Guerno, a monk of St. Medard's, at Soissons, in order to support the pretensions of St. Augustine's monastery. The original letter was addressed by Hugh, Abp. of Rouen, to Adrian IV.; and it is accompanied by a certificate from Giles, Bishop of Evreux, addressed to Alexander III., the successor of Adrian. These letters are printed by Wharton in the preface to vol. ii. of his "Anglia Sacra," where, however, the first letter, as well as the certificate, is attributed to the Bishop of Evreux.

Archbishop Becket's Kinsmen.

M. 372, 1168. Pope Alexander III., in the lifetime of Archbishop Becket, writes to beg that the Archbishop Elect of Sens will assign to Gillebert, the nephew "venerabilis fratris nostri T[homæ] Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi," a pension which his kinsman Geoffrey has previously received.

H. 89. Prior Alan confers upon John, the nephew of St. Thomas by his sister Agnes, a vicarage in the church of Halstow.

H. 90. Abp. Baldwin confirms the last gift.

L. 4. Prior Alan confers upon John, nephew of St. Thomas by his sister Rohesia, a vicarage in the church of St. Mary Bothage, in the city of London.

C. 165, 1221. A long roll of payments made by the treasurers of Christ Church, Cant. Among the items are some which refer to this subject:—

"Pro sotularibus Willelmi clerici et Andree nepotum Sci. Thome reparandis contra natale xiiid.

"Pro sotularibus Willelmi consanguinei Sci. Thome reparandis vid. eidem Willelmo xiiid.

"Pro lineis pannis Thome consanguinei Sci. Thome xvid. pro sotularibus ejusdem vid. ob.

"Pro sotularibus Andree consanguinei Sci. Thome contra pascham xxd.

"Pro sotularibus Andree consanguinei Sci. Thome reparandis vid.

"Pro pannis laneis Rogeri consanguinei Sci. Thome venientis de Terra Sancta viis. ixzd. ob.

"Pro pannis lineis ejusdem xviiiid.

"Pro sotularibus ejusdem xxxd.

"Pro habitu monachico filii H. de Cobeham et Willelmi consanguinei Sci. Thome lvs."

No especial favour appears to have been shown to these nephews; in this account they take their place, not with the more dignified brethren, but rather with the "conversi," some of whom received gifts of clothing at the same time as the archbishop's kinsmen.

It is to be noticed that it is only in this group of papers that the Chart. Ant. present the archbishop as a creature of flesh and blood; in all other instances where the name occurs he is alluded to as a supernatural personage. It seems probable that the name has been weeded out from these archives for political reasons.

Bishops, Election and Consecration of.

C. 109, 1215. A charter of John, given at the instance of the Abp. of Canterbury, and the Bps. of London, Ely, Hereford, Bath, and Lincoln, granting freedom in the election of bishops. This instrument is dated from the New Temple, in London, on the 21st November, and is therefore distinct from a similar charter given at Dover.

Cauciones.—The documents grouped under this head consist chiefly of guarantees given by bishops consecrated, or about to be consecrated, elsewhere than in the church of Canterbury, that such consecrations shall not be used as precedents to the injury of the metropolitan church. With these guarantees, or as they are called in the endorsements "cauciones," are mixed a few letters of excuse from bishops who, having been summoned to take a part in consecrations, were unable to be present. Urgent affairs or weak health are usually alleged as the impediments, but two Welsh bishops were detained within their own frontiers "propter guerram."

C. 120. A roll of 8 membranes written in the early part of the 15th century. This MS. sets forth the authorities upon which the prior and convent relied for supporting their claim to have the consecrations of all bishops of the southern province performed in their church.

The authorities are quoted in the following order:—

1. Carta Sci. Thome Martyris.

This is a transcript of the charter, and of its confirmation by Gregory IX., certified by the Prior of St. Gregory and the Dean of Canterbury.

The Abp., who apparently foresaw what would be the end of his opposition to the will of the King's party, writes that the church of Canterbury through its connexion with himself has incurred much odium, and from the same cause has suffered loss and damage, "quod tota fere novit Latinitas"; also, rather than the church should be further injured, "quodlibet tormentum, sed et mille mortis genera, si tot occurrent, libencius excipimus Nos itaque, licet parati simus pro pace et indemnitatem capud et corpus persecutoribus exponere, et ne pereat vel ne quid modicum perdat, perire . . . ipsam ecclesiam sub Dei protectione et nostra ponimus." After giving the chapter authority to employ ecclesiastical censures against invaders of their rights, he adds: "Prohibemus ne Episcopi suffraganei alibi consecrentur quam in ecclesia Cant. cui tenentur ex professione et debita subjectione, nisi de communi consensu totius Capituli Monachorum Cant. Nec crisma vel oleum per Cantuariensem provinciam dividendum aliunde quam ab ecclesia Cantuariensi aliquo tempore percipiatur."

This charter, which runs to a great length, is not dated.

2. Confirmation of the foregoing charter by Gregory IX. Dat. Lateran xii. kal. Febr. Pontificatus nostri anno primo.

3. "Protestatio Edmundi Arepi. Cant. de jure Capituli in consecrationibus Electorum." The spirit of the protestation is contained in the words, "Cum per libertatem Cant. ecclesie suffraganei sine assensu Capituli Cantuar. alibi quam in ecclesia Cant. nullatenus debeant consecrari."

4. Confirmation of the same by Gregory IX.

5. De eadem materia. Innocent IV. assures the prior that all suffragans whom he or his successors may consecrate shall still be bound to profess obedience to the church of Canterbury.

6. A cautionary letter from Gregory IX., promising that the consecration of Robert (Grosseteste) Bp. of Lincoln shall not be prejudicial to the church of Canterbury.

7. A letter from Alexander IV. to Abp. Boniface. He writes that R(oger) Elect Abbot of St. Augustine's has, after great labours, arrived at the Curia, and that he complains that Boniface has refused to give him the benediction in his own monastery. The Pope, having conferred benediction on the abbot elect, sends this letter giving information of the fact, and promising that through his act no damage shall accrue to Christ Church.

From this point to the end, the roll is occupied by copies of about 50 cauciones, the originals of which are in the Chart. Antiq.

C. 125, 1245. A letter from Abp. Boniface, dated from Lyons; he says that he is hindered on his journey to England, and he requires the Bp. of London to consecrate R. Elect of Exeter at Reading.

C. 143, 1327. Notarial act drawn up so that, if necessary, it may be used as evidence of the due observance of all proper formalities in the election of M. de Englefield Bp. of Bangor.

R. 47. "Transcriptum privilegii Alexandri Pape de subjectione Roffensis Ecclesie." This is a copy of an apostolic letter sent by Alexander III. to Erior. Alan of Canterbury, confirming to him and his successors the supremacy which they have heretofore held over the church of Rochester.

C. 129, S. B. b. 231, X. 2. These documents contain the story of Walter Scamel, Bp. of Sarum: how he was consecrated by Abp. John Peckham, extra Cant., the permission of the prior not having been obtained; how the prior appealed to Rome, and to his immediate patron the archbishop, sending at the same time a denunciatory letter to the bishop; all concluding with a general forgiveness and ratification of peace.

S. B. c. 125, 1327. A large part of the Bull of provision by which John XXII. supplied Bp. Grandison to the see of Exeter.

Brus, Robert de.

S. 270, 1291. A contemporary copy in French of the two clauses of the treaty of Norham, made between Edward I. and the Scots. By the first clause, dated on the Tuesday after Ascension, the claimants, "Florenz Comte de Hollaunde, Robert de Brus Seignur de Val Danaunt [Annandale], Johan Baillol Seignur de Ga(llo)weye, Johan Comyn Seignur de Badenough, Patrick de Dunbar, Comte de la Marche, Johan de Vescy pur son pere, Nichol de Soulis, e Willame de Ros," agree to submit themselves to the arbitration of the King of England.

By the second clause, executed on the next day, they consent that Edward shall, under certain restrictions, occupy the strongholds of Scotland, pendente lite.

This document was sent by the King to the convent of Canterbury in order that an authentic record of the facts might be preserved. "Mittimus vobis sub sigillo scaccarii nostri presentibus appenso transcripta quarundam litterarum que in Thesauraria resident." Endorsed, "Rex precipit quod ista transcripta ponantur in cronicis." Published in fac-simile in "National MSS. of Scotland," vol. ii.

M. 378, 14 Sept. 1318. This MS., which occupies more than a whole skin of parchment, contains a notice addressed by the Cardinals Gaucelinus and Luke, the Papal legates, to all religious persons and corporations in England and Scotland, requiring them to denounce "Robertum de Brus, non Regem, duntaxat regni gubernatorem Scocie," and with extinguished tapers and tolling bells to pronounce sentence of excommunication against him and his adherents "ter et amplius in qualibet missa sollempni, semel post epistolam, secundo post Evangelium, et tercio post communionem."

This notice is endorsed, "Processus Cardinalium contra Robertum de Brus et Scotos."

Bulls, Original.

H. 112. A Bull of Innocent II. affecting the church of Hereford. The autograph signatures attached to this Bull are remarkable.

B. 371. Clement III. The leaden bulla "filo serico" is still attached.

S. 334. Boniface VIII. The leaden seal is in this case attached by a hempen string, "filum cannabinum."

S. B. c. 125. A Bull of provision by which John XXII. appoints a bishop to Exeter.

Canterbury, Christ Church sequestered.

C. 1,274, 1284. A parchment document, considerably decayed and greatly discoloured, which contains the history of the seizure of the priory of Christ Church by the King's escheator, with the appeal to the King, and its consequences. A prior having resigned, the King's escheator took possession of the revenues of the house, alleging that "prioratu vacante" they belonged to the Crown.

"Memorandum quod anno MCCLXXXIII. regni vero Regis E. filii Regis H. XIII. Dns. Thomas Ringemer qui tunc fuit Prior . . . resignavit, et habitum nigrum exuens habitum Cisterciense induit apud Bellum-locum [Beaulieu]. Hoc audito Magr. H. de Bray tunc Escaetor Dni. Regis citra trentam, statim totum prioratum cepit in manum Dni. Regis, dicens custodiam prioratus ad ipsum Regem pertinere, prioratu vacante; quod nunquam prius oculus vidit, nec auris audivit."

After the seizure the sub-prior hastened to the King in Norfolk, who, deferring the consideration of the matter until after he had met his council and parliament, ultimately acknowledged that his predecessors had never claimed the custody of the monastery, and withdrew the sequestration.

After a lapse of 13 years, driven to fury by the Bull "Clericis Laicos," fortified by which Abp. Winchelsey and his clergy refused to contribute to the King's wars, Edward I. again took possession of the monastery, and by sealing up the granaries and stores brought the monks to the borders of starvation.

On Ash Wednesday, being Feb. 27, 1297, John Dymoke, the King's officer specially appointed for the purpose, came, accompanied by the sheriff of Kent and others, into the court of the priory, and affixing seals upon the doors, took formal possession of the premises. The monks made no opposition, but secretly, fearing to do so openly, they introduced a notary, who drew up a precise statement of all the acts of oppression of which he was a witness, attesting the truth of his narrative by affixing his notarial mark.

X. 6, is the narrative thus drawn up and corroborated.

He says that he found Dymoke in possession, and calling himself the King's servant; the doors were all sealed with green wax, having an impression "quasi leonis rapacis"; and to the monks he found Dymoke "alimenta vite necessaria, esculenta, et poculenta," quibus ipso die vesci debebant, penitus denegantem."

C. 169, 1297. On the 6th of March following Dymoke's entry, the Granetarius requested the notary to visit the monastery once more, in order that he might testify that the granary was sealed up, and that the corn had spoiled from "heating." He says, "Ascendi in quodam solarium ad capud granarii, et per quandam fenestram inspiciens, vidi et inspexi dictum bladum ad centum summas frumenti videlicet estimatum . . . eo quod erat ita calidum in palpando quod in eo bene caleferi frigida posset manus, et fumus . . . exibat ab eo," &c. Here the story ends, as far as it is told by the Chart. Ant.

Schola Cantuariensis.

The schoolmaster at the beginning of the 14th century, working in a high-handed manner, attempted to use the thunders of the church for punishing little culprits who, in modern times, would be corrected by the cane.

X. 4. S. B. b. 19 and 20. Are four documents, three of which are notices to offenders, the fourth being a solemn investigation undertaken by the [rural] Dean of Canterbury in order to ascertain if the master was entitled to the power he claimed.

In the first case, the summons begins, "Acta in scholis Cant. die Junii," &c.; it then goes on to charge against John Modi that "violentas manus iniecitisse Stephano Borstede scolari meo," appointing next Saturday for settling the dispute. Violent laying on of hands is still often settled on a Saturday afternoon.

In the next case, Thomas Birkwood has offended in that "in Walterum clericum vice-monitorem meum . . . manus iniecasti temere violentas . . . in sententiam excommunicationis majoris in hujusmodi, injectores manuum latam, ipso facto incidendo."

Again, he writes solemnly to the Dean, informing him that he has excommunicated "Ricardum de Aula propter suas multiplicatas et manifestas contumacias," and he requests that the clergy of the deanery may be required to publish the sentences in their churches "inter sollempnia."

Once more, he announces to Roger Lymburner that he has already summoned him once, and that, as he did not appear, he now summons him for the second and last time, after which, if he be still contumacious, the usual penalty will follow.

The last document is one of a very formal and official character.

John Everard, the schoolmaster, propounds before the Commissary of Canterbury a document written by Abp. Peckham in 1291. This instrument really does confer upon the schoolmaster the powers which he claims, and the commissary is constrained to require the Dean to publish the sentences when requested to do so by the master.

From which it appears that the Dean had hitherto dealt tenderly with Richard de Aula.

C. 1267, 1569. An agreement, under the seal of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, by which the master and fellows consent to prefer the scholars of Canterbury to their foundation.

S. B. b. 174. An eighteenth century master, whose name has been cut off, resigns his office into the hands of the dean and chapter.

Canterbury City.

C. 1,226. The monks of Canterbury had provided timber to assist in fortifying the city; fearing that this act might be used as a precedent, they obtain this guarantee from Hubert de Burgh, the justiciary, who certifies that the wood was provided out of goodwill, and not from any service or duty which the monks owed to the city.

C. 49. A certificate, having the same tenour, given by the (Dowager) Queen of Henry II. The motive cause which prompts her to conciliate the monks is, in her own words, "Audito quod karissimus filius noster Rex Anglie . . . detentus est ab Imperatore Romano, venimus ad memoriam beati et gloriosi martyris . . . ut liberationem Dni. Regis filii nostri possemus, ejus intervenientibus meritis et precibus, optinere."

C. 79, 1294. Part of a court-roll of the city of Canterbury.

C. 1,228, 1227. A certificate given by Rob. de Ely, citizen of London.

He relates that the King, having required the city of Canterbury to furnish a certain number of men-at-arms "pro guerra sua Scocie," the bailiffs called upon the convent to contribute their proportion. The convent, asserting that they were exempt from all secular service, refused their contribution, whereupon the mayor and commonalty assembled for the purpose of contriving a plan for coercing the prior and convent by the powers of the law. It happened that W. de Ely was present at the meeting, and out of love for the church, not being pressed or even asked, (he speaks in his own person) "predictos Ballivos et Burgenses instanter rogavi quod ab omnibus dampnis et gravaminibus dictis Priori et Conventui comminatis et inferendis penitus desisterent et cessarent, et quia dicti Ballivi et Burgenses hujusmodi petitione mei grateranter annuerunt, Ego . . . predictos Ball. et Burg. de propriis bonis meis competenter respexi," &c. An endorsement shows that the compliment which W. de E. paid to the bailiffs amounted to 10*l.* money of the time.

C. 1,230, 1428. A bond given by the bailiffs of Canterbury to the prior and convent, as a surety that they will abide by the award of two arbitrators to whom, by common consent, they had referred a dispute. The arbitrators were John Martin, Justice of the King's Bench, a Kentish man living at Graveney, (where a fine brass memorial of him still exists in the church), and Geoffrey Lowther. This bond marks a stage in the chronic dispute which embittered the relations of the prior and convent with the city of Canterbury.

It appears that the citizens seized some fish which the maniple of the convent had purchased at the seaside, alleging that this act amounted to the offence of forestalling, and that their rights were thereby infringed. The matter was submitted to the decision of the arbitrators, with what result does not appear.

C. 1,231, 1432. Exemplification, under the seal of the bailiffs of Canterbury, of the record in a suit of novel disseisin, friscoe forcei, in which the prior and convent were the plaintiffs, and Nicholas Barbour defendant. The cause of action was the withdrawal of a rent of 3*s.* 6*d.* issuing from a messuage and two shops in Canterbury.

C. 875, 1443. Lease from the citizens to the convent of a piece of land within the city wall, at Queningate, for a term of 13 years, at a rent of 6*s.* 8*d.* The land here dealt with is that which the convent obtained in fee simple fifty years later. See C. 1,233 below.

C. 1,233, 1492. A deed of composition made between the prior and convent of Christchurch on the one part, and the mayor and commonalty of the city of Canterbury on the other. The preamble states that discords have long existed between the parties, arising from points of contested privileges and jurisdiction, but that, by the advice of the "counsell and frendys of eyther of the said parties," they at length have come to a final concord. The deed, on two whole skins of parchment, sets forth the concessions which each party agrees to make in order to purchase a lasting peace. The most important clause is one by which the city resigns to the convent all claim to that part of the city wall, including the bastion towers, which runs between Burgate and Northgate, together with the waste land, and the lane within and adjoining to the wall.

By this concession the city was relieved from the burthen of keeping the wall in repair, that expense being taken off their hands by the convent who, on their part, obtained a great advantage in being able to use the newly acquired wall as one of the boundaries of their precincts.

At the time of this composition there was little fear that the city would be called upon to face a siege, and hence a clause which allowed the monks to pierce the fortification with a new postern, and to construct a bridge over the "dyke of the seid cite," was not as imprudent as it would have been in earlier and more turbulent times.

C. 1,154, 1492. The gift and grant from the city to the monastery of the above-mentioned wall and towers, being the corollary to the deed of composition.

C. 1,332 and 1,335, 1500. Record of a trial in which W. atte Wode, the Mayor of Canterbury, and several of his fellow citizens, were indicted for riot with assault, the prosecutor being the Prior of Ch. Ch. The story, which is told in six paper rolls and two parchments reads as follows:—The mayor, to try a right, went outside the Westgate, and being, according to his view, still in the city, he arrested some of the prior's servants, against the peace, &c. He was indicted, he pleaded, the prior rejoined, and at last a jury gave a verdict which was adverse to the mayor.

The prior's "complaynte" relates that the mayor with others to the number of two hundred, arrayed in manner of war, assembled on the 16 of July and issued from the city into a meadow called "the Rosiers," in the county of Kent, and not within the jurisdiction of the city. In the meadow they cut down certain trees called "welowes," and they stopped a dyke which had been made for the "avoiding" of the water in the time of flood. One Thomas Megge, assisted by others, "assaulted on" Damp. Thomas Ikham, monke of the seid prior, being "late afore sore sike and walking in the felde for his recreation, and then and there put him in grete juberdie of his lyf." Also they "assaulted on, bete, and yll intreted" divers servants of the prior, carrying them into the city, when they took from them certain goods, such as a woode-knyff, a cap containing five shillings and two pence, two swords, a bow and shafts, and a byll, after which they imprisoned them for three days. Meeting Sir Thomas Jure, one of the priests of the almonry, with a "sparhawk" upon his fist, they "assaulted on" him and took away his hawk. The language of the citizens requires that great allowance should be made for changes in manners and customs, for, besides crying "Kylle the horesons," and "Stonde horeson and yeld thy knyff," they taunted Dan Thomas the sick monk, seizing him by the "grabatum" and saying "Yeld the, horeson monke, comest thou her to be a captayn this daye?"

On the day after the Westgate riot the mayor violently removed the fishmarket from Burgate Street, where it was conveniently near to the priory gate, to another street, to the great hurt and damage of the convent.

Again, when the "catour" of the church went to the new fishmarket and bought a "halybutte," the citizens took it from him as he was carrying it from the market to the priory gate, "contrarie to all ryght and good conscience."

The prior, unable to purchase fish in the Canterbury market, sent his manacle to the seaside, where he bought a seme of fish; but this also was seized, as it came into the town, by the riotous citizens, "disapoyntyng in the same the brethren of the place of ther deners." In addition to these breaches of the peace, the mayor and his fellows committed offences against the laws by trespassing, by building bridges and diverting watercourses, to the damage of the prior.

They also omitted various courteous ancient customs; thus "while hit hath ben used of a laudable custom of the mair and other citizens, that at the feste of Cristmas have assembled theym selfe in the church at the tombe of Archibyschopp Sudbury, ther saying divers orysons and prayours for the sowle of the same Byshopp, for the greates actes he hath don to the seide cite, the same maior and citizens, for the greates malice and grugge as they owed to the seid priour and convent, at the fest of Cristmas last passet absented theym selfe from the seid church, and withdrew there prayours from thense, and kept there prayours and orysons under the prisonhous called "Westgate of the seid cite." Lastly, they abstained from joining the nobleman who brought the King's offering to St. Thomas at his feast at Christmas-tide, a thing before unknown. The mayor's reply contains no denial of the facts, but he recriminates, charging the prior with various offences, the taking away of the mace from the city serjeant being one, and the befouling of the city ditch with sewage another.

The verdict gives detail of the riot, with the accompanying foul language, much more full than even the prior's complaynte. Altogether the jury collected from the evidence and handed down to us a lively picture of the manner in which angry people acted and scolded in early Tudor times.

S. B. b. 186. A memorandum made at the time of the mayor's riot.

"Thes byn the namys of my Lordys [the Prior's] "servauntes that hadde theyr wepnys takyn from "them." The "servauntes" were supposed to be peaceful haymakers, and invalids strolling for their health, and therefore it is odd to find that they were deprived of three swords, a bowe with schaffts, a bowe, a dagger, a bylle, a payer of briganders, and a payer of splints.

C. 1,236, 1501. A petition to the King from the Prior of Cant. This MS., written upon parchment, refers to a later development of the dispute last noticed. The mayor disregarded the verdict, and was summoned to the Star Chamber, where, for want of leisure, the affair was passed over, much to the discontent of the prior, who here begs the King to again summon his adversary "to appere afore your Highnesse or your counsell, at a tyme and place at your pleasure to be lymtyed, to answer to the premisses for the love of God and in the waye of charite."

M. 256. Three narrow strips of parchment sewn end to end, forming a roll of about 5 feet long, and containing a list of the Mayors of Canterbury, from the first in 1448 to the 106th in the 3rd Philip and Mary.

The earlier entries consist only of the date of the year and the name of the mayor, but scraps of history are interspersed in the latter half of the MS. Thus, under the year 1544, we find:—

"XCIIII. (he being 94th mayor) Johannes Freman. This yere was the towne of Bolon victoriously won and conquered by Kyng Henry the eight, the xiii day of Septembre.

"1554. Thys yere was the rysing of S. Thomas Wyat. Thys yere Quene Mary was married unto Philipe Prince of Spayne a fore Seint Jamis day at Wincheater.

"1555. This day Carnale Pole came from Rome, and was receyved at Calyse by my Lord Olynton . . . and so came to Cantourbury the xxi day of Novemb. at v of the cloke at afternone.

"Itm. the same yere the xii day of Julii was brent iiii heretykes.

"Itm. the xxi day of August was brent vi heretykes."

In the same year the mayor and sheriff met the King, going to the continent, and carried him to Christ Church, where he was received by the college. The sheriff carried a white rod before the King, and was proud of it.

"The v day of September was brent v heretykes.

"My lorde Cardynall Pole . . . came throw Cantourbury, and so went on to Calyce, and sat yn a generall counsell . . . to conclude a peace betwixte the Emperour and the French Kyng, and so retornyd . . . into Englund and came to Cantourbury upone Corpus Xpi. day, . . . and went yn processyon with the Colleage after the Sacrament, bare-headed, and causyd Mast. Mayre of the citie with all the Aldermen to go . . . next him, save only II lordys, in scarlett, and so on the Sunday after, the Sacrament was borne yn generall processyon, and Mast. Mayre with all the Aldermen went nexte my Lorde in scarlett, and my Lorde Cardynall causyd vi of hys owne gentylemen-servants to carry vi torchys of waxe, of his owne proper costys and chargys."

"1556. The xxx day of Januarii, An^o Phil. et Marie 2^o & 3^o, was brent one man and four women, then beyng Shryffe of Kent Sir Thomas Kempe, and Shryffe of Cantourbury John Semarke."

C. 1237. "Collection of evidences upon my Lo. Arch-bishop Abbot his Quo warranto against the city of "Canterbury."

The perennial quarrel between the City and the Church, which in the 17th century had inherited the privileges ("tot et tanta et talia") of the dissolved monastery, was not ended by the dissolution.

The Archbishop and the college took the place of the prior and convent in the unextinguished feud.

This document, containing 18 sheets of brief-paper, is filled with precedents favourable to the Abp's case. The writer has noted in the margin the authorities from whose works his arguments are derived. He refers to Beeda, Lambarde, Camden, Codex MS. Roffens, Domas-day, Antiquitates Ecclesie Britannice, Historia Eadmeri, W. Malmesbury, and to many of the MSS. in this collection, quoting, not the originals, but copies in several quaintly named registers; among these occur the following:—1. "Liber compositionum." 2. "Liber privilegiorum." 3. "Liber niger, incipiens Berthon." 4. "Liber C." 5. "Liber Winchelsey." 6. "Hasp-Book." 7. "The knopped book." 8. "Liber ruber." In the portfolio with these papers is a copy, in Somner's writing, of the composition C. 1233.

Catalogues, Ancient, of the Chartæ Antiquæ.

C. 250. A paper book of 36 duodecimo pages, apparently written in the 17th century, containing items selected from some register. The titles of some of the Cart. Ant. are to be found in this list, but the majority are at present unknown to the collection.

C. 232. A paper book in which Somner has copied a 14th century catalogue of the Cart. Ant.

The title of the original from which Somner copied was, "Archivum Ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis, sive descriptio, atque supervisio, omnium chartarum et munimentorum, quæ in vasis tam Borealibus quam Australibus Armarii Chartophylacis Facta per Joh. de Gloucesteria et Joh. de Eastria, A.D. MCCCCLXX.—Custodes."

On the verso of the last leaf is written: "The original of this catalogue is preserved in the Chapter House at Westminster, in the county bags in the chief clerk's office. Title Kent. W. Illingworth, 10 Dec. 1806."

A. 17. "Extracta e registro privilegiorum sedis Archiepiscopalis Cantuariensis." A sheet of paper containing 20 extracts, by a hand of the 17th century, all relating to presentations to the church of St. Michael in the Poultry.

A. 40. "Libertates Sci. Thome," a 15th century copy of an insperimus of 1252. Four charters are recited, three of which, Will. I., Hen. I., and Hen. II., are still in this collection.

C. 204. A roll upon which a 13th century hand has made copies of early charters given by Edward the Confessor and his successors up to Richard I. Among these are three from the Archbishops Anselm, Theobald, and Thomas.

S. B. a. 149. A decayed sheet of paper, written in double column and on both sides, by a 14th century hand. It is not impossible that this is the original draft from which was copied the catalogue mentioned under C. 232 as being among the public records.

Chuntries.

C. 145, 1363. A confirmation, under the seal of Abp. Islip, of the foundation of a chantry in Christ Church Canterbury, by Edward the Black Prince.

The foundation deed distinctly declares that the ordination of this chantry was the price exacted by the Pope before the Prince could obtain permission to marry his cousin Joan, to whom he was related within the prohibited degrees.

The deed contains the usual provisions for appointing and removing the priests of the chantry, and the manor of Vauxhall is assigned to the prior and convent, to furnish the funds for supporting them.

F. 49 to F. 53. Are deeds relating to the manor of Vauxhall, which came into the possession of the monastery by gift from the Black Prince.

The original foundation deed of this chantry was catalogued in 1806, but a pencil note now appended to the entry declares that it was "missing temp. Dr. Russell."

W. 214, 1443. Foundation deed of a chantry, endowed by Joan Brencley, widow, and to be established in the chapel of our Lady in the parish church of Bixley. In addition to this foundation she desires her executors to sell her lands in Kent, and to bestow the money so obtained in pious uses, such as "in churches, fowle wayes, poor men and women, and other good deeds of charity."

B. 357. The feoffees of Joan Brencley carry out her wishes and found the chantry. This deed recites all the steps in the process of the foundation, the King's licence in mortmain, the bishop's consent, the endowment, which gives the incumbent priest power to distrain for arrears, &c. This complete establishment of the chantry is dated 1458.

B. 356, 1458. Deed of foundation of a chantry in Canterbury Cathedral Church, to be called Brencley's chantry. The priest is, on all Sundays and festivals, to observe the canonical hours, with mass, and Placebo and Dirige, at the altar of St. John the Baptist. At foot is a confirmation by Abp. Stafford.

C. 151. The feoffees grant the patronage of Brencley's chantry to Abp. Stafford and his successors.

C. 152. The feoffees assign a house in the parish of St. Alphege as a residence for the priest of Brencley's chantry, at the same time charging certain named lands in Kent with the payment of a stipend of 10*l*.

C. 252. Bourghier's chantry in Ch. Ch. A copy on paper, probably the draft, of a deed by which Henry VII. was made patron of, and partaker in the benefits of Bourghier's chantry at the altar of St. Stephen in the north transept of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury. The document tells how Abp. Bourghier had endowed a chantry, but having neglected to obtain the King's licence to suspend the statute of mortmain, his bequest became void, and only by the King's special grace was the endowment given to the convent, who in gratitude constituted the King patron and co-founder.

1482. One part of a trepartite indenture by which the prior and convent of Llanthony juxta Gloucester bind themselves, in consideration of favours received, to perform pious offices for Cardinal Bourghier, his father, and Anne Countess of Stafford, his mother. The other two parts of the indenture were left in the hands of the Cardinal and the Prior of Llanthony.

C. 154, 1529. The foundation deed of Warham's chantry, which assigns, with the King's licence, lands in Chislest for the maintenance of one or perhaps two priests who shall say daily mass for the soul of the Abp. The prior and convent, the trustees, agree to pay annually, through New Coll. in Oxford, a sum of sixty shillings to three scholars of the college "vulgariter appellati Canterbury College."

On the founder's anniversary shall be said the mass which is usually said on the death of an Abp., and on the next day a mass of requiem, for which the prior, if present, shall receive 6*s*. 8*d*., and the sub-prior 3*s*. 4*d*. To every other official of the monastery is assigned a fee, large or small, in proportion to his dignity; the ringers are not forgotten, and even the candles are provided for. This MS. bears the autograph signature of the founder.

C. 147, 1339. Foundation deed of Buckingham's chantry in Ch. Ch. Cant. The executors of John Buckingham, Bishop of Lincoln, stating that the deceased had, to their knowledge, intended to found a chantry in his lifetime, assign lands, and make regulations for the maintenance of two priests, who shall for ever perform divine offices for the soul of the founder. The priests were to be housed in a building specially erected for them in the monastery of Ch. Ch.; they were to have new clothing once a year, and a suit of the same livery to wear when they walked into the town.

C. 146. Abp. Arundel's confirmation of the foundation.

C. 149, 1423. W. Daventre, alias W. Richee, was a priest in Buckingham's chantry, and he was informed that by an ambiguity in the deed of foundation he could claim, as one of his predecessors had done before him, a stipend of 20 pounds instead of one of 20 marks which was usually considered to be the value of his office. Disdaining to take advantage of the quibble he acquits the prior of any liability beyond the 20 marks.

C. 150, 1433. John Forest, Dean of Wells and formerly Canon of Lincoln, the only surviving executor of the will of Bishop Buckingham, uses the right reserved to the executors, and explains and supplements the foundation deed of the chantry.

The previous deed shows that the provisions of the founder's deed were not clear enough to banish litigation; and hence this amendment.

C. 148. Deed of foundation of a chantry of two priests in Arundel's oratory in the nave of Ch. Ch., and of one priest in the church of Maidstone, all three to be endowed from the goods of Abp. Arundel the founder, for whose soul, together with those of Abp. Courtenay, Prior Chillenden, W. Topolive, and Elizabeth his wife, the three priests were bound to say the usual masses, collects, and psalms; the priests were required by the deed to take part in all the solemn processions which were formed in the church, on which occasions they were to be dressed in the vestments provided at the founder's expense.

S. 413. Copy of a deed by which R. de Bourne, executor of Rob. Vintier, founds a chantry in the chapel of the nunnery of St. Sepulchre, Canterbury. The establishment is to consist of one priest, whose duty will be to perform a daily mass with mention of the name of Robert Vintier the testator. The executor gives as the reason why such an obscure position has been chosen for the chantry, that the nuns of the house were too poor to secure the regular services of a priest, and that by means of this chantry they would have daily service whilst the founder's soul would still enjoy the benefits arising from the masses.

S. 360, 1380. A notarial instrument providing for the singing of a daily mass, at the altar of the Holy Ghost in the church of the Cistercian Convent of Stratford, for the benefit of the soul of Thomas Hatfield, Bp. of Durham. This deed differs in two points from the ordinary foundation deeds of chantries; first, the penalties for omission of the daily duty are very severe, accumulating rapidly with the duration of the neglect; secondly, the causes by which the rites may be legitimately suspended are minutely stated, "Utpote per communem pestilenciam in provincia Cantuariensi, et precipue in locis vicinis dicte domui nostre, aut discrimina guerrarum, vel invasionem hostium, vel per subitam combustionem domus nostre supradicte, aut tantam aquarum inundacionem, ita notoriam et notabilem, quod per aliquod hujusmodi impedimentum seu infortuniam prenominata, quod absit, adeo bona dicte domus consumpta fuerint, ut ad necessaria omnia ordinaria, et sine quibus debita religio in dicta domo nostra non potuerit observari, sufficere non potuerint."

C. 144, deed 1321, inspeximus 1325. Inspeximus by Edw. II. of a deed by which Prior Henry endows a chantry of six priests in the almonry of Christ Church.

No new funds were provided for these priests, but certain "liberaciones," which hitherto had been otherwise bestowed, were diverted to them. Two "liberaciones Lanfranci" were to be given at once to two of the priests, and other four were to be assigned to them as they fell vacant. Each "liberacio" entitled the holder to "unum panem monachalem, et unam lagenam et dimidium cerevisie monachalis, vel unum denarium et obulum de Thesauraria nostra pro cerevisia, si contingat Conventum vinum bibere in communi;" beside which there was a payment of 20/ annually; but it is not clear whether this was an additional endowment for the chantry priest, or whether it was an integral part of the "liberacio." "Sacerdotes pares sint et socii in camera et in mensa, et nullus ipsorum super alium extollatur."

M. 221, 1369. Royal licence granted to the exor. of R. Vyneter of Maidstone, empowering him to establish a chantry for two priests at Maidstone, endowing it with lands, mills, &c. to the amount of 20l. a year.

N. 17, 1316. "Ordinacio cujusdam Cantarie quatuor Sacerdotum in Norwic. facta per Dm. Johannem ejusdem loci Episcopum A^o D^o MCCCXVI."

This is a deed of confirmation executed by the Prior of Ch. Ch., who was remotely concerned in the foundation. This instrument gives a good example of the method by which religious houses became rectors, a vicar undertaking the charge of the parish, a stipulated, small proportion of the profits of the church being assigned for his sustenance. This collection furnishes great numbers of instances of churches so appropriated.

A. 219, 1333. A notary's narrative of the resignation of the chantry priest who served the altar of St. Mary at Tarring, the inquisition consequent upon the vacancy of the benefice, and the acknowledgment of the patron's right to present.

E. 159, 1392. The Prior of Ch. Ch., as mesne lord, gives licence to the corporation of priests in Elys' chantry in St. Peter's Sandwich to accept, and to certain donors to give, real property to the chantry. The payment of five shillings and a halfpenny upon each vacancy, being the custom of the manor of Sandwich, is to be continued.

M. 340, 1427. A draft presentation to the vicarage of St. Michael Royal, in the city of London.

The patrons were the prior and convent of Ch. Ch., and the presentee was at the time filling the office of master of the college founded in the same church for Richard Whittington of happy memory.

At the foot is written a memorandum, "Et le roy, comande qe nul feire nie marchi soit tenus deinz seyntuaries pur lonour de seynt esglise."

C. 1304, 1483. Three parchments which relate to the resignation of one chaplain and the presentation of another to serve the altar in the chantry of Buckley, in the parish church of Charing.

M. 27, 1347. Licence in mortmain from Edw. III., empowering the Prior of Ch. Ch. to purchase lands of the annual value of 20l. for the endowment of the chantry of St. Thomas "juxta portam prioratus."

A. 15, 1361. The will of Abp. Islip, who bequeaths to the convent some rich vestments, valuable pieces of plate, and lastly a thousand ewes, the number of which is never to be diminished, but the offspring and the wool are to become the property of the prior and convent. He arranges for an annual inspection of the flock with a view to the maintenance of the health and number of the ewes. In return for the latter bequest he requires that after daily mass the following prayer shall be recited, "Deus qui inter apostolicos sacerdotes famulos tuos dominos Simonem et Johannem ac ceteros Archiepiscopos hujus ecclesie Pontificali et Archiepiscopali dignitate censeri fecisti, presta quod, ut quorum vicem ad horam gerebant in terris, eorum perpetuo consorcio letentur in celis."

Placebo and Dirige are also required to be sung upon certain stated occasions, a gratuity being assigned to the officiating priest.

W. 48a. Among the Chartæ Antiquæ is preserved the volume which contains the original agreement made between Henry VII. and the prior and convent of Canterbury, providing for the saying of perpetual masses for the founder and his kin.

The book, which, beside fly-leaves, contains 34 pages of parchment, is finely bound in boards of oak, covered with blue velvet, and fastened by two clasps of cast brass. Each corner of the lids is decorated with a brazen portcullis, and in the centre of each is a Tudor rose of the same material.

The volume measures 12 inches by 9, and the upper edge of the boards is cut into an undulating form to correspond with the "indenture" which they enclose.

The text is written in the centre of the pages, with a broad clear margin, this margin in the title-page being occupied by a band of coarse illumination, in which roses, grapes, and nondescript flowers are represented on a ground of reddish-yellow.

The central space of the large initial letter is parted per pale, argent and vert, and upon this field are depicted the royal arms supported by a dragon and a white greyhound, the portcullis again appearing among the decorations. Three thick, plaited silken strings connect the document with the seals of, 1st, the King, 2, the Mayor of London, 3, the Abbot and convent of St. Peter, Westminster, each of these being enclosed in a box of turned brass.

The substance of the agreement is as follows:—

"This indenture quatepartite made between the moost Cristen Kyng Henry the Seventh by the grace of God, &c., the twenty day of November, the twenty yere of his mooste noble reigne, on the oone partie; John Islipp, Abbott of the Monastery of Seynt Peter of Westminster, of the secunde partie; and Thomas, Prioure of the Metropolitan Church of Crist of Canterbury, and the convent of the same place, of the thirde partie; and the maire and commonalty of the cite of London of the fourth partie; witnesseth."

The deed goes on to say that the founder has settled upon the abbot an estate of the annual value of six pounds thirteen shillings and fourpence, the profits of which are to be paid to the Prior of Ch. Ch. in order to meet the expenses of the King's anniversary, which is to be observed in the church of Canterbury for ever.

The persons who are named for commemoration in the anniversary services are the King himself, "Elizabeth late Quene of Englonde his wife," "theire children and issue," "the right excelent prynce Edmonde late Erle of Rychemond fader to our seid souveraigne lord the King," and "after her decease, the right excellent prynces Margarete Countesse of Rychemond and Derby moder unto our . . . lord the King."

The remainder of the book is occupied by the details of the annual celebrations, including the formulæ of the various collects which were to be recited on behalf of the several persons above mentioned. In the case of the King and the Duchess of Richmond, who were living at the time of the execution of this deed, one form of collect, a petition for worldly prosperity, was to be used, the person commemorated still surviving; whilst another, being a prayer for the soul of the deceased, was substituted after the death of the person.

This covenant brings into strong contrast the two distinct-kinds of prayer which were offered for the living and for the dead.

Cloth Livery

C. 186, 1472. A contract made between the Prior of Ch. Ch. and a London alderman, by which the latter agrees to sell 16 pieces of livery cloth, described as "moustered villers," every cloth when wet to contain 24 yards in length and 7½ quarters in breadth. Two pieces are to be fit for gentlemen's livery, nine for yeomen's, and 5 for grooms'. All the cloth is to be clear of "rowe, stour, cokell, vagite, grete hole or any other defeate," and the price is to be 39l. 14s.

C. 347, 1475. A similar contract made with John Hamsmyth of New Salusbury, "Raymaker." In this case the gentlemen's cloth is to cost 35s. the piece, the yeomen's 32s. 8d., and the grooms' 30s.

Each piece is to contain 24 yards of assize, and the breadth is to be one yard within the "lysts." Every yard is to have "eight rayes syngly and no mo."

C. 241, 1480. A similar contract.

C. 244, 1499. Bill of John Marten of Hadley, who has sold 18 pieces of cloth of the three usual qualities, and of a "plaine blewe colour," and also several other "pieces" "de le Ray," called also "syngule ray" "clothes."

S. B. a. 91. A Cranbrook clothier contracts to supply russet cloths; gentlemen's at 3l., yeomen's at 4 marks; and grooms' at 7 nobles for each piece.

S. B. b. 6, S. B. c. 147, S. B. b. 125, S. B. c. 103, S. B. c. 147, are all contracts or bills relating to cloth of the prior's livery. In one case the colour chosen is "a sad tawney."

The chamberlain's accounts in the Scrap Books afford much information as to the quantities and prices of black Benedictine cloth, and all other articles of monastic apparel.

Charters, Royal.

These are to be found in the Chart. Antiq. in considerable numbers, and of all dates from the eighth century to the time of Elizabeth. Many of the earlier examples have been printed in the Codex Diplomaticus, and in the references given below each charter so copied is distinguished by Kemble's number in Roman numerals:—

A few of these charters are gifts of land, but nearly all of the later examples are grants of privileges, and exemptions from burthens, given by the several Kings to the monastery of Ch. Ch., one King after another confirming the charters of his predecessors. The charters of Henry II. stand apart from the others, being both more numerous and more varied in character, owing to the King's desire to allay the odium which attached to him in consequence of the murder of Archbishop Thomas.

C. 21. Appears to be the actual grant extorted from him by the importunity of Prior Benedict of Canterbury, assisted by an ominous vision. The story is told in the Winchester MS. of the miracles of St. Thomas, written by William of Canterbury. The charter which is there recited agrees word for word with the present MS., but with this variation, there the date is Wallingford, here Marleberge. (See vol. i. of Materials for the Hist. of Abp. Becket in Chron. and Mem. of Great Britain.)

The charters of Edward the Confessor and William I. are in English; those of their immediate successors, up to Henry II., are in Latin, with an English translation subjoined; and after Henry II. Latin alone is used.

The right of free warren, so greatly prized as a means of procuring sport and dainty food, was first granted by Henry III., and frequently confirmed by his successors.

Exemptions from the operation of the statute of mortmain, either general, or limited to estates of a certain annual value, exist here in large numbers, and may be found under the names of the various manors to which the exemptions apply. It is to be noticed that the Kings were jealous of the acquisition of real property by religious foundations long before the passing of Edward's great statute, and that we have examples of permissions to deal in land asked for by, and granted to, the convent, dated at the beginning of the 12th century. For example, A. 63 and A. 64 are two charters of Henry I. which give permission to the monks of Ch. Ch. to exchange some land with the monks of St. Augustine's.

The charter of Cnut (S. 261) is remarkable for the character of the gift. "Ego Cnut . . . basileus, "propriis manibus meis, capitis mei auream coronam "pono super altare Xpi. in Dorobernia ad opus ejusdem "ecclesie, quâ concedo eidem ecclesie, ad victum mona- "chorum, portum de Sandwico."

Discipline, Monastic and Ecclesiastical.

C. 163. A regulation of Abp. Theobald providing for the punishment of repenting deserters from the cloister. He allows that they may be again received, but he orders that they shall be placed in the lowest rank, there to remain for life, passed over by all the newly-admitted brethren, "ut degradationis sue intuitu erubescant, et humilientur." This MS. is fortified by the seals of the Abp. and of the Chapter.

P. 60, 1174-79. Alexander III. writes to Abp. Richard, "Cum sis monasticam religionem professus, "et religionis habitum geras, expedit tamen honestati "tue, viros honestos et idoneos, consimilis religionis, "circa te retinere. Inde est quod . . . mandamus "quatenus aliquem monachorum ecclesie tue idoneum "et honestum circa te teneas, eique sigillum tuum "portandum committas, quia si aliena persona idem "sigillum deferret, tibi, et ecclesie tue multa exinde "possint incommoda provenire."

S. B. c. 130, 12th cent. A small portion of the evidence in a suit, R. de Melksham v. H. fitz H. de Winton.

The witnesses testify that in the reign of Stephen one Theodbaud, a priest, veiled Eva the mother of Henry, and that Bp. Joscelyn gave her the benediction, after which the convent of Wilton sent and took her away, that she remained at Wilton for a year, but "nescio "quomodo illa abstracta fuit."

S. B. a. 14, 13th cent. A scrap of parchment sent from the archdeacon to his Sompnour.

"Citentur infrascripti ad diem Mercurii proximum "post festum Sti. Petri."

After this title there follow a number of names of Canterbury residents, male and female, in several instances bracketted in couples. After each name is written the offence for which the archdeacon intends to proceed against the culprit. Most of the offenders are to be cited for immorality, but in a few cases executors are called upon to answer charges connected with their office.

S. B. b. 31, 13th cent. An archdeacon's memoranda of offences, and deficiencies in the churches of Herne, St. Nicholas, and All Saints. Books are deficient, chancels out of repair, executors are remiss, and Agnes Curteys is a standing temptation to sin. One parishioner has been allowed to die intestate.

C. 1,295. Prior Henry of Eastray warns all good people to give no credit to R. de Baners, a monk who for the third time has forsaken the cloister.

DEAN AND CHAPTER
BURY.

• M. 368, circ. 1300. A monastic prosecutor's bill of indictment against H. de Cretinge and R. Blundell, monks of Ch. Ch., who appear to have been much employed at the outlying manors of the monastery, there acquiring what their prosecutor calls "secular" manners.

The language is so hyperbolic that it is not improbable that the shocking depravity laid to the charge of the delinquents is as much overstated as the style is inflated. The first paragraph will serve as a specimen:—"Si ista dies ita longa esset sicut dies erit magni iudicii, non posset gesta istorum duorum fratrum, scilicet H. et R., secundum majus et minus in qualitate et quantitate, recipere delictorum . . . loca sequencia, si possent oris et lingue uti beneficio, clamarent et dicent, Heu! iste venit a seculo ut pejora faceret in claustris," &c.

C. 1294, C. 1296. S. B. c. 146. These MSS. contain as much as is known about a bitter quarrel which arose about the year 1320, between Henry [of Eastry] the prior and benefactor of Ch. Ch. and a faction of the monks of his own chapter.

S. B. c. 146. Appears to be the earliest of these records. It contains copies of several letters written by two of the malcontents, R. de Thaneto "in curia Romana degens," and R. de Alendon, who remained in his convent at Canterbury. The MS. occupies a parchment about 24 inches by 12, which is so injured by damp that only a small part is legible.

These letters seem to have been collected in their present shape to be used in the interest of the prior as evidence against the writers.

The Roman correspondent writes to Alindone "fratri suo adoptivo in Xpo. dilectissimo." He appears to be badly in want of evidence to support his accusation against the prior, and he continually begs his friend to send him all the proofs he can collect, "et omnes articulos que (sic) nostis contra priorem, tam de visitacione quam post, . . . seu per ipsum commissos, seu per complices suos."

He hints that he is backed by a cardinal, whom he describes as "Dominus meus," and also "per quosdam alios Cardinales." Some idea may be formed of the offences which he objected against his prior from the fragments of a schedule of grievances which is written on the back of the document.

"M^d quod prior sine conventus consensu . . . fraudulenter . . . &c.

"It^m W. de Ledeburi et J. de Winchel . . . complicitibus dixit . . . &c.

"It^m M^d quod frater Alanus de Cruce furavit . . . &c.

"It^m Idem Alanus furavit de R. de . . . cereis in nocte quando R. Archiep. . . . &c.

The writer incidentally mentions that the Pope (John XXII.), who "minus facit pro Cardinalibus et per ipsos," had prepared many measures against ecclesiastical persons, and especially against monks, and that he only awaited the arrival of Robert of Sicily to put these measures in force, intending to proceed, backed by Robert's troops, "manu armata."

C. 1294a. Is the prior's copy of the articuli which R. de Alindon objected against him. In what is supposed to be the prior's own writing is an endorsement, "Articuli famosi quos R. de Alindon scripsit dno W. et R. de Thaneto."

C. 1294a. A letter, dated 18th Feb., from Abp. Walter Raynold to the prior, referring to some monks whom he had sentenced to sequestration from their fellows, apparently in consequence of their complicity in the rebellion of Alendon and Thanet. The writer says that he shall soon come to Canterbury to complete the visitation which he has left unfinished. He enjoins upon the prior still to keep sequestered those monks upon whom he had imposed that penalty in the chapter-house during his visitation, but he wishes them to be supplied with "congrua necessaria" like the other brethren. "Verumtamen octo fratres quibus erat indictum jejuniū panis et aque sextis feriis, sicut ad rogatum vestrum eis concessimus, pane et vino, seu cerevisia et potagio, illis diebus refici toleramus. Ad fratrem J. de Maldon, ratione status quem optinuit in ecclesia nostra, respectum habentes, volumus quod in persona sua, quatenus potueritis salva religionis honestate, temperetis rigorem, ita quod septa monasterii non exeat quousque duxerimus ordinandum."

C. 1294c. A letter from Abp. Walter to the prior. It explains that the King has written to the Abp., requiring him to compel the prior to release some of his monks (amongst whose names that of R. de Alendon appears) whom he had committed "carcerali custodie."

The Abp. plainly states that he writes this order unwillingly, being irresistibly urged by the King, who in his turn is also an unwilling agent, being compelled to interfere by the pressure put upon him by certain intercessors, whom he describes as "quidam Burgenses de Sandwyco, et alii quidam milites et scutiferi de dicto domino Rege speciales." This letter is endorsed by the prior, "Istam litteram recepimus primo die Junii per manus Gilberti (appreciatoris de Westmonasterio, vespere decantatis, pro deliberatione J. de Valoyns, Th. de Sandwyco, et R. de Alendon a custodia carcerali, in presencia fratrum Thome Stoyl, Dyonisii, et Willelmi de Estrya monachorum."

In one of R. de Thanet's letters this Thomas Stoyl is said to be "radix multorum malorum."

C. 1296, circ. 1275. The record of an earlier mutiny of the monks of Ch. Ch.

This MS. contains the several accusations which R. Pikenot and W. de Tong, the representatives of the discontented monks, intend to charge against their prior, Thomas Ringmer.

They assert that he is guilty of perjury, theft, sacrilege, falsehood, dilapidation, and transgressions of the canons and monastic rule; that, although often excommunicated, he intrudes himself into the services of the church; that he has oppressed and imprisoned thirteen monks who appealed to Rome against him; that he has appropriated the goods of the church to the value of a thousand marks; and that he has given away 520 large oaks, fifty-six pounds twelve shillings in money, and jewels to the value of more than 46 pounds.

Further they say that he has encumbered the church with a debt of 4,000 marks, and applied the money "in proprios non usus sed abusus." Assisted by a layman he has violated the shrine of St. Thomas, carrying off gold and precious stones of great value.

This prior, disgusted with the flock over whom he was called to rule, left his convent, and laying aside the Benedictine habit assumed the white robe of the Cistercians, the symbol of a stricter discipline. It was after his resignation that the King sequestered the goods of the convent (see "Ch. Ch. sequestrated").

S. B. c. 8a. Robert and Alexander Poucyn, Prior Ryngmer's proctors, appoint Philip de Pomonte to be their substitute, for promoting the suit of the prior at Rome.

S. B. b. 205. Prior Ringmer sends twenty shillings and a "monile aureum" as a refresher to Philip de Pomonte, his proctor at the Roman Curia.

P. 21. "Capitulum celebratum in Ecclesia Omnium Sanctorum in Palenta [the Pallant] de Cicestria, die Jovis proximo post festum conversionis Sci. Pauli, A.D. MCCCXXXIII., per Johannem Piclericum, commissarium in decanatu de Pagham, sede Cantuar. vacante, specialiter deputatum."

Twenty-eight delinquents were summoned to appear before this chapter, of whom twenty-four were charged with immorality; two persons were accused of breach of a promise to pay money to a rector and a vicar; the remaining two cases were connected with the probate of wills.

C. 1,301, 1388. The Prior of Ely gives to Bro. Peter permission to change his convent. Peter wishes to leave Ely, "cujus situm, propter aeris intemperiem, pretendit sue complexioni hactenus fuisse, et adhuc esse, valde contrarium et nocivum," and he thinks he shall do better at Canterbury "prout per aliquantulum moram, quam illic nuper traxerat, asserit se fuisse personaliter expertum."

S. B. b. 193. A scrap of paper upon which some monastic censor has made notes of the delinquencies of his fellow monks:—

"Dns. T. Goldstone sepius est in curia, absque licencia, et raro vel nunquam in completoriis, in claustris, et quando est allocutus designat presidentes suos."

"Dns. Jacobus Harteye pejus servat claustrum, sed melius completoria. Pater reverende, scrutatores vestri nichil faciunt in officiis suis, scrutando observancias ecclesie; intantum quod dns. N. Harste dixit puppice, coram Magistro Priore, in loco quo erat proclamatus, hec verba 'Ego faciam clamores,' et dixit Magister Prior 'Quare,' et respondit, 'Quia est officium opprobrii,' et sic raro, vel nunquam, facit clamores, sed bene servat horas suas," &c.

S. B. a. 60. A small scrap of writing sent by an appetitor to the archdeacon:—

"Quia diversi generosi de mea . . . sde fornicatione vicio corrigendi . . . requiro quod instruere me velitis apparitorem vestrum ad citandum ipsos viciosos," &c.

CHAPTER OF CANTERBURY.

S. B. a. 132. A fragment of the prior's private notebook:—

"Fratres jurant ultra modum, ut dicitur.

"Tres in infirmaria habent pueros (qy.) in cameris suis, ut dicitur.

"It. Juvenes fratres habent vestimenta inordinata."

S. B. a. 125. A sheet of paper folded to make sixteen narrow pages.

Upon this are written the names of those monks of Ch. Ch. who were on the rota for duty on certain Sundays and festivals. The same names occur among those of the monks dispersed at the Dissolution.

Matters connected with excommunications and ecclesiastical censures can be found by the references A. 3, A. 6, S. 414, S. 417, S. 419, S. B. a. 9, 10, 15, 28, 64, 157.

Disputes, Archbishops' and Priors'.

C. 1,292. At a time when the monks of Ch. Ch. were proceeding against their Abp. Theobald in the court of Rome, some malicious persons spread a report that they had personally ill-treated their opponent, who on his part generously contradicts the calumny. Addressing the prior and convent, he writes, "Monachi Cant. ecclesie, specialiter nobis a deo commisse, appellationem quandam quasi contra nos aliquando fecisse dicuntur, cujus appellationis occasione, rei geste sinistri interpretes, aut ob odium monachorum, vel potius ob nostri favorem, tanquam per mendacia nostram captantes gratiam, publice eos infamare conati sunt, asserentes illos in nostram necem conspirasse, manus in nos injecisse, et alia in hunc modum plura egisse. Quorum maledicorum assertiones, utpote quibus nullum inest veritatis vestigium, nos zelo Dei repellentes, prefati conventus monachos, non solum a predictis, verumtamen ab omni infamie nota, immunes esse erga nos veritatis verbo attestamus, quemadmodum et erga omnes prelatos suos semper fuisse dinoscuntur," &c. The archbishop solemnly anathematizes anyone who after this disclaimer shall spread the idle tale.

C. 1,284. A notice from Urban III. to Abp. Baldwin. He requires that the Archbishop shall not, pendente lite, molest the convent of Ch. Ch., who have sent their prior and three monks to Rome to seek the Pope's protection against the Archbishop. This MS. passed under the eye of Gervase, and was copied by him. (Script. X., Col. 1,319).

A. 26. John of Anagni bears witness that he first heard of, and then saw, the coercion which the monks suffered at the time when they made their compact with Abp. Baldwin, and therefore "auctoritate quam fungimur statuimus Apostolica, quod neque concordia sic facta, neque compromissio violenter extorta, neque scriptum sic conceptum, valere debeat, aut aliquid . . . monachis in posterum prejudicium afferre." (Gervase of Canterbury, Col. 1,324, Scriptores X.)

H. 103, 1184-92. In the quarrel between Abp. Baldwin and the convent, arising from the foundation of a college of canons at Hackington, the Bishop of Bath and his fellows forbid, by the Pope's authority, the celebration of divine offices in the chapel, and they give notice that on a day they shall cause the chapel to be destroyed.

H. 102. The same commissioners declare the erection of a chapel at Hackington to be illegal and "funditus destruendam judicavimus . . . nos in executione sui mandati procedere precipit, predictum locum maledictum, et prophanum, apostolica condempnaverat auctoritas, et suspensos . . . illos qui . . . in capella illa divina celebrare presumpserint decreverat."

L. 138, 1200. In the dispute between Abp. Hubert and the convent concerning Lambeth College, Bishop Hugh of Lincoln and his fellows, Eustace of Ely and Abbot Sampson of Bury, announce to the convent that that are delegated by the Pope to arbitrate in the quarrel; they therefore cite the Prior and Convent to appear by a properly authorised proctor on the morrow of St. Michael.

L. 175. Another notice in all respects similar to the last.

L. 135. A second and more peremptory summons, the first having been disregarded.

L. 136, 1200. Memorandum declaring the consent of the Archbishop, and of the prior and convent of Christ Church, to accept the award, whatever it may be, of the arbitrators appointed by the Pope.

L. 130, 1200. The award of the arbitrators, corroborated by their seals, and further authenticated by the seals of thirteen other dignitaries. The terms of the arbitration have often been printed, and it is not necessary to say more than that the Archbishop is allowed to build a church, but not on the old foundations of that destroyed by Papal authority; that he is permitted to institute from 12 to 20 Premonstratensian canons, who are to be supported by an income derived from the Archbishop's churches or private possessions.

L. 129, A. 5, L. 131, and L. 132 are all repetitions of the above-mentioned award.

L. 133. Abp. Hubert, in presenting the award to the Pope, makes light of the fears of the convent "timentes, ut reor, ubi non erat timor." He declares that he believes both parties in the dispute were actuated by a desire to do what was right, "studiis quidem ducebamus dissimilibus et diversis, sed zelo non dissimili."

L. 134, 1200. Letters sent by the arbitrators to the Pope, asking for a confirmation of their award, a copy of which accompanied this letter.

L. 137. A transcript of the Lambeth award, with the confirmation by Innocent III. This is endorsed, "Scriptum est in tercio quaterno quarti libri registorum Dni. Innocencii Pape III."

A. 168. The process of the prior and convent of Canterbury against Abp. Edmund. This report to the Pope (Gregory IX.) is sent by three abbots whom he appointed to arbitrate between the parties. The Pope's commission is first recited, and in it is contained a statement of the oppressions which the convent assert they have endured at the Abp.'s hands. The arbitrators are required to conclude a peace if it be in any way possible, but if they cannot succeed the case is to be remitted to Rome. The parties were cited to appear on a certain day, but the defendant disregarded the summons and another day was fixed, but before that day prohibitory letters came from the King, asserting that the cause was one which might well be heard in a secular court. On the day of the hearing the defendant pleaded the King's letters, and the arbitrators took time for considering the point; ultimately the monks, fearing the King, withdrew from the prosecution. The Pope nevertheless ordered the judges to proceed, and again the King forbade them, but this time he showed characteristic signs of yielding, and requested that they would, at all events, wait until the Legate, who was "in januis," should arrive. When Otho the Legate did come, in June 1237, he entirely disregarded the King's prohibition, and appointed a day for the Abp. to appear at Rome.

C. 34, 1237. A composition made between Abp. Edmund and the convent of Ch. Ch. The document gives the details of the causes of complaint which the convent alleged against the Abp., and among other matters they accuse him of detaining a sum of twenty-two thousand marks which was assigned to them as damages, by Abp. Stephen, at the time of the removal of the general interdict. The remainder of the deed sets forth the conditions of the composition, which was executed in the form of a bipartite indenture, the present MS. being the prior's half.

C. 36, 1238. Abp. Edmund, acknowledging that neither he nor his successors can claim any right to seize the temporalities of the priory of Ch. Ch. when the office of prior is vacant, promises that he will not attempt to do so.

C. 205, 1247. "Placita de Juratis et assisa apud Cant. in octabis Sci. Johannis Bapt. coram H. de Batonia et sociis suis, justiciariis itinerantibus, Anno Regni Regis H. fil. Regis Johis. xxxii."

Several rolls of parchment containing the writs, precedents, and arguments ex parte the Prior of Canterbury, who was plaintiff, Archbishop Boniface being defendant. The plaintiff's precedents go back to the time of the Conquest, and his arguments to a more remote date; thus—"A prima fundacione ecclesie Xpi. Cant. dotata fuit ecclesia possessionibus suis cum omnimodis libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus quibus communiter utebantur Archiepiscopi et Monachi per tempora longissima, dividentes singulis annis, per eorum ministros, fructus de possessionibus . . . provenientes, ad sustentacionem Archiepiscopi et Monachorum. Et cum tediosum videretur quolibet anno tales facere divisiones, tandem, de consensu cujusdam Archiepiscopi et monachorum, . . . divise fuerunt possessiones, ne in posterum inter eos oriri videretur contencio," &c. Among the precedents are cases in which Archbishop hanged delinquents on his own gallows. A writ addressed to the Sheriff of Kent reads:—"H. dei gra., &c. Vicecomiti Kancie, &c., precipimus tibi, sicut alias precepimus, quod distringas Bonifacium Archiepiscopum Cant. per terras et catalla sua," &c.

C. 39 and A. 7, 1258. Composition made between Abp. Boniface and the convent. These are two copies of the same deed, each occupying a whole skin of parchment. The composition takes the form of a bipartite indenture, one part of which, with a duplicate, remained in the hands of the Prior of Ch. Ch.

C. 38, 1258. Abp. Boniface informs his bailiffs and agents that he has made a composition with the convent, and that, therefore, they are to allow the tenants and servants of the priory to enjoy their rights without farther molestation, "juribus integre et plenarie uti permittatis absque ullo impedimento."

A. 31. Not earlier than 1290. "Damna illata Priori per Ballivos Archiepiscopi."

The composition made with the Abp., and the instructions which he sent to his bailiffs, did not put an end to the oppressions of which the convent complained, and hence this long roll, which sets forth—

1. The composition.

2. A notice to the bailiffs that in defiance of right they have levied amerancements which belonged to the priory, and given them to the Abp.

3. Two schedules, enumerating the particulars of the excesses of which the prior and convent complain.

E. 176, 1365. A large finely written deed, by which Archbishop Simon Islip restores to the priory of Ch. Ch. the churches of Eastry and Monkton, which his predecessors Baldwin and Hubert had taken as a part of the Archbishop's share of the property belonging to the church of Canterbury. The initial letter and head-line of this MS. are embellished by a pen-and-ink drawing representing a Rustic on foot blowing a horn whilst following a half-bred greyhound, who pursues a hare, the Rustic carrying a leveret suspended from a pole over his shoulder.

Dissolution of Monasteries.

Only a few notices of the great reform are to be found in the Chart. Ant., but those which relate to this subject are enumerated below.

O. 125, O. 126, 1519. Two deeds by which in one case the master and brothers of the Maison Dieu of Ospringe, and in the other the prior and convent of Christ Church, the over-lords, convey their respective interests in the Maison Dieu to the College of St. John the Evangelist in the University of Cambridge.

These documents are not strictly connected with the great Dissolution, but they point to a failure in religious zeal, which first allowed these small foundations to die out, and afterwards permitted the larger houses to be forcibly suppressed almost without opposition.

C. 161, 5 April 1540. A valuation of all the manors and possessions of the former monastery of Christ Church, assigned at the Dissolution, 5th April 1540, to the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, except certain lands acquired by Sir Christopher Hales.

C. 189. "The King's patent for paying pensions to the expelled monks of the late priory of Christ Church, Canterbury." This paper refers to three only of those who received pensions, the Prior Goldwell, J. Elphe, and Nicholas Clement; the others, forty-seven in number, to whom either pensions or offices in the new foundation were assigned, must have been provided for in another similar deed.

S. B. b. 140. Is an undated, carelessly written inventory of a large quantity of articles of plate. The character is that of the middle of the 16th century, and the plate, although there is no title to declare it, evidently belonged to Christ Church.

The various items are catalogued in terms which show that the writer was a stranger who had no previous knowledge of the several articles. He does not write, as a monastic officer would have done, "Three cups of Simon Islip," or "A covered cup, with a foot, of John Morton;" but "ix potts grete and small, in silver dishes v dos. and xi dishes mcccxviii unc."

There are two exceptions to this ignorance of the names of the pieces of plate; one cup is called "the Langton pott," and a piece, possibly a dish decorated with engraved figures, is designated "the ix wordeys," (the nine worthies.) That the stranger was also an appraiser is shown by the fact that every piece of plate has its weight set down, and at the end, after a statement of the total weights of "white plate" and "gilt plate," a memorandum values the former at 3s. per ounce, and the latter at 3s. 8d.

The summa totalis of the weights is written, "Sm. m. iiii lb. i unc." (4,000 pounds and one ounce of silver).

S. B. b. 139. Is a similar list, in an earlier handwriting, entitled "Jocalia in officio celerarii;" but even in this document the writer gives names to only one or two of the articles, as "Cyphus de murra ex dono W.

"Hankyn vicarii de Bleen," and "6 olle S. Islep." The weights of the several pieces are here given, but no prices are annexed. It is remarkable that here as in the previous catalogue the silver dishes amount to five dozen and some odd dishes.

It is probable that the first of these inventories is the draft made by the appraiser at the time when the monastery passed from the hands of the prior into the keeping of the King.

C. 190, 1557. A grant from Philip and Mary to Cardinal Pole of that house and premises in the Mint yard of the late priory of Ch. Ch., which was formerly held by the almoner of the monastery.

The initial letter of this large deed occupies one sixth of the whole area of the parchment; it is executed with the pen without colours, and contains full length portraits of the King and Queen, wearing their regalia, and sitting under a cloth of estate.

The seal, in brown wax, is 6 inches in diameter. It represents on one side the royal pair sitting in state; on the other they are seen riding about in a field, wearing the every-day dress of the period. In this reverse of the seal the artist has attempted to produce a picturesque effect by the employment of artifices in perspective and foreshortening, the statuesque stiffness usually found in seals being discarded.

D. 106, 1553. Lease from the King, advised by the Court of Augmentations, of certain lands lately belonging to the dissolved religious house known as the Domus Dei in Dover.

N. 16. "Valor annualis possessionum, &c., nuper Priori et Conventui Sce. Trinitatis Norwicensis pertinentium." A parchment document accompanied by many sheets of returns written upon paper. Temp. Edw. VI.

R. 68, 1604. Copy of the deed of re-endowment by James I. of the collegiate church of Ripon, which has since become the cathedral church of the diocese. The annual sum assigned to the new cathedral is 347*l.*, an amount larger by a hundred pounds than the endowment as reported by Collier (Eccl. Hist.).

Domestic Economy.

C. 1293, 13th cent. Nineteen rules, being the surviving part of a set of twenty-seven, compiled for the regulation of an archbishop's household. These rules of "Hosebondrie" relate both to domestic and to rural economy. One specimen of each kind is here given:—

"¶ La vinte-deusime reule vous aprent de defendre les diners, e les sopers, hors de sale.

"Defendez les diners, e les sopers, hors de sale, en muscetes, e en chambres; kar de ceo surt mut de wast, e nul honur a seinur ne a dame.

"¶ La vintequartime reule vous aprent les deus reules de vendre, e de batre nostre ble.

"Tenez deus reules endreit de vente, e de batre de ble, ke ia ne soit ble vendu ke la forre ne vous remaigne a estrainer vos faudes de berbiz le jur, e a compost dedenz la curt, e fees certien ke le estrein iassi retenu vous vaudera tuz jurs la meite del ble vendu. De autre part ne suffree, en nule manere, ke lem bate aveine, en nul liu, devant noel, ne a (pro)vendre, ne a vente, einz soit tut a achat si vus poez; e apres le noel, kaunt lem commence a semer aveine, fetes batre vostre aveine, e tel forre, batu si freschement, cuntrevaudra, si un poi soit medle de fein, trestut fein, e durra greinure force a vos bests, e vigur a travailler. E bien poez entendre, ke si vous volez aveine vendre, dunc la porrez vous mieus vendre e plus rendra kaunt, a force covent, ke chescun la eit a semer."

Minute directions are given for calculating the length of time during which the Abp.'s household can be entertained at the different manors without impoverishing them. Before the programme is settled for the season, the writer directs that attention be paid to the quantity of fish, flesh, and grain which may be looked for at each manor, allowance being made for the kind of weather which has prevailed during the preceding months.

The last rule reads, "Je lo ke a deus seuns del au facez vos grons achaz; ceo est vos vins, e vostre cire, e vostre garderobe, a la feste de Saint Botulf [June 17] ceo ke vous dependerez en Lindeseie, e Norfolk, e en le val de Beauvere, e en cel pais de Kaversham, e en cel de Suthamtone de Wincestre, e Sumarsete; a Bristowe vos robes akatez a Saint Jue [probably SS. Simon and Jude, Oct. 28.]"

C. 184, 1340. The prior borrows 120*l.* from Master Bernard Sistre, Archdeacon of Canterbury, giving this promissory note as security.

C. 165, 1221. A parchment containing an account of sundry payments which did not fall within the department of either of the monastic officers. It might be entitled "Miscellaneous Expenses for the Year 1221." Some of the items are available as evidence of customs, &c., for example:—

"Pro xvi doliis vini emptis ante Natale per manum Willi. Wenton monachi, cum vectura, xxii. lib. xv sol.

"In vino in refectorio nostro die computacionis nostre xvi sol.

"Pro lignis trahendis ad Opus Honorii, ad ignem suum, monachi apud Stm. Jacobum.

"Mattheo Gesehalle, Cirurgico, pro infirmitate prioris xiii sol. iiiid.

"Elemosinario pro Anniversario regis Ricardi anno preterito, xx sol.

"Pro sotularibus Willelmi Clerici, et Andree, nepotum Sci. Thome, reparandis contra Natalem." Many other items in this account which refer to the "kinsmen of St. Thomas" are noticed under that title.

"Portitori brevium pro Osberto monacho defuncto viiid.

"Alexandro Minutori pro fratribus minuendis iiiii sol. de iiiii terminis.

"Pro quadam domicula paranda ad opus Simonis Aurifabri ad faciendum novum sigillum, iiiii sol. id.

"Hugoni de Gerunde ii sol. ad amovendam Campanam Sci. Thome, et alibi suspendendam.

"In libris nostris emendandis.

"Pro habito monachico filii H. de Cobeham et Willi. consanguinei Sci. Thome, lv sol.

"Portitori rotuli pro Willo. priore, xi sol. iiiid.

"Pro eodem rotulo faciundo, ii sol. xd.

"Priori eunti Oxoniam ad concilium ad expensam suam, vii lib. xviii sol. iiiid.

"Pro speciebus in die Sci. Dunstani ad cenam, xiii sol. vid.

"Magistro Willo. Curteis, in translatione Sci. Thome ad pannos emendandos, xl sol.

"Pro parcameto, xv sol.

"Pro duobus equis ad stabulum prioris emptis de Widone monacho, ii marc.

"It. Pro speciebus et medicinis ad opus infirmorum per manum Roberti speciarum, x lib. xi sol. ob.

"Pro metallo empto ad novum sigillum, v sol."

C. 245. "Expensas factas circa constructionem Campanilis Angelici."

The central tower of Canterbury Cathedral, named, from an image which formerly surmounted it, the "Angel Steeple," was rebuilt at the end of the 15th century. This MS. records the amount of the outlay during nearly three years, extending from Easter 1494 to Michaelmas 1496. 1,650 quarters of lime were consumed, each quarter costing 8d.; 1,132 tons of Caen stone, purchased for 530l. 8s. 10½d.; and 480,000 bricks were used, costing 3s. 4d. the thousand. The total expense for the whole period amounted to 1,035l. 16s. 3½d., in addition to which the monastery provided out of its stores, lead, nails, ashlar, and ironwork, besides furnishing carts for sand and other materials "que vehebantur caretis monasterii."

S. B. c. 112. Early 15th cent. Thomas Herne, the chamberlain of Ch. Ch., lays down precise rules to be observed by his successors in the office of chamberlain.

There is scarcely a page in the three volumes of "Scrap Books" but contains some bill for work done and materials furnished, or some memorandum of money paid out by a monastic officer.

The manciple buys a pair of soles at one place and a barrel of salmon at another; the agent goes from fair to fair in the autumn, and purchases sheep and oxen wholesale, to salt down at Martinmas for winter store.

The lawyer's bill of costs, the bill of Master Benet, the apothecary, the horse-doctor's bill, are here, with builders' bills in very large numbers.

A very quaint series of small payments is to be found in the cook's memoranda of petty sums laid out in sundries. One week of these memoranda begins, "Die Dominica, Fellyngs 2d., Blak podyngs 2d. Item in cena, Trypys 2d. Summa 3d." It will be noticed that here, and the same may be said of almost all cases where there is any calculation, the total is wrongly added. The Roman numerals did not lend themselves freely to the purposes of mediæval arithmeticians.

More important and more formal than the above-mentioned bills are the statements of account prepared by the office-bearers of the monastery for the annual audit. The specimens of complete returns which are preserved belong to the departments of,—

1. The chamberlain, who superintended the clothing and lodging of the brethren.

2. The sacristan, whose duties, summed up in the words "sonitus et hornatus," consisted in announcing the services of the church and providing for their proper celebration.

3. The berthonarius, who had charge of the receipts and issues of grain after it had come to the granaries at Ch. Ch.

The returns made by the treasurers, the custos materiorum and the almoner are numerous, but less complete than those last-mentioned.

The serjeants and bailiffs at the manors and farms of the priory also sent their accounts of receipts and payments, together with an inventory of the live and dead stock which still remained on hand. Examples of this kind of account exist by hundreds, and range from the end of the 13th to the 16th centuries.

X. 17. A condensed statement, for one year, of the reports of the several officers of the monastery, written, in double column, upon one long narrow membrane. At the head is placed the "Assisa saccarii," or market values for the current year of several agricultural products. Probably rents were accepted either in money or in the shape of produce, this table serving to show the relative quantities of either which the tenants were bound to pay:—

"Assisa saccarii -	Frumentum	-	xid.
	Ordeum	-	xxviid.
	Avena	-	xl.
	Prebenda	-	xxx.
	Pise	-	iii sol.
	Pensa casei	-	x sol.
	Stoppa mellis	-	xviid.

Dover, St. Martin's.

The MSS. from D. 38 to D. 102 relate to an eighty-years-long dispute, in which the convent of Ch. Ch. was engaged with the priory of St. Martin, Dover.

The house at Dover was founded by Abp. Theobald as a cell of the convent of Canterbury. He provided that the Prior of Dover should always be a Canterbury monk, and that novices of the Dover convent should make their profession in the church of Canterbury.

It is clear, from the wording of the foundation deed, that the Abp. intended that the subjection of Dover should be due to the Church of Canterbury, and its head the Abp., and not to the Convent of Canterbury, with its head the Prior, "justum enim est ut qui Cantuar. ecclesie rector et dispositor est, plenam disponendi in omnibus auctoritatem in Doverensi ecclesia . . . obtineat."

The Prior of Canterbury, backed by a Bull of Honorius III. (1271), claimed from the Dover monastery the submission which even the Dover monks owned was due to the Church of Canterbury. At first the men of St. Martin's were disposed to be obedient, but after a time, being tired of dependence, they appealed against the claims of Ch. Ch. The dispute continued until the year 1350, when, owing to the good offices of Abp. Islip, a composition was entered into by the parties, Canterbury withdrawing all claims to supremacy, and Dover agreeing to pay an annual tribute of five pounds.

Dover Castle.

D. 103, 1227. Fragments of a charter of Hen. III., exempting the county of Kent from all liability to furnish "furragium" to the garrison of Dover Castle.

A. 32, 1261. Abp. Boniface, hearing that certain knights and esquires belonging to Dover Castle have assaulted some tenants of Ch. Ch., despoiling them of their goods, directs the official of the archdeacon to proceed against the delinquents by ecclesiastical censures.

E. 171 and E. 173. Stephen de Pencestre, Constable of Dover Castle, the commander of the garrison at the time of the excesses complained of by Abp. Boniface, restores the horses, waggons, and fodder, which were the goods whose loss had roused the Abp.

Dover Maison Dieu.

D. 104, 1277. A copy made at Rome of a Bull of Nicholas III., by which new privileges are granted, and established ones confirmed, to the Domus Dei of Dover. The instrument names in detail all the privileges, and the sources of the income which the house is to enjoy, and provides that the rule of canons regular of St. Augustine shall be observed in the convent, which is to be immediately under Papal protection.

Eastry.

The manor of Eastry with a share of the tithes belonged to the almonry of Ch. Ch. The convent and the rector of Eastry, not being able to agree upon any equitable division of the tithes, appealed to the law. Many of the MSS. in this group are contributed by the suits which ensued.

E. 167. Abp. Theobald grants the tithes of Eastry to the almonry.

E. 168 to E. 170. Papers in the suit "Anselm Rector of Eastry versus Prior of Ch. Ch."

E. 171 and E. 173. Amends made to Ch. Ch. by the constable of Dover Castle for trespasses committed in the manor of Eastry. The first of these deeds is curiously dated,—"anno post mortem Simonis de Appulia Exoniensis Episcopi primo." (This bishop died in 1223.)

E. 175, 1365. The convent and the rector of Eastry agree about their respective shares of a part of the tithes of Eastry.

E. 176, 1365. Abp. Islip by his deputy, whom he constitutes "ad hoc organum vocis nostri," restores to the almonry the church of Eastry, which Abp. Hubert had appropriated to his own use. In this deed the convent is said to have been so reduced by this and other spoliation that "ferè deficerent, non habentes quod manducarent, seu unde alia eis incumbencia supportarent."

E. 177, 1366. The King's licence allowing Ch. Ch. to hold the church of Eastry.

E. 178, 1365. The Prior of Ch. Ch. quotes E. 176, and writes that, "lest gratuitously yielding so much should seem derogatory to the dignity of the Abp.," he gives in exchange for the church of Eastry, the patronage of the churches of St. Dunstan and of All Hallows, Bread Street in the city of London, the King's licence being obtained.

E. 179. Abp. Langham confirms the restoration of Eastry to the convent, and provides for the payment of a competent stipend to the vicar.

E. 186, 1200. A document belonging to the early part of the contention between the archbishops and the convent arising from the appropriation of the church of Eastry.

This parchment is signed in autograph by Abp. Hubert and Galfridus Prior of Ch. Ch.

E. 174, 1348. "Terra inventa, et mensurata sub periculo maris in hundredo de Eastry et Cornilo."

This roll, 7 feet long by 7 inches wide, gives a great many examples of the ancient names of fields, and also of tenants in possession at the time.

E. 184, 1445. A rentale of the manor of Eastry.

E. 184a. "Rotulus de redditibus et consuetudinibus manerii de Estreya, de novo compositus sed ab antiquo rotulo abstractus."

The land is divided into "sullings," and the rents are payable either in money or produce, at the option of the tenant.

E. 188. A long survey of the acreage of the manor, with the names of some tenants. On the back is a memorandum of prices of produce and labour.

Faversham.

F. 89. Copy (late 16th cent.) of the foundation deed of Faversham Abbey, as perused and confirmed by Edw. IV. The charters recited in this inspeximus were granted by Edw. III., Stephen (2 charters), John (2 charters), Hen. III., Matilda Stephen's Queen, and W. Earl Bolon., and Warrenne.

F. 83. Copies (late 13th cent.) of charters granted to Faversham Abbey by several Kings, from Stephen to Edw. I.

In dorso. 1. Copy of inspeximus (1338) of charters of Stephen and Henry III.

2. Copy of two charters of protection, Hen. III.

3. Mem. of the acquittal of John Smat of North Darenth, charged with assault and riot.

4. The process against about 40 Kentish men who, headed by "Joh. Perys factor rotarum," were attached by the sheriff in 1362 "ad respondendos Regi de diversis transgressionibus."

F. 87. Peter Abbot of Cluny to Abp. Theobald. "Notum volumus fieri . . . quod nos dedimus et concessimus Stephano Regi Anglie et M. uxori sue Regine, Clarembaldum qui fuit prior monachorum de Berm. et cum eo xii. monachos ejusdem cenobii, ad construendam abbaciam suam quam apud Faversham fundare jam inceperunt. Preterea absolvo ipsum priorem Clarembaldum et prescriptos monachos ab omni obedientia . . . quam mihi seu ecclesie Cluniacensi antehac promiserunt et debebant, sive ecclesie de Cantuarii, ut Deo serviant apud Faversham, ita videlicet libere, ut nec Abbas Cluniacensis vel Prior de Cant. presumant quicquam in Abbacia de Faversham calumpniare. . . ." &c.

F. 81. P. Prior of "St. Mary of Charity" [Fleury] to Abp. Theobald.

He has granted "Rege Stephano et uxore ejus Matilde Regina pio expetentibus desiderio, ab omni obedientia . . . quam nobis et ecclesie nostre de Caritate, nec non Abbati Petro et Cluniacensi ecclesie debuerant . . . Clarembaldum et xii. monachos . . . ab solvimus ex parte tam predicti Petri quam nostra," &c.

F. 88. Inspeximus by several abbots of certain charters which grant and confirm to St. Augustine's Abbey the church of Faversham, with some others.

These churches were the causes of many disputes. Thorne gives all the papers bearing on this point (Script. X.).

F. 85. c., 1200. Copies of four charters relating to the same subject as the last. These are certified to be authentic by John Card. Sce. Marie in Via lata. A certain carelessness in the composition of the certificate and a looseness in the handwriting give the idea that the paragraph was written off by the cardinal's own hand, without a previous draft. The stiffness of manner and precision of letter, characteristics of professional scribes, are both wanting in this certificate, which, moreover, differs in style from the copies of charters to which it is appended.

Fordwich.

As will appear from the following charters, the Abbot of St. Augustine was lord of the soil of Fordwich, but inasmuch as that the town was a member of the Cinque Ports, the inhabitants had the right of self-government to a considerable extent.

F. 46. A narrow roll of two membranes, headed, "Iste sunt consuetudines quibus Major et Communitas de Fordwyco ab antiquo utebantur et adhuc utuntur."

Several paragraphs follow relating to the holding of the "Hundred Court," with the limits of its jurisdiction. Then the rights and the duties of the corporation are defined, and the method by which they are to deal with evil-doers is prescribed, and lastly, the procedure in cases of judicial combat within the borough is settled as follows:—

"Si aliquis probator extraneus aliquem hominem de libertatibus appellaverit de aliqua feloniam . . . dictus probator in dictam libertatem ingrediatur cum toto apparatu suo, prout dicto probatori decet, et cum venerit in dictam villam ductus erit ad aquam currentem vocatam 'Stour,' et in illa aqua stabit usque ad umbilicum cum apparatu suo ad modum probatoris prout dictum est, et paratus ad appellationem probandam; et dictus liber homo sic appellatus veniet in uno batello cum III postain eadem aqua ad oppositum dicti probatoris, indutus cum uno indumento vocato 'Storre,' cum uno instrumento vocato 'Ore' de longitudine III ulnarum, et ille batellus affirmabitur ad caiam cum una corda, et in dicta aqua cum dicto probatore pugnabit quousque duellum inter eos finiatur."

On the back are written some laws for regulating the, never very friendly, relations between the Mayor and Jurats and the Seneschal of the Abbot of St. Augustine's.

F. 47. Copies of eight charters relating to Fordwich and granted to St. Augustine's Abbey.

1. Grant of the town of Fordwich from Edward the Confessor to St. Augustine's. This short charter is in English.

2. Grant by the same King of sac and soc and other liberties. English and Latin.

3 and 4. Two similar grants by William the Conqueror.

5. Odo Bishop of Bayeux gives all his rights in Fordwich to St. Augustine's.

"Ego Odo Episc. Baioc. et Kanc. comes omnes domos quas in villa de Fordwyco habeo, et omnes consuetudines mei juris ad ipsam villam pertinentes, pro anima mea . . . ecclesie Sci. Augustini in perpetuum possidendas concedo."

6. A confirmation of 5 by William I.

7. A writ of William I. re-granting to St. Augustine's the town of Fordwich "quem tenet Hamo Vicecomes." The writ is directed to Abp. Lanfranc, the Bp. of Coutances, Count of Eu, and H. de Montfort, "aliisque proceribus regni."

The town had fallen into the hands of the sheriff after the flight of the timid Abbot Egelsin.

8. The sheriff's surrender of the town in obedience to the King's writ.

The Sheriff Hamo writes, "Hanc donationem meam per psalterium Sci. Augustini, et per cultellam meam, super principale altare ejusdem ecclesie manibus meis misi."

IN AND AFTER
VET.

In dorso is a list of the customs which the abbot was empowered to levy upon imports at Fordwich Quay. They are declared to be the same as those which the Prior of Ch. Ch. collected at Sandwich, and may therefore be found printed in "Boys' History of Sandwich."

German Ships Captured by English Cruisers, temp.
Hen. IV.

About the time of the accession of Henry IV. cruisers belonging to England, coming out of Calais, sank and captured some ships owned by merchants enrolled in the confederacy of the Hanseatic League. This league, backed by the powerful co-operation of the Teutonic knights, was strong enough to demand compensation and restitution from the King of England, treating with him as one sovereign power with another. English merchants trading to the Baltic lost their ships, which were seized by way of reprisal, and when the question of compensation was raised they put in their counter-claims.

The documents contained in this group furnish materials from which a history of the dispute might be compiled.

It will be noticed that two separate negotiations are recorded here, the same ambassadors being appointed on each occasion, the first in 1405, the other in 1407.

M. 299, 13 May 1405. Short instructions given to the ambassadors who were deputed to mediate between the King of England on the one part, and the Master-General of the Teutonic order on the other.

The ambassadors are instructed to arrange a time and place where they may meet the representatives of the other side, for the purpose of receiving evidence of damage done to the Germans, and of producing evidence of injuries received by Englishmen.

M. 302, 8 Oct. 1405. Confirmation by Henry IV. of a treaty entered into between W. Esturmy, Knight, John Kyngton, clerk, and Will. Brampton, citizen of London, on the part of the English, and Brothers Conrad de Lichtenstein, grand commander, Wernher de Dettinge, commander in Elbing, and Arnold de Hecken, treasurer, proctors of the magnificent and potent Lord Conrad de Inngingen, Master-General of the Teutonic order, on the part of the Germans. The composition, which is recited at length, arranges for the settlement of existing differences, and so far provides for the future as to form a foundation for a general treaty of commerce. The original deed is dated "in castro Marienbergensi in Prusia, 8 Oct. 1405," the confirmation in 1407.

M. 306, 15 Dec. 1405. Original composition made between the ambassadors of Henry IV. and Hen. de Vredeland, Tideric Casveld, Simon Clovesteen, and Joh. Sotebotter, representatives of the merchants of Lubeck, Bremen, Hamburg, Stralsund, and Greifswald. This is a preliminary treaty, in which the parties agree to receive evidence up to the first day of May following.

M. 308, 28 April 1406. The pro-consuls and consuls of Riga give notice to all whom it may concern, that Ludovic Shocker, their fellow-citizen, has formally complained that in the previous month he, being in a ship, one of three, making for Flanders, was captured by the English, and two casks of suet (tallow), "duo vasa cepi (sevi)," his personal property, were taken from him. He has appointed Albert Shokman, who is already engaged to act for other sufferers, to be his proctor for the purpose of demanding and receiving compensation.

M. 303. A certificate, under the municipal seal of Dorpat (Civitas Tharbetensis).

In this document the city officers set forth in detail the several packages of merchandise which were lost when the ships Engelbert Bonyt and Reyman Boyten were destroyed by the English. Every merchant who sent his venture in these ships distinguished it by a mark. In most cases this mark has the form of a tall cross with shrouds, and sometimes a flag, but although the elements of the several marks are the same, the marks themselves, owing to variations in the combination of the elements, are all different. These merchants' marks are tricked in the margin of the remonstrance, each one opposite to the description of the package which it distinguished.

M. 201. Many fragments of parchment and damaged sheets of paper, containing claims for compensation, and arguments propounded by both sides. The injured condition of these documents makes it impossible to piece together the various portions of evidence into a continuous story.

M. 305, 3 June 1407. A letter from the "Nuncii Consulares civitatum de Hansa," assembled at Lubeck.

They complain that the English ambassadors are unnecessarily hindering a proposed conference at Dordrecht.

M. 387, 12 June 1407. A letter, in French, written by John Earl of Somerset and Constable of Calais to the English ambassadors. He says that the German remonstrance contains a sentence which he thus quotes:—"Item dantur plures querele contra capitaneum Cales, Michaelum Scot de Cales, Will. Hornby de eadem, et quendam Byschop de eadem, et alios ejusdem ville, ad summam viii. M. nobil."

The captain writes that he is prepared with a sufficient answer to the charge, as he will show at the meeting which is to take place at Dordrecht on the first day of August.

M. 281, 2 July 1407. The King, confessing that the first embassy had failed in its purpose, by this instrument re-appoints the same ambassadors, instructing them to re-open the question of mutual compensation.

K. 8. The Consular Nuncii of the cities of Pruce, assembled at Marienburg, send this notice to the Mayor of Hull, demanding that he shall deliver up certain monies to Godekyn Tydeman, their agent. The money in question was received for some corn which one T. Sutbury, a Hull mariner, had taken from a German ship, and the Nuncii had ascertained that the sum was still in Hull in an unbroken sum.

X. 9, 1404. A certificate, in French, under the seal of the Mayor of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It testifies that merchandise belonging to a certain merchant of Berwick has been seized in a Baltic port, and that the owners are therefore entitled to compensation.

Y. 56, 1407. A similar certificate, written in Latin, given by the Mayor of York. This document makes claims identical with those in X 9, on behalf of a person of the same name, who, however, is said in this case to be a citizen of York.

Hereford.

H. 112, 1131. Bull of protection and confirmation of privileges granted by Innocent II. to Bp. Robert and the Church of Hereford:

"Decernimus igitur, ut nulli omnino hominum liceat prefatam ecclesiam temere perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuire, vel aliquibus vexationibus fatigare, sed omnia integra conserventur eorum pro quorum gubernatione et sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura."

This parchment bears the monogram of the Pope, and the (apparently autograph) signatures of seven cardinals.

H. 118, 1598. A notarial instrument by which the dean and chapter appeal against the bishop's right to visit the church.

There are some rolls of accounts kept by the clavier of the church. He records the amounts received, and the sources whence they were derived, adding in each account the manner in which the money was distributed among the canons actually in residence.

Hospitals.

B. 18, 1306. On the death of one Simon, rector of Reculver an inquisition is ordered to inquire into the status of the benefice. The church is reported to be worth 200 marks a year, but it is encumbered with a pension of 20*l.* assigned by Abp. Lanfranc to the hospitals of Northgate and Harbledown.

This inquisition was made by order of W. de Testa and W. Gerald, administrators of the diocese, sede vacante. It will be remembered that the see was vacant in 1306, not by the death of an Archbishop, but by the suspension of Robert Winchelsey, who, having offended the King, was outlawed by him and suspended by the Pope.

H. 145, 1355. Copy of a deed by which Abp. Islip confers a permanent endowment upon the hospitals of Northgate and Harbledown.

The income of the hospitals had hitherto consisted of 20*l.* paid annually by the rectors of Reculver, and a further sum given by the Abps. at their pleasure. In this grant the donor speaks of the uncertainty attaching to the latter source of income, and he recognises the disadvantage under which the poor of the hospitals lay from having to solicit a new grant from every fresh Archbishop; beside which, he says that it often happened that when the see was vacant, and the temporalities in the hands of the King, the hospitals lost their means of living for a long time together.

To remedy this state of affairs, Abp. Islip gave for ever 140*l.* out of the revenues of the church of Reculver, in addition to the 20*l.* already coming from that source.

DEAN AND CHAPTER
BURY.

The church had long before been assigned, by Papal authority, to the maintenance of the table of the Abps., and therefore Abp. Simon was able, at all events during his life, to alienate the income. The original of this deed is in the muniment chest of the master of the hospitals.

R. 19, 1355. Confirmation by the Prior and convent of Ch. Ch. of Abp. Simon's grant.

Indulgences.

A. 13, 1297. Abp. Winchelsey's grant of forty days' indulgence to worshippers in the chapel of our Lady in the infirmary of the monks of Canterbury.

A. 33, 1274. "Omnibus Christi fidelibus presentes litteras, &c. . . . frater R(obertus Kilwardby) misericordie divina Cant. Archiep. . . . &c. Ut fidelium Christi devotionem allectivis indulgentiarum munibus ad caritatis et devotionis opera propencius excitemus, de omnipotentis Dei misericordia, beate Marie Virginis, et Sci. Thome martyris, ac et omnium sanctorum, meritis confidentes, omnibus vere penitentibus et peccata sua dimittentibus, qui ad tumbam bone memorie Ade de Chilindenne, quondam prioris ecclesie nostre Cantuar. pro ejusdem anime et omnium fidelium defunctorum oraverint, viginti dies de injuncta sibi penitentia misericorditer sibi relaxamus," &c.

C. 167, 1274. Anianus Bp. of Bangor grants twenty days' indulgence to all who pray for the soul of the above-mentioned Adam Chillenden. In this case it is not necessary that the tomb should be visited.

C. 170, 1296. John (Monmouth) Bp. of Landaff grants twenty days' indulgence to all, but especially to those of his own diocese, who shall hear the divine office in the new chapel of the Prior of Canterbury.

C. 182, 1320. A similar grant by Henry Bp. of St. David's.

C. 226, 1291. Hugh Bp. of the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem grants forty days' indulgence to those who properly visit the prior's new chapel near the infirmary.

H. 113, 1276. A similar grant by Bp. T. Cantelupe of Hereford.

Inventories.

S. B. c. 12, 1313. "Inventarium bonorum Thome Romayne defuncti, factum per executores dicti defuncti."

The deceased was a person of consequence, he had a private chapel containing furniture worth 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, he also wore a gown furred with minever, and hence it is that the items in the inventory are rich and costly.

At the time of his death the Bishop of Winchester owed Romayne four score pounds; the Prior of St. Mary, Southwark, and the Abbot of Westminster, were also debtors to the estate. It is likely that he was a London citizen, for a shop is mentioned, the weights and utensils in which are valued at twenty shillings.

S. B. b. 215, c. 1331. A fragment of a draft memorandum by which the treasurers of Ch. Ch., as receivers of the estate of the late Prior Henry of Eastry, are debited with considerable sums of money.

The whole amount received, consisting of florens, ready-money, tallies, and obligations, was 358*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.* The florens are distinguished as, 1, "florens de Florentia," each worth 3*s.* 4*d.*; 2, florens de la mas . . . , each 5*s.* 10*d.*; and, 3, florens de agno.

C. 238, 1338. A schedule of valuables drawn up upon the appointment of a new prior.

It will be noticed that each important piece of plate is distinguished by the name of the person who gave it to the monastery.

S. B. c. 63, 1339. Inventory of the stock on the manor of Chartham. There are no prices annexed to the articles here enumerated.

A. 37, 1349. Inventory and valuation of the goods belonging to Abp. Stratford at the time of his death.

The sum total of the appraisement was 6,509*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*; of this 1,907*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* was the value of the books, jewels, plate, and chapel furniture.

The debts of the deceased amounted to 5,925*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

The details of the valuation are not given, but each department, as hall, stable, chapel, &c., has the price of its contents annexed to it.

The funeral expenses were calculated at 782*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

A. 34, c. 1303. Three pieces of parchment showing a debtor and creditor account of the estate of the late Abp. Winchelsey. The total assets amounted to 4,232*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.*, and the funeral cost 459*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.*

C. 236 and C. 230, c. 1350. Two inventories of the stock, on the several manors belonging to Ch. Ch., which died in "the murrain." These MSS. are petitions addressed to the Bp. of Rochester by the monks of Ch. Ch. They plead the state of poverty into which they have fallen in consequence of the great pestilences affecting man and beast, and they pray that the bishop will give them the church of Westerham, to help them to maintain their traditional hospitality.

The schedules are appended as arguments intended to touch the bishop's heart.

The summa of the losses of animals is thus stated:—

"Boum 257, pretium bovis 15*s.*

Vaccarum cum exitu 511, pretium vaccarum cum exitu 10*s.*

Ovium 4,585, pretium ovium 18 pence.

Total money loss 792*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*"

At the same time 1,212 acres of land, formerly profitable, are said to be inundated by the sea, apparently from want of labourers to maintain the sea walls.

C. 166, c. 1411. "Ornamenta ecclesie Xpi. Cant., et jocalia, quedam nova, adquisita, et quedam antiqua, reparata, tempore Thome Chyllendenne prioris."

Three membranes written on both sides, containing a list of the matters mentioned in the title, and also a minute account of all repairs and restorations, as well within the precincts of the monastery as in the outlying manors, done in the time and under the auspices of Prior Thomas Chillenden.

This MS. records the almost total renovation of the monastery and all its possessions.

S. B. b. 68, 1396. An account of all the expenses incurred in the time of Prior Chillenden for the re-edification of Canterbury College, Oxford. This account extends over two years, and comprises the smallest details. A complete description is here given of the cost of labour and materials required for the construction of a large edifice at the beginning of the 15th century.

S. B. a. 126. "M^d de bonis et cattallis ecclesie de Westwell." A defaced churchwarden's inventory. The date is about 1490.

S. B. a. 191, 1440. An inventory of jewels given in pledge by Prior John Salisbury to Cristina Overton.

These jewels were articles of great value, brooches, cups, spoons with gilded lions for knops, two pairs of coral beads, the "paters" being gilt, washing basins of Paris work, &c..

S. B. b. 32, 1451. Schedule of fixtures attached to a lease.

S. B. b. 40, 1458. Inventory of stock on the farm at Lydd Court. 300 ewes were worth 14 pence each, 100 muttons fifteen pence, 6 boars a shilling each, and 167 lambs each 10 pence.

S. B. c. 110, 15th century. A priced inventory of stock. The lease of which the MS. is a part demises for a term of years, not only the land, but all the store "quyk and dede."

S. B. c. 109, c. 1470. Inventory attached to a lease of the manor of Chartham.

S. B. c. 21, c. 1480. Store on the farm at Bocking. The amount of corn in the granary is said to be "scored on the door posts."

S. B. b. 166. "The Goods of Thomas Sendall distreynd for rent of the corn-mell at Bokkyng a. regni Hen. VII^m. primo." Household goods, tools of trade, and a pig, all priced.

S. B. b. 143. The inventory of the goodys of Elyn Lightwhite appraised the 18th November . . . Henry VII.

A long list of furniture, plate, clothes, &c. of a well-to-do person.

O. 134, O. 135, O. 136. Three inventories of books, plate, and household stuff belonging to Canterbury College, Oxford. These all belong to the latter part of the 15th cent., and each was written when a new warden took over the goods from his predecessor.

S. B. b. 91, 1493. An inventory of plate pledged:—

"first a chayne of golde with a crosse wheryn are v perilles and v othir stonys recepta in vigilia Sci. Benedicti post festum translationis Sci. Thome A. H. VIII, ix^o=xxxx. x*d.* •

"Itm. 1 Agnus Dei with Seint Anthony crosse the belle hangyng theron, xxxxiis.

"It. A rounde owche with iiij perillys & 1 ruby in the myddest, vis. x*d.* ob.

"Itm. 1 peyr of Bedes of corall with xv gawdens silver and gilt, xs.

"It. Two gemellys of golde oon in another . . . vs. iiid."

There are 15 items in all.

DEAN AND CHAPTER
BURY.

AND THE
T. S. B. a. 188, 1493. "Inventory of the stuffs sent by my Lord Prior for his use at the Almonry at Monkton."

Monkton church belonged to the almonry of the convent, and the parsonage-house, parts of which remain to this day, was a pleasant country retreat for the prior, who therefore sent a few articles of comfortable furniture for his own use.

"A payer of vestments of baudekyn, the orfresse blewe with flower-de-lyse of gold. In the chamber. A payer of fustenys, a pilowe of downe, covered with lynyn cloth, and a tacell of whyt sylke. A qwytt with five lebardis. A coverlett with l lyon, bordered with clowdys. Two cochons, wherof on with a lyon, the othyr of red say. Two curteins of blew buccram. One covering to a bed of bord Alexandyr, colourys yalow and greene, lynyd with blew buccram. A basene with an ewer of latten, with can(dle)stylk doblinosyd."

S. B. b. 96: Inventarium rerum repertarum in domo ubi R. Welborne manebat.

A curious inventory of household stuff, arms, and stores.

"A brestplat, a gorget of stele, fower standardys with two gossetts of mayl, three salettys, three billys, one bak stele, two pykyd stafys, one bowe, one bad sadyll.

"In the cellar. Two stondys full of ale each of them conteyning 13 galons, a kylderkyne of bere half full, 50 salt fyschys, with two lynyngs, a lytle vessell with verjouse, one vessell with bren (brine) and four peces of beff therin. A bushyll of colys, seven conyskynys, four stone morters," &c.

S. B. b. 139, 15th cent. A roughly drawn inventory of the plate in the office of the cellarer of Ch. Ch., written by an officer of the monastery, who enters the articles a "six pots S. Islep, two pots H. Chychele," &c.

S. B. b. 140. A similar inventory of plate, with the weights and prices of the several articles.

S. B. c. 23, probably 1559. A list of costly vestments belonging to Ch. Ch., more than half of which are placed under a sub-title, "Ornaments given by the late Lord Cardynall Poole."

One silver mitre, said to be "defaced," is reported to weigh 97 ounces.

It is probable that this inventory was made when Abp. Parker succeeded Cardinal Pole.

Ireland.

By gift of Hervey Mountmorris, the convent of Ch. Ch. came into possession of lands and ecclesiastical estates in Ireland.

In the 13th century all the Irish possessions of Ch. Ch. were made over to the convent of Tinterne, or de Voto, in the diocese of Ferns.

I. 228. "Littere Johannis Regis, de protectione, et de rebus nostris in Hybernia in manum suam capiendia."

I. 231, 1245. "Cyrographum inter nos et Abbatem et Conventum de Voto in Hibernia, de dimissione omnium terrarum nostrarum ibidem, pro nomine firme, postea nomine juris perpetui, pro x marciis annuatim solvendis in cathedrali ecclesia Batonie ad festum Sci. Michaelis."

I. 236. Contemporary copy of the last.

I. 235, July 1245. "Transcriptum carte Abbatis de Voto de terra ei vendita in Hibernia, et obligatio ejus de annuo redditu x marcarum, et de aliis conditionibus infra scriptis servandis."

The original gift of the land to Ch. Ch. by Harvey Mountmorris is quoted in this document. It was difficult to collect rent from land at such a distance from home, and the Kings of England required that persons drawing money from Ireland should either reside in person or provide substitutes who might perform military service. Under these circumstances it is not wonderful that the Canterbury monastery should prefer a certain annual payment, however small, to a larger but troublesome and uncertain income.

I. 232, 13th cent. The Abbot and convent of Tynterne or de Voto acknowledge that although they have bought all the Irish farms and town lots (predia urbana) belonging to Ch. Ch., yet that they have no claim to the land at Thamagre, which is the property of Geoffrey St. John.

I. 234, 1245. Bond by which the monks of Tynterne undertake, in consideration of the conveyance to them of the Irish lands belonging to Ch. Ch., to pay an annual rent of 10 marks, to satisfy all episcopal and archidiaconal demands, and to supply certain churches with efficient priests; especially they undertake to provide that masses shall be said in the church of Brendanus Banarwe for the late Herveius de Monte Mauricio, a benefactor of Ch. Ch.

I. 238, 1257. The Prior of Ch. Ch., having appointed the Abbot of Tynterne to be his proctor for transacting Irish business, receives this document, which guarantees him against all claims for fees.

I. 237, 1255. At the instance of Abp. Boniface the Abbot de Voto adds three marks to the ten in which he is bound to the Prior of Ch. Ch.

I. 233, 1245. An act of chapter, by which the convent of Ch. Ch. undertake that the monies received from the Abbot de Voto in the diocese of Ferns shall be expended in the purchase of lands and rents, and in no other manner.

X. 8, 1380. Extract, in French, from an ordinance of Richard II. which forbids absentees to receive rents or profits from Irish property.

I. 245. The ordinance of Richard II., founded upon one of Edw. III., providing that all who owned rents or lands in Ireland should either there reside, or send a sufficient number of persons to represent them in the defence of the country. An exception is made in favour of ecclesiastical revenues, and the Prior of Ch. Ch. is permitted to receive, for the term of his life, 13 marks from the Abbot de Voto.

I. 242 and I. 244. Paper copies of the last.

I. 247, 1422. The King's permission to Prior John Wodnesborough, allowing him to receive 13 marks yearly as long as he lives from the abbey of Tynterne, "aliquibus statutis . . . contra absentes a dicta terra nostra Hibernia in contrarium factis non obstantibus."

I. 251, 1428. A similar grant to Prior W. Molash.

I. 250, 1454. A similar grant to Prior Goldstone I.

I. 249, 1432. Inspecimus of a record in the Exchequer which contains the result of an inquisition made in the reign of Henry IV., by which it was shown that the Prior of Canterbury received rents from Irish property and was an absentee, "contra formam cujusdam ordinationis . . . per Ricardum nuper Regem Anglie secundum."

I. 241, 13th cent. A document which shows that, in addition to an annual rent of 10 marks, the Abbot de Voto paid, for the transfer to him of the Irish possessions of Ch. Ch., a premium of 625 marks.

I. 239, 1191 to 1206. Demise by Galfridus, Prior of Ch. Ch., of the ville of Fychard in Ireland to Richard of London, and his heirs, for an annual rent of 4 marks.

I. 242, 13th cent. Final concord between the Bp. of Ferns, and the convent of Ch. Ch. By this deed it is decided that the Bp. shall have the manor of Fychard and the convent, the churches of Banewe, Kylcogan, Kylmor, Kinture, and Tagmagre, both parties disclaiming all suits for the future.

I. 243, 1308. R. Bp. of Ferns writes to the Prior of Ch. Ch., saying that he finds in old writings that when the English first came to Ireland they seized lands and churches, some of which, belonging to the church of Ferns, were given to the Canterbury convent. He finds, too, that after many suits a composition was entered into by the Bp. and the convent, by which the convent resigned to the Bp. all rights in the manor of Fychard. In the teeth of this composition, a man has now come to Ferns, saying that, in right of his wife, he is heir to one Richard of London, to whom the manor was devised long before; he brings with him a writing supporting his claim, sealed with a seal which in no way resembles that which the Bp. has seen attached to writings emanating from Ch. Ch. He, in consequence of these events, wishes to know if the muniment-room of Canterbury contains any evidence relating to the subject, and he asks the prior to attach to his answer an impression of the small old seal of the convent, if such a thing exist.

I. 248, 1430. Statement of account between the Prior of Ch. Ch. and the attorney whom he employs to receive the 13 marks which are paid by the Abbot de Voto.

I. 240. A Bp. of Emly in the 13th cent. writes to the Prior of Ch. Ch. to say that David his treasurer, whom the prior once hospitably entertained, has served a notice upon the prior and brothers of St. John's in Kilkenny, thus complying with a request made by the Prior of Ch. Ch. In a postscript the Bishop says that before he goes to Ireland "tambam beati Thome martiris per Dei gratiam visitare intendimus."

In the volume of Ch. Ch. letters are two from James Sherlok, who farmed, under the Prior of Ch. Ch., some quitrents or other manorial dues in Ireland. Dating from Waterford in the middle of the 15th cent., he complains that one Talbot has come over, claiming the farm of one of the manors by virtue of an alleged bargain made between himself and the Prior of Ch. Ch. Sherlock requests that letters and parcels intended for him may be sent to a certain merchant in Bristow, who will forward them.

Jubilee.

M. 350, 1520. A packet containing four letters relating to a jubilee which Abp. Warham proposed, if the Pope's sanction could be obtained, to celebrate at Canterbury. The year 1520 was the three hundredth anniversary of the translation, and the three hundred and fiftieth of the martyrdom, of the patron saint of Canterbury.

Three of these letters are written from Rome by the Archbishop's proctor (probably Dr. Grig), and the fourth is from Bedyll, the Archbishop's secretary.

The Pope was plied with arguments and presents, Cardinal Campeggio was privately retained as an advocate, and the Cardinal "Quatuor Sanctorum," in return for valuable gifts, assisted Dr. Grig with his advice.

In spite of arguments and bribes the Papal licence was refused, except upon terms too exorbitant to allow the jubilee to be a pecuniary success.

The Pope (Leo X.) proposed that one half of all the oblations made at the festival should be given towards the building of St. Peter's; to this the Abp. consented provided that, first, the preliminary expenses, including bribes, incurred by him should be deducted from the gross receipts; secondly, that the jubilee should be continued for a whole year; thirdly, that this one permission should be perennial, and that the festival should be celebrated every fiftieth year without any fresh licence.

As there is no record of the actual celebration of this jubilee, it is probable that the negotiations came to nothing; and that six silver goblets for the Cardinal of the Quattro Santi, and a gold cup with a large sum of money for the Pope, were all unprofitably expended.

Great stress was laid upon the fact that a jubilee had been regularly held every fifty years, and that it was established by prescription; hence the Abp. was advised to find some men, noblemen if possible, who, being over sixty-five years of age, might of their own personal knowledge testify to the celebration of a jubilee in 1470.

The appendix to "Somner's Canterbury" contains these letters, but they are not very correctly transcribed.

The vol. of Ch. Ch. letters contains one from Joh. Giglis, made Bishop of Worcester in 1474, who, in writing to the Prior of Ch. Ch., mentions a jubilee in progress at Canterbury at the date of his letter.

Ch. Ch. Letters 54. A very curious story of two incontinent priests, who after living as laymen for a year, went to a general "pardon" at Canterbury, and repenting, assumed their priests' "aray." The letter which communicates these facts is not dated, but it is probable that the "pardon" alluded to was the jubilee celebrated at Canterbury in 1470.

Letters Apostolic.

M. 340. Adrian IV. to Abp. Theobald. "Ex injuncto nobis a Deo summi pontificatus officio attentam cogimus sollicitudinem gerere, et modis omnibus providere, ne, tempore nostri apostolatus, Ecclesie Dei rerum suarum detrimentum incurrere debeant, vel jacturam Pervenit autem ad nos quod laici quidam, in cimiterio ecclesie Sce. Marie de Arcubus intra Londoniam, duas domos ausu temerario construere presumpserunt fraternitati tue per apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus ipsas domos, omni occasione et dilatione postposita, auctoritate nostra facias amoveri."

P. 60. Alexander III. to Abp. Richard.

He advises him to entrust the keeping of his seal to a monk of his own church.

C. 51. Alexander III. to Alan Prior of Ch. Ch. and his convent. After saying that above all clergy he was bound to protect those who professed the regular religious life, "ea propter dilecti filii, officio suscepto ministracionis inducti, et vestris precibus inclinati, presentibus vobis litteris indulgemus, ut a solutione decimarum de ortis vestris, de feno, de herbis pascorum, et de minutis aliis, ita sitis amodo liberi sicut a quadraginta retro annis noscimini sine interruptione fuisse, &c."

A. 191, 1203. The Abp. of Canterbury, having ordained a deacon without a title, is required to provide him with a benefice. The Pope argues "cum, secundum apostolum, qui altari servit vivere debeat de altare, et qui ad onus eligatur repelli non debeat a mercede; patet a simili, ut clerici vivere debeant de patrimonio Jhu. Xpi., cujus obsequio deputantur, sicut ipsa nominis

"ratio persuadet, cum enim a clericos (κλῆρος) appellantur, quia in sui ordinatione vel assumuntur in hereditatem domini, vel asecuntur hereditatem in ipso, ut vere possint psallere cum propheta, 'Dominus pars hereditatis mee,' &c."

A. 187, 1206. Innocent III. to King John. The King is requested to promote the election of Reginald the sub-prior of Ch. Ch., who after having been chosen Archbishop by the monks of Canterbury was rejected by them. See under the head "Abps., Election of."

M. 343, circ. 1282. Martin IV. appoints Gifred de Vezano collector in England, Scotland, and Ireland of the subsidy in aid of the Holy Land, giving him authority to arrange for the commutation of vows "tam cruce signatorum quam aliorum."

Letters, Archbishops.

C. 218. From Abp. Theobald to Elwin son of Leofstan.

"T. Dei gratia Cantuariensis ecclesie humilis minister Eilwino Leofstani filio, et R. fratri ejus, et Johanni filio Radulphi, et omnibus tenentibus de ecclesia Xpi. Cant. . . . Mandamus vobis et precipimus, quod in justicia, et sub tuicione Dni. Jeremie Prioris Cantuar. sitis, et ei, sicut nobis, diligenter obediatis. Priori vero firmiter, et per obedientiam, injungimus, ut pro vobis sit, et vos, pro posse suo, in omnibus justiciam teneat et faciat. Illud etiam mandando precipimus ne quis de ecclesiis vel terris, aut hominibus, clericis videlicet et laicis, seu rebus aliis ad monachos Cantuar. pertinentibus, nisi quem Prior ad hoc statuerit, se in aliquo intromittat. Valet in Xpo. et estote obedientes per omnia."

A. 189 and A. 192 are two collections of letters written by Abp. Winchelsey to the Prior of Cant.

A. 189 c., Aldington, 2 Nov. 1294. The Archbishop calls upon the prior to justify the sentences of suspension and excommunication which he has laid upon various rectors and vicars, during the vacancy of the see.

A. 189 a., July 1296. The Bps. of Albano and Palestrina, writing from Rome, request Abp. Winchelsey to allow W. de Langton, the elect and confirmed of Coventry, to be consecrated abroad, urging that he was likely to be detained in their service for a long time.

A. 189 b., South Malling, 7 Aug. 1296. Abp. Winchelsey's reply to the writers of the last letter. The Archbishop evidently wishes to postpone his answer; he says he must first consult his chapter, which, "propter distanciam longam, et vie asperam ac montuose discrimen," he cannot do immediately. He requires also to discuss the matter "cum concilio nostro, undique nunc, ut moris est, in instanti tempore autumpnali, disperso." Meanwhile he promises that the delay shall not work to the disadvantage of the new prelate.

A. 193 c., Charing, 14 June 1297. The Abp. to the Prior of Canterbury.

He complains that the priory of Ch. Ch. is languishing through decrease in the number of monks; the diminution has gone so far that, there being only thirty brethren on the foundation, the services in the church are "attenuated." He reminds the prior that "sapientie doctrina testat, in multitudine populi sit dignitas Regis, et in paucitate plebis ignominia principis."

A. 193 e., Slindon, 15-21 Sept. 1298. Abp. Winchelsey to the Prior of Ch. Ch.

Whilst taking steps to fill up the numbers of his convent, the prior is advised to be cautious in the selection of his recruits. The writer draws a parallel between the assumption of the religious habit and the sacrifice prescribed by the Mosaic law; comparing the novice making his profession to the victim of the Jewish altar. Hence he argues that an unblemished body is as essential as an honest conversation. He prescribes that candidates for admission shall be "bone vite secundum judicium humanum, et honesti in corpore, sicut decet ministros tam celebris ecclesie pollere undique honestate."

A postscript, "Vobis quasdam litteras pridie nobis directas per Dom. Rob. de Bardelby (recepimus), quarum tenore inspecto, faciatis quod vobis visum fuerit expedire."

A. 193 r., Oxford, 9 Jan. 1299. The Archbishop reproves the Bishop of Ely, who, disregarding a laudable custom, has failed to provide a benefice for a clerk whom the Archbishop nominated at the time of the Bishop's consecration.

A. 189 a., 11 Sept. 1299. Abp. Winchelsey, dating from "Wylughton in Lindeseya distante a Lincoln, versus provinciam Eboracensem, per duodecim leucas," boasts that he has carried his cross erect through the northern province. Willoughton in Lindsey is, however, nearer 12 miles than 12 leagues distant from Lincoln.

A. 189 e. A letter from a member of the Abp.'s household to a friend, doubtless the Prior of Ch. Ch. The writer tells the person whom he addresses that a cup which he sent to be given to "my Lord" is too paltry for the purpose, especially when it is known that he has never given one before. He has consulted two well-wishers of the giver of the cup, who agree in opinion with the writer, and therefore, out of friendship, they have concocted an excuse, which will give time for the purchase of a richer gift, telling my Lord that a messenger brought the cup as far as Meopham, but was afraid to carry it any farther. When this story was told to my Lord, he laughed, and graciously received the letter which had been sent with the cup, this latter being kept out of sight.

A. 193 h., Stebonheth, [Stepney] 29 March 1303. Abp. Winchelsey to the Prior of Ch. Ch. "Inhibemus vobis ne adversariis ecclesie nostre, monachis de Sco. Augustino, vel eorum ministris, aut aliis quibuscunque ipsorum nomine, oleum sanctum, crisma, vel aliud quodcunque spirituale, liberatis, ne omnino nobis, et vobis, ac ecclesie nostre, adversantibus in hiis, vel in aliis, ad eorum relevamen eis aliquoliter suffragetur. Valete semper in Xpo."

A. 193 b., Wingham, 21 Nov. 1304. Abp. Winchelsey to the prior. The King has required the Abp. to direct his clergy to perform pious offices for the soul of John, late Earl of Warrenne, "consanguinei regis." Complying with the King's command, the Abp. requests the prior to cause the proper prayers and masses to be recited in his church.

A. 193 s., Lamhegh [Lambeth], 1 March 1305. Abp. to prior.

Abp. Winchelsey, having heard that the Abp. of York is about to return to his province in state, his cross being carried before him, requires the prior to use his whole strength to prevent this intrusion. The northern Abp. had been over sea, and landing at Dover must necessarily pass through Canterbury.

S. B. a. 181, 1305. A quasi private letter from the Abp. to the prior. He thanks the prior for some information which he has given, and says that he need not take the trouble to come to London to the Parliament, for that no business would be transacted except the consideration in the Privy Council (in secretiori regis concilio) of certain articuli touching the state of the realm.

K. 1., Mandate, Pictavie, 28 Jan. 1308. Return, 24 Feb. 1308. A return made by Henry Bp. of Winchester to a mandate of Abp. Winchelsey.

The Abp. had written to the Bp. of Winchester requesting him to officiate at the coronation of Edw. II., because he foresaw "non absque cordis angustia" that he should be prevented from taking the duty upon himself. The Bishop, having crowned the King, certifies the Archbishop, "Hujus igitur auctoritate mandati et commissionis vestre, die dominica, videlicet v. Kln Marci, Anno Dni. supradicto, excellentissimo principi et domino nostro Edwardo dei gratia Regi Anglie illustri unccionis gratiam, et coronacionis munus, impendimus vice vestra. In cujus rei," &c.

C. 1294. A roll of four letters sewn together. These were sent by Abp. Walter Raynold to Prior Henry of Eastry. Three are occupied with subjects connected with the discipline of the convent, and are noticed under the head "Discipline." The fourth contains a request that the prior will provide a proper study to which the "Reader" of the convent may retire. Having heard that the prior is about to fit up eighteen new "diversoria" in the cloister, the Bp. judges that one of these will suit the "Lector," who hitherto has gone into the infirmary to prepare his readings; the letter mentions as one recommendation of the new arrangement "ut debiles et infirmi absque strepitu populi lari secrecius convescant."

A. 193 d., 1314. Gilbert Bp. of London, as leading suffragan of the province, summons the Bp. of Hereford to take part in a consecration at Canterbury. The method of procedure was, that the Abp. summoned the Bp. of London, and the duty of calling all the other suffragans fell upon him. The Bp. of Hereford, bringing this citation in his hand, came to Canterbury, and hence it happens that this collection contains the document, which, a priori, would be looked for at Hereford.

Letters, Priors'.

M. 364, circ. 1240. A roll, composed of eighteen slips of parchment, which is entered in the catalogue "Priors' letters." This title is misleading, inasmuch as that the documents are citations, inhibitions, and other law papers, with which the prior is connected only so far as that one or other party in the several suits has sought "tuitionem ecclesie Cantuariensis."

S. B. a. 45, 1331-38. This is a letter from Prior Oxenden to Edw. III., in which the writer asks the King to excuse him from attending the Parliament at York. He writes, "Testis est michi qui abscondita cordis novit, quod in eo precipue letarer quo vestra regia magestas felicibus incrementis succresceret, et regni gubernacula salubriter exerceret, et quia ad instans parlamentum vestrum adversa valedudine impeditus personaliter venire non valeo, quod grave gero et moleste, absenciam meam excusam dignetur habere vestra regia magnitudo In eo qui dat regibus regnare vestra valeat semper celsitudo."

London.

The MSS. in this group, more than 120 in number, may all be classed as title-deeds, but since they allude to old customs, and to sites which can still be identified in the modern city, they are here noticed, whilst other title-deeds, referring to places of less historical interest, are passed over.

L. 19. A short charter of Henry II., empowering the Canterbury convent to hold their lands and men in London as securely as they did in the time of the late King Henry.

L. 1. An early lease, circ. 1130, containing four lines and a half of writing. The tenant covenants to pay a rent of 12s., to build on the premises, and to rebuild if, "quod absit," the houses should be destroyed by fire.

L. 2, middle of 12th cent. A priest named Ælgar has given to the convent of Canterbury his church in London, from which the convent are to receive five shillings yearly, and in return for the gift they promise to adopt him into their fraternity whenever it shall please him to forsake the world.

The church given on these terms is bestowed by the convent upon Helye the son of Ælgar the priest, on condition that he shall pay the yearly five shillings, and with the further understanding that at the death of Elias the church shall pass to his next of kin for ever, "si tamen ecclesia dignus fuerit."

L. 4. Gift of a vicarage in St. Mary Bothage to John son of Rohesia and nephew of St. Thomas.

L. 71. A certificate of Abp. Theobald, testifying that Peter the priest of Bothage de London has given his church of St. Mary Bothage, "que sui patrimonii esse dinoscitur," to the prior and convent of Canterbury, paying to the prior five shillings annually by two equal instalments.

L. 73. Abp. Stephen Langton gives the church of St. Dunstan to the convent of Canterbury, the revenues to be expended upon the repairs of the church of the monastery.

L. 9 and L. 120 refer to this church.

L. 32. A grant to Ch. Ch. by Abp. S. Langton of land which he had exacted from Reginald de Cornhill who had administered the revenues of the see during the time of the Abp.'s exile. "Terram cum domibus quam R. de C. dedit nobis et successoribus nostris in perpetuum pro excessibus quos fecit in Archiepiscopatum Cantuar. tempore exilii nostri, quando curam ac custodiam ejusdem archiepiscopatus habuit ex parte Dni. Regis."

L. 17, 12th cent. Gift by Ralph de Cornhill of a rent of 5s. to the church of Saint Trinity [i.e. Ch. Ch.], Canterbury.

L. 69. Charter of Henry III. conferring upon the monks of Ch. Ch., in respect of their London property, the same privileges as they enjoyed "tempore regis Henrici avi mei."

L. 393, L. 397, and L. 398, 1313. Three instruments relating to the election of Gilbert de Segrave to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ralph Baldok, late Bp. of London.

L. 77, 1278. Composition made between the Bishop and Dean of London and the Prior of Ch. Ch. concerning jurisdiction during the vacancy of the See of London.

L. 80, circ. 1225. "Carta prioris & conventus de Lesnes quod non cedat nobis in prejudicium quod capellani habeant in Londonia."

The convent of Lesnes had a house and an oratory in the parish of St. Michael Paternosterchurch, (otherwise styled in Riola, a name which is now corrupted into Royal) and the convent of Canterbury, the patrons of the church, required this guarantee before they allowed the house of Leases to introduce their chaplains into the oratory.

L. 82. Roger le Duc, as founder of a chantry in All Saints' Bread Street, undertakes that the parish church shall suffer no injury from his new foundation.

L. 94 to L. 110: These are all confirmations by the wardens of the Mercers' Company (custodes misterie mercerie) of appointments to the office of "Magister Collegii in ecclesia Sci. Michaelis in Riola."

The earliest date is 1424, the latest 1482. The seal displaying the "Maidenhead," the cognisance of the mercers, is attached to all these documents.

M. 391, 1424. Explains what this college was, and how the mercers came to be patrons.

The preamble of this deed runs, "Cum Johes. Coven-tre, Johes. Carpenter, et Willelmus Grove, executores testamenti Ricardi Whitynton nuper civis et mercerii, London; in honore Sci. Spiritus, et beate Virginis Marie, Collegium perpetuum ac quinque capellanis, unde unus erit magister, ac certis aliis clericis et choristis obsequia divina cotidie in ecclesia Sci. Michaelis de Paternosterchorche in Riola que ad nostrum patronatum existit, pro salubri statu Dni. regis nunc dum vixerit, et anima sua cum migraverit . . . fundaverunt, exererunt," &c.

M. 340, 1428. A presentation to the vicarage of the above-named church. This dignity was sometimes combined in one person with the office of Master of Whitynton College.

L. 101, 1434. Certificate under the seal of the Mayor of London, extending over two entire membranes, which attests the authenticity of a number of deeds by which endowments were conferred upon the college in the church of St. Michael "in Riola."

L. 99, 1430. A certificate under the seal of the Mayor of London concerning an assize of novel disseisin or "frisce forcie tenta coram vicecomitibus civitatis London," in which the bone of contention was a rent of 6s. 8d. in St. Laurence Pountney.

L. 93, 1405, and 110, 1573. Two similar certificates.

L. 119. Extracts from the pleas rolls of the Hustings Court of London. These extracts relate to the enrolment of title-deeds, the earliest of the originals belonging to the year 1279, and the copies to the 15th cent.

L. 127, circ. 1450. Inventory of fixtures, &c. handed over to an incoming tenant of "the vawts of the King's Head in Chepe." This house belonged to the convent of Canterbury, and the brethren visiting London sometimes charge, among their expenses, small sums laid out in this tavern.

One item in the inventory is "an iron to hang with busshes upon the sign."

L. 109, 1521. A composition relating to a brewhouse, formerly called "the Pott on the Hoop," but at the date of the composition "the Pewter Pott," in the parish of St. Andrew.

L. 31, 1566. A bargain, in which the dean and chapter are concerned, relating to the land upon which the Royal Exchange was afterwards built.

Manors.

C. 155, circ. 1300. This MS. is very beautifully written on a parchment roll 18 feet long, the head being protected by a leathern flap lined with silk.

It is entitled, "Redditus assisus omnium maneriorum Ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar." Under the name of each manor are set out the rents, whether in money, labour, or produce, with the terms at which they severally become due.

For example, under the title "Monkton" are first shown the money rents, payable at twelve different times in each year; then follow these items:—

De Cotmannis ad duos terminos xs.

De terra Turk fabri apud Brokeshend xiiis. iiiid.

De novo kydello iis. (probably a kettle-net on the shore).

De alio kydello vid.

De Johanne Noldun vid.

Item de Stongrunde iis. ixl.

Summa xxxxi. xxiiis. iiiid. ob.

¶ Vomeres xii. ¶ Esperduz ferri i. ¶ Agni xxxiii. ¶

De quolibet messuagio i gallum et unam gallinam qui modo amuntat ad dlx. ¶ Ova MD. scilicet de qualibet domo v ova.

C. 158, circ. 1400. A long parchment roll having the title, "Donationes et acquisitiones maneriorum cum ecclesiis totius prioratus ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar. concesse et confirmate ut inferius patet."

This MS. schedules all the gifts of real estate made to the church, together with the donors' names and the dates of the benefactions.

The series begins in the year five hundred fourscore and seventeen, being the thirty-fifth of Ethelbert, who "dedit Augustino palatium suum, in quo fundata est ecclesia Cantuar. et in nomine Sci. Salvatoris dedicata est;" the last acquisition is the manor of Selgrave which Prior Chillenden purchased in 1400 from the widow of Ralph Spickernell. The title and the several heads are rubricated, and on the back is the signature, "Thomas Goldstone monachus ecclesie Xpi. Cantuarie," written by the same hand as the body of the deed.

C. 184, 1392. A receipt for a sum of 58l. 6s. 8d., being part payment of a larger sum of 83l. 6s. 8d. paid by the Prior of Ch. Ch. to Eliz. Spigurnell. This money was probably paid for the manor of Selgrave.

C. 157. The draft from which C. 158 was copied.

C. 156. The full notes from which the draft C. 157 was condensed. This contains many particulars which were omitted in the copies; thus after recording the gift of Walworth in 1051 this MS. further explains, "Predictam villam Edmundus rex dedit cuidam joculatori suo nomine Hitardo. Tempore tandem regis Edmundi, (Edwardi. P), idem Hitardus volens limina Apostolorum Rome (adire), venit ad ecclesiam Xpi. in Dorobernia, et, per consensum et concessionem ejusdem regis Edwardi, dedit eandem villam eidem ecclesie; cartam quoque ejusdem terre posuit super altare Xpi., que carta habetur adhuc in eadem ecclesia."

Arabic numerals are here used to express the dates.

C. 160, 1438. A long roll of eight sheets of paper entitled—

"Annus valor omnium maneriorum, domorum, terrarum, et tenementorum, venerabilium et religiosorum Prioris et Conventus ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar. tam in Comitatu Kancie, quam in diversis aliis Comitatibus Anglie, a festo Sci. Michaelis anno regni regis Henrici Sexti xxi^{mo}. usque idem festum extunc proxime sequens . . . per unum annum integrum."

This survey displays the names of the manors, &c. in the left-hand margin, and opposite to each is written the annual rent, if the property were let out to farm; or the various items of revenue in labour, money, or produce, if the convent retained the property in their own hands.

The gross receipts amounted to 2,107l. 8s. 3⁴d. and $\frac{1}{2}$ of a farthing, equal in terms of marks to 3,175 marks 21 pence and $\frac{1}{2}$ of a farthing.

The expenses were 1,132l. 4s. 10d., leaving a net profit of 984l. 0s. 10¹d.

This erroneous result was arrived at by the scribe after several failures and consequent erasures, the results of long computations in Roman numerals.

C. 161, 1540. "Nuper Monasterium Ecclesie Xpi. in Civitate Cantuarie."

"Supervisus sive breve extantum . . . terrarum, tenementorum, et aliarum possessionum, tam temporalium quam spiritualium, dicto nuper monasterio tempore dissolutionis ejusdem, viz. 5^{to} die Aprilis Anno regni regis H. 8^o, 31^{mo}. pertinentium sive spectantium, diversis pratis nuper per dominum regem Xtofero Hales militi datis et concessis tantummodo exceptis. Captus per Joh. Wylde supervisorem et auditorem ibidem mense Junii Anno regne regis predicti 32^{do}."

After the title there follows a complete schedule of the several possessions, to each of which the gross and net value are annexed.

The manors, &c. belonging to St. Augustines' Abbey are included in the schedule.

C. 162, early 18th cent. A paper headed "Dean and Chapter."

"The names of the several mannors and the severall courts to the same belonging and the severall officers yearly chosen at the court leets."

Monasteries and Individuals in Society with Christ Church.

A. 25, circ. 1175. The Abp. of Lyons provides a continental refuge for the Abps. of Canterbury.

B. 390, circ. 1200. A letter from the Abbot of St. Bertin to the Prior of Canterbury.

The letter forms the prelude to a solemn compact by which the two houses bind themselves to the performance of acts of mutual charity.

E. 191, 1336. A mortuary roll, to which are subscribed the "Tituli" of several monasteries.

(See a paper by Mr. J. G. Nichols, "Archæol. Journal," Norwich, Vol.)

This MS. is written upon three membranes, neatly joined, with paste, forming a roll of 7 feet in length.
It contains 127 lines of manuscript, beside the grandly illuminated initial word, which occupies the first line.
The central space of the capital letter at the head of the document is filled in with a full-length portrait of the deceased, John Hotham, Bp. of Ely. He is dressed in alb, dalmatic, and chasuble; on his head is a low broad mitre, and in his left hand an ornamental pastoral staff.

The composition takes the form of a notice addressed by the Prior of the Cathedral Church of Ely to all Christian people, announcing the death of the bishop of his diocese:—

" Onus carnis deposuit . . . desolati filii plangimus patrem piissimum, oves pastorem optimum, monachi abbatem dignissimum, clerici presulem serenissimum, plebs prelatum, et navicula Petri gubernatorem pru-dentissimum, filii denique patrem qui nos fovit et aluit quemadmodum gallina congregat pullos suos sub alas.
Grex pusillus pastorem plangimus qui nos de ore
leonis, et a luporum rapacitate liberavit."

The rest of the MS. is filled with an enumeration of the virtues of the deceased, composed in the same turgid style. The public offices which the bishop had filled are described, and the Old Testament is ransacked to find parallels to his surpassing qualities.

Lastly, the prayers of the faithful are asked for one who, with all his virtues, was yet a sinner, "nam sep-cies in die cadit justus, et nemo mundus a sorde, nec " infans quidem unius diei." Giving the keynote to the monasteries whose tituli are to follow, the writer adds a prayer, "Creator omnium rerum faciat nos seipsum revelata facie contemplari. Anima dni. Johannis de Hotham quondam Epi. Eliensis, et anime
" omnium fidelium defunctorum, per misericordiam
" Dei, requiescant in pace. Amen. Nostri defuncti
" sint vobis in pace juncti."

After this follow the suffrages of twenty-five monasteries, of various orders, to each of which this roll was carried. An example will show the formula used by all:—

" Titulus ecclesie Scc. Marie et Sci. Benedicti Ramesieie.
Anima dni. Johis. Epi. Eliensis, et anime omnium fidelium defunctorum, per misericordiam Dei, requiescant in pace. Amen. Oramus pro vestris, orate pro nostris."

These last words are sometimes exchanged for the verse "Vestris nostra damus, pro nostris vestra rogamus."

C. 165, 1221. In this long memorandum of monastic expenses several items refer to the custom of giving notice of deaths to associated monasteries.

" It. Portitori rotuli pro Willelmo Priore xi sol. iiiiid."
" Pro eodem rotulo faciendo ii sol. xd."

Several examples show that the death of a single monk was announced by a "breve," the rotulus being reserved for prelates.

" It. Portitori brevis pro Honorio monacho viiid., " is one example out of many.

B. 394, 1497. A note, sent with a "rotulus," by the Abbot of St. Bertin, announcing the death of the late abbot, and claiming the usual spiritual good offices.

The note ends with a mention of the rotulus, which the bearer carried from one monastery to another, and a hint that a dated titulus was expected. "Diem vero qua
" dictus presentium lator ad vos venerit pro premissis
" in rotulo nostro annotetis, ac eidem nuncio cum per
" vos transierit, pietatis intuitu et amore nostri, victus
" necessarios, sicut vobis et vestris in casu consimili
" nos velletis esse facturos, humaniter ministretis."

Corrodies.

The custom of granting rations of food and drink from the kitchen of the monastery, in exchange for benefactions, is illustrated by several documents in this collection.

C. 177, 1175-77. This is taken as a typical example.
During the incumbency of Prior Benedict, John Calderson gave to the convent property in Canterbury, in return for which the convent ensured to Mahalt, his wife, a daily supply of food, and an annual gift of clothing from the stores of the monastery. "Nos autem con-
" cessimus Mahalt uxori Johannis, quamdiu vixerit, sin" gulis diebus unum panem qualem monachi habent, et
" unum pleinpein, et unum transversum, et tres galones
" cerevisie monachorum, et unum ferculum generale,
" aut duo, sicut unus de monachis in die habuerit. Con-
" cessimus eciam eidem Mahalt unam pelliciam, et unas
" bottas, singulis annis quibus monachi eas habuerint,
" quamdiu ipsa vixerit, post obitum vero dicte Mahalt
" nullus heredum . . . aliqua poterit clamare," &c.

L. 251. Odo, the prior, grants to W. Fitz-Archibald and Agnes his wife, and their sons, society with the Chapter of Canterbury. Also two corrodies in the cellar for themselves and two men, if they come once or twice a year to visit the shrines of the saints in the church. In consideration of these favours, William gives to the prior and convent an acre and a half of land, for which they are bound to pay a quitrent of 16 pence.

F. 12. Similar privileges are granted to W. de Einesford, a benefactor.

The Kings of England, by usurpation, or as an ac-knowledgegment of obligations which the monks owed for protection or toleration, had come to claim the right of having two corrodies or daily allowances set down to their credit in the kitchen of Ch. Ch., an annual money payment sometimes superseding the daily delivery of food.

C. 89, 1337. Edward III. undertakes that the gift of these two corrodies "non trahantur in consuetudinem,
" nec eorundem Prioris et Conventus, aut successorum
" suorum, seu domus sue, cedant in prejudicium."

C. 95, 1398. Shows that the warranty of Edw. III.
had not much relieved the monks, for here is an ac-knowledgegment by Richard II. that the two corrodies, one valued at 20 marks in money, and the other being the maintenance of one man, had been duly drawn down to the day of the date; the names even of the holders of the corrodies are given both in the time of the grandfather and the grandson. In order to give effectual relief to the monastery he agrees to forego the patronage of the corrodies, if the convent will engage on their part to observe the anniversary of Anne his first wife, and after his own death will for ever keep the two festivals of St. Edmund the King—the day, that is, of the death, and that of the translation—as a commemoration of Richard himself, making mention of his name.

Norwich.

N. 26, 1302. Inspecimus by Henry Prior of Ch. Ch. of a deed of Abp. Peckham. When Abp. Peckham, in 1281, made a visitation of Norwich Cathedral, the bishop requested him to inspect and confirm the charters belonging to the church. The Abp., having inspected these charters, caused copies to be made on three rolls, and these he confirmed by affixing his seal twenty years after. Prior Henry caused this copy of Abp. Peckham's inspecimus to be made, apparently intending by attaching his seal to still further confirm the charters, but from some cause the seal was not affixed, and the confirmation remained at Canterbury instead of going to Norwich, which was its first destination.

DEAN AND CHAPTER OF CANTER-
BURY.

The charters recited are,—

1. Bp. Herbert Losing's foundation deed, endowing the cathedral which he had built.
2. A confirmation of the same by Paschal II.
3. Confirmation by Abp. Anselm, who records that before the date of his deed both William II. and Henry I. had given charters of protection and approval. Anselm's deed is signed by twelve bishops and nine abbots.
4. Charter of Abp. Thomas of Canterbury, granting and confirming to the church of Holy Trinity, Norwich, the church of St. Giles, in the eastern part of the same city.
5. Bp. W. Ralee's gift of the church of Banburg [Bawburgh].
6. Bp. John (of Oxford) gives the church of St. Margaret de Lenna (Lynn).
7. Gift of the church of St. German, by the same Bp. John.
8. Charter of Bp. Eborhard, who bestows upon the church of Norwich all his rights in the churches of Becham, Hempsted, and Plumsted, together with several parcels of tithes and services.
9. Bp. Eborhard confirms to the church of Norwich all the privileges and possessions which it has rightfully acquired. The bishop's bailiffs have harassed the convent by trespassing, and he believes that these injuries arose from the ignorance of the bailiffs of what were the bounds of the possessions of the convent; to avoid a repetition of the offences he enumerates all the manors, &c. to which the convent can lay claim.
- Among the benefactors he mentions Henry I. and Stephen, who bestowed "homines" as freely as they did tithes and acres.
10. A Bishop John bestows the church of Hundringham [Hindringham] upon the cellarer's office in the monastery.
- After these recitals is copied Abp. Peckham's confirmation, and this is followed by that of Prior Henry, with the date 1302.
- N. 4, 1330. Composition between Norwich and Canterbury, concerning jurisdiction, sede Norwic. vacante.
- N. 5. A duplicate of the last.
- N. 6. Abp. Mepham's confirmation of the same.
- N. 8. Confirmation of the same by the Bp. of Norwich.
- N. 27. Abp. Mepham's exemplification and confirmation of the same.
- N. 24, 13th cent. A certificate, sub manu publica, concerning the charters by which the Augustinian priory of Thorney held its possessions and privileges.
- N. 1, 1249. Certificate by the Prior of Canterbury, affirming that he has inspected a deed of Bp. Walter (Suffield) of Norwich, which itself was an inapeximus of a charter of Thomas, formerly Bp.
- The charter endows the office of the cellarer in the Norwich monastery with various parcels of tithes. A second charter endows the hospital of St. Paul in Norwich.
- N. 3, 1283. Small expenses, chiefly for repairs about the court of the Norwich monastery.
- N. 7, 1316. Confirmation by the Abp. and the Prior of Canterbury of the ordination of a chantry of four priests which Bp. John Salmon of Norwich had founded in the chapel of St. John the Evangelist, at the western end of the cathedral church.
- The church of Westhale was appropriated to the chantry by way of endowment. Beneath the chapel was a crypt, concerning which the founder provides, "in carnario autem subtus dictam capellam Sci. Jo-hannis, ossa humana in civitate Norwici humata, de licencia Sacriste qui pro tempore fuerit (hiatus), custodiam (hiatus . . .) ad resurrectionem generalem honestius conserventur, a carnibus integre denudata, reponi volumus et observari."
- N. 28, 1396. A decree of the Cardinal Cosmatius (tit. Sec. Crucis in Jerusalem, afterwards Innocent VII.), the judge deputed by the Pope to arbitrate in a dispute between the Bp. of Norwich and the convent of Holy Trinity.
- N. 10, 1398. A gift, by Henry Bp. of Norwich, of the church of Holm-by-the-sea to the monastery of Lilleshall, Salop. The abbot and convent begged the profits of the church; of which they were the patrons, alleging that their House, situated on a great high road, was impoverished by the practice of necessary hospitality.
- N. 9, 1370-1407. Ten pieces of parchment, each of which contains several copies of certificates of orders conferred under the direction of Henry Spencer, Bp. of Norwich. In many cases the orders were conferred by foreign bishops, acting as suffragans for the bishop of the diocese.

Johannes Smerniensis Archiepiscopus, and Thomas Aladensis Episcopus, are the outlandish prelates who assisted Bishop Henry; and on one occasion Simon Sudbury, then Bp. of London and afterwards Abp. of Canterbury, undertook the duty.

N. 12, 1479. A certificate, under the seal of the bailiffs of Great Yarmouth, testifying that in a suit of frisse forcie Thomas Bosome Prior of Norwich recovered from Robert Swolle an annual rent of 13s. 4d., with arrears and costs.

N. 11, 1454. Inventory of goods in the priory of Lenn Episcopi, taken at the accession of a new prior. The articles are the very homely movables of a small convent.

N. 14, 15, 1500. Sede Norwyc. vacante. The Norwich convent nominate three monks, from whom one is to be chosen by the Prior of Canterbury to act as commissary of the Norwich diocese.

N. 16, temp. Henry VIII. and Edw. VI. A parchment roll entitled, "Valor annualis possessionum . . . nuper Priori et Conventui Sce. Trinitatis Norwic. pertinentium." Also several sheets of paper, once fastened together, containing a schedule of the lands, &c. possessed by the Cathedral Church of Norwich, temp. Edwardi VI.

N. 17, 1602. "Dr. Suclyng's discharge for the tenth due 45 Eliz."

A statement on parchment of the amounts received by Edw. Brown, the collector of a tenth levied upon all ecclesiastical benefices in the diocese of Norwich.

N. 55, 1556. A statement of accounts, made by the collector of rents belonging to the Cathedral Church of Norwich.

Oxford.

These papers chiefly relate to Canterbury College, founded in 1362 by Abp. Islip.

O. 127, 1362. Licence granted by Edward III. to Abp. Simon Islip, authorising him to found a college in Oxford, and to endow it with lands, statuto, &c. non obstante.

The King mentions the great pestilence in words which show that after twelve years it had not quite ceased, "Desiderantes incrementum salubre cleri nostri, propter multiplicationem doctrine salutaris que jam per presentem epidemiam noscitur plurimum defuisse."

O. 128, 1363. Grant and confirmation by William de Islip of the manor of Wodeford in Northants, "custodi et clericis Aule collegiate Cantuarie in universitate Oxon. noviter fundate."

O. 129, 1363. A confirmation under the seal of Abp. Islip of the gift of Woodford by W. de Islip.

Alluding to the pestilence he writes, "Quia per sapientiam, sic non absque sudore et laboribus adquisitam, reguntur regna, et in justicia consonanter ecclesia militans germinat, et sua diffundit tentoria; nos Simon, &c., ad hec sepius revolventes intima cordis nostri, ac considerantes veros in omni sciencia doctos et expertos in epidemiis presertim plurimum defuisse, paucissimosque, propter defectum exhibitionis, ad presens insistere studio litterarum," &c.

O. 130, 1372. Rough draft, on paper, of a confirmation by Abp. W. Wittelsey, of Abp. Islip's appropriation of the church of Pagham to Cant. Coll., Oxon.

P. 22, 1372. The deed of which O. 130 is the draft, executed by the Abp. and bearing his seal.

O. 131, 1373. Licence in mortmain granted by Edward III., permitting certain benefactors to bestow lands on Cant. Coll.

The Abbot of Abingdon is allowed to give a messuage and three shillings of rent. The Prior of St. Frideswyde six messuages and six tofts. W. Dinaut and John de Bolton a messuage. Thomas of Gloucester a messuage. The Abbess of Godstow a messuage. The Master and scholars of Baylholhalle a messuage.

O. 133, 1399. A charter of Henry IV. confirming two charters of Richard II., the first of which is in its turn a confirmation of the licence of Edward III. (O. 132).

O. 140, 1393. Cant. Coll. having become indebted to T. Tyrwhit, the Master of Balyolhall, in the sum of hundred marks, has settled upon the creditor an annual rent of 26s. 8d., to be received out of the manor of Newington, Oxon, in return for which the creditor discharges the college from present payment of the principal sum.

S. B. b. 68, 1396 and 1397. "Compotus Dni. Willelmi Chert, custodis Collegii Cant. Oxon. de opere novo."

This is the warden's statement of all the expenses, given in great detail, incurred by Prior Chillenden on account of the reconstruction of the college. It is written upon a folio sheet of paper, folded so as to accommodate four columns of items. Every day's work is charged: freestone for the gate, commoner Headington stone for the walls, Stonesfield slates for the roof, and lime for the pargetting, all bought in small quantities as the work demanded, are recorded with the price of each article; even twenty pence given, "ex curialitate," to the masons under the name of glove money (pro cirotecis) are charged in the bill.

S. B. b. 141, 1473. Annual statement of account made by the Warden of Cant. Coll. A much decayed paper recording the ordinary receipts and expenses of the Coll. From some of the items, which are plainly sums received for rent of rooms, it appears that other monasteries beside Christ Church, Canterbury, retained chambers to be occupied by their students, who, whilst enjoying the advantages offered by the teaching of the University, would still be restrained by the rule of St. Benedict. The following are examples:—

("Reddit compotum) de xs. receptis pro camera Wyof ton, viiis. receptis de Erysham, vs. de Roff., vs. de "fratre de Batell, xs. de Coventre chambyr." One of the Ch. Ch. letters relates that the Peterborough undergraduates, being disorderly, were expelled from this college, and went to Gloster Coll.; then that they were again received at Cant. Coll., whence, as a punishment for renewed disorders, they were sent home to their own monastery.

O. 139, 1371. A document which shows that even before the foundation of Cant. Coll. the Black Monks had made provision for the education of their brethren at the university, without permitting any relaxation of monastic discipline.

By this deed the Prior and convent of Canterbury convey to the Abbot and convent of Westminster, a house which they have hitherto owned "in communi manso nigrorum monachorum . . . in Stokewelle-strete . . . in suburbio Oxonie."

The grant has annexed to it this condition, that if at any time the scholars belonging to Ch. Ch., Cant., should be expelled by law from the college which they inhabited at the time of this grant, then, that the Abbot of Westminster should resign this tenement in the Benedictine manse, and restore it to the convent of Canterbury.

O. 134, O. 135, O. 136, O. 137. Inventories of the goods of Canterbury Coll. in the years 1443, 1459, 1510, 1514 respectively. All the movables of the college are here recorded under the heads,—

1. Libri inventi in librario, et in studiis custodis et aliorum fratrum.

2. Libri juris canonici et civilis inventi in librario.

3. Libri philosophie in librario.

4. Libri reperti in cubiculis fratrum.

5. Reperta in capella.

6. Reperta in cubiculo custodis.

7. Reperta in promptuario.

8. Reperta in coquina.

O. 141, 1500. Prior Goldstone, vicegerent of the Abp. sede vacante, appoints W. Broke, Vice-Warden of All Souls' Coll., Oxon. The nomination had lapsed to the Abp., and Prior Goldstone, as his representative, made the appointment.

O. 131, early 16th cent. "Secundum et ultimum scrutinium" in the election of a Warden of All Souls'.

In this paper each of 23 fellows, in an autograph formula, nominates two persons, one a jurist, the other a graduate in arts, thus:—

"Ego W. Broke, juris Canonici Doctor, nomino pro officio custodis hos duos viros, Magistrum Robertum Kent sacre theologie Doctorem, et Magistrum Thomam Love in Jure Baccalaureum."

S. B. b. 187, 1504. A statement of the manner in which Abp. Merton's legacies were applied for the advancement of learning. Many of the halls in which recipients of the Abp.'s bounty resided are now forgotten. "Aula Angularis, Aula de Hynksey, Locus de la New Yn, Aula Trinitatis, Aula de Aulburne, Hospicium Novum, Aula Laurencii" would all be difficult to find, except perhaps that "Aula de Aulburne" might be identified in Merton Street. The account ends with the statement that there had been expended in one year, "pro exhibitionibus scolasticorum, . . . ultra exhibitiones duorum confratrum nostrorum domo nostra Cant. studentium," 60*l.* 1*s.*

Payments on account of Proceedings in the Roman Curia.

B. 205, 1275. Prior Ringmere sends money and a gold ornament as a fee to his proctor at Rome.

S. B. c. 9, 1277. John of Battle, formerly proctor of Ch. Ch. at the Pontifical court, having incurred debts in Italy, has left them to be defrayed by the new proctor, Robert Poucyn. Poucyn went from one creditor to another, accompanied by a notary and other witnesses, in whose presence he paid the money, the notary recording the payment on this parchment.

Angelo Girardi is paid 1 mark four shillings and four pence for fodder and wine.

Clara vidua pauper Jacobi, 20*s.* for wine.

Saltimbene Raynieri, pulletarius, two marks and 10 shillings for poultry and candles.

Blaisins Girardi receives money for hay and wine.

Robertus Anglicus is paid 21*s.*, for which the consideration is not recorded.

Pelegrinus "Marescalcus" is paid for shoeing horses.

Jacobus de Viterbo for grain.

Robertus Nicholaus of Orvieto, tabernarius, for wine.

These payments were made at Viterbo, and the amounts are calculated twice in each case, first in Tournois, grossi and parvi, and then in marks and shillings sterling.

P. 55, 1273. Raymundus de Nogeris, the collector, having calculated that the possessions of Ch. Ch. are worth 1,340 marks a year, accepts 138 marks as the Pope's tenth, and for that sum he gives this receipt.

P. 56, 1280. Rob. de Celeseye, proctor at Rome for the convent of Ch. Ch., has incurred a debt of 250 marks, having borrowed that sum from certain merchants of Pistoja, and he gives a bond to secure the amount with interest. The bond was lodged with Andreas de Gandulfis, a Papal official, who binds himself by the two instruments which are copied on this parchment to restore the bond when the money is paid.

P. 57, 1285. A certificate written by a notary, who testifies that he heard R. de Celeseye say, in the church at Tibur, that, if he had money to pay his debts and to carry him on his journey, he would go home at once.

This is endorsed, "Protestacio R. de Celeseye, sub mant publica, quod si habuit pecuniam in presenti reddere debita a curia recederet." R. de Celeseye was a monk of Ch. Ch. and an advocate for Prior Ringmere.

P. 58, 1286. Receipt given to R. de Celeseye by the butcher Nicholas of Viterbo, to whom he has paid a bill of 15*s.* 9*d.*, and 20 florins for borrowed money.

P. 59, 1286. A similar receipt for 17*s.* 4*d.* on account of money paid to Ficus de Penisio, who describes himself as "pullarius curiam Romanam sequens."

C. 1, 286. A notarial certificate, having the force of a bond, by which R. de Celeseye promises to repay 50 marks which he has borrowed from certain Italian merchants.

O. 227, 1296. Notary's certificate testifying that the Prior of Ch. Ch. has paid to Osbert of Florence a sum of 800 marks which he had borrowed from Osbert and the guild to which he belonged, for the purpose of helping the business of the convent at the Roman Court.

A. 190, 1297. Abp. Winchelsey undertakes to repay to the convent 1,744 marks which he borrowed from them to meet the expenses at Rome consequent upon his election.

C. 224, 1289. Receipt given to the prior by Philip de Pomonte and Nicholas de Seo. Victorio, his proctors at Rome, for the amount of their salaries due at the date.

C. 1, 289, 1278. The collectors in England of the Pope's tenth acknowledge that they have received from the Prior of Canterbury, 500*l.* which they had lodged with him for safe keeping.

K. 10, 1300. In a similar transaction the prior, when the money was demanded, proved that he had paid certain portions of the amount to the sub-collectors, and the balance to the Italian merchants who were authorised to receive it.

M. 343, 1282. Letter of instructions from Martin IV. to G. de Vezano, his collector in England, Ireland, and Scotland. He gives him authority to commute personal service in the Holy Land for a money payment, and he authorises him to employ ecclesiastical censures against all those who, having promised, neglect to pay.

C. 223, 1278. Receipts given to the prior for payments connected with the Pope's tenth.

Payments, Sundry.

C. 184, 1339. Promissory note given by the Prior of Ch. Ch. to the Archdeacon of Canterbury, from whom he had borrowed 120*l.* to defray necessary expenses.

C. 219, 1223. Receipt from Abp. Stephen Langton for a sum of 300 marks which he received from the monastery of Ch. Ch. in payment of two sums of 200 and 100 marks borrowed from him by the convent.

OF CANTER-
BURY.

Primacy.

A. 1, 1072. The accord entered into by the Abps. of Canterbury and York concerning the supremacy of the former see. This parchment is attested by the signatures of the King, the Queen, Hubert the legate, thirteen bishops, and eleven abbots, and for further corroboration the King's Great Seal is affixed to the lower end of the instrument. The seal in this case is not suspended in the usual manner by strings, but is attached, or as it is termed 'appliqué,' to the membrane itself. A circular piece as large as a sixpence was cut out of the parchment; then, two pieces of wax having been softened, one was applied to each side of the membrane, touching and adhering to each other at the hole; after this, the seal being impressed on one side and the counterseal on the other, the wax spread out into a flat surface on either side of the parchment.

The document is written in a clear, clerkly hand upon fine parchment, the body of the deed and the signatures being all executed by one pen.

†Ego hubt. sce. romane eccle. lector et dom. Alexandri pape legat. subscripsi.

†Ego lanfranc^o dorobernensis Archieps. subscripsi.

†Ego Thomas eboracensis Archieps concedo.

†Ego uualohelin^o uentan^o ep^o. subscripsi.

†Ego remigi^o doraces tensis ep^o. subscripsi.

†Ego erfastus tetfortensis eps. subscripsi.

†Ego nul stānus unigornensis eps subscripsi.

There is so much variety of character in the penmanship of these signatures that it is impossible to resist the conclusion that each of them is the work of the person whose name it expresses, except that of Erfastus, whose tremulous hand was only able to delineate his cross. An examination of the bold, square, upstanding autograph of the Bp. of Worcester tempts one to believe, that as his certainly expresses the transparent and firm character of the writer, so the other witnesses may have furnished in their signatures some materials for estimating their moral qualities.

One clause, "Ventilata est autem hec causa prius apud Uentanam civitatem, in Pascali solemnitate, in capella regia que sita est in Castello; postea in villa regia que vocatur Vuindisor, ubi et finem accepit, in presentia Regis, Episcoporum, Abbatum diversorum ordinum, qui congregati erant apud curiam in festivitate Pentecostes," which occurs at the end of A. 1, is not found in A. 2.

As this clause is a note rather than a part of the contract, neither of the contracting parties being in any way affected by it, there is no reason why the clerk should not have added it when, after the signatures had been subscribed to A. 2, the original, he made the copy A. 1, which was plainly intended for public exhibition.

A. 24, late 13th century. A parchment (15 inches by 9), entitled "Infrascripta dicunt Prior et Capitulum ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar. pro jure et libertate ejusdem ecclesie, videlicet."

After which follow six paragraphs of arguments showing why the Abp. of Canterbury, as patriarch and primate, not as Archbishop, may lawfully carry his cross erect throughout Britain, whilst the Abp. of York may only do so in his own province.

This MS., belonging to the time of Edward I., is connected with those which follow.

A. 189, 1299. A letter from Abp. Winchelsey to the prior at Canterbury, dated from Lincolnshire.

He writes, "Exposito serius domino Regi apud Kaerlaverok in Scociam per nos, viarum et aquarum discriminibus et periculis variis fatigatos, papali nuncio nobis injuncto, per Eboracensem provinciam, et juxta civitatem ipsam, precedente nos sancte crucis vexillo erecto, die Sabati ante acceptionem litterarum vestrarum, Dei gratia, in provinciam nostram absque impedimento venimus incolumes et robusti sine dampno," &c.

A. 193, 1305. A letter from Abp. Winchelsey to the prior at Canterbury.

The Abp., hearing that the Abp. of York is coming over from the continent, warns the prior that there will be an attempt to carry the cross, and possibly to confer benediction, both of which are to be prevented by the

This composition, and the MS. itself, have been known to historians from very early times, and in all cases where it is quoted the attesting bishops and abbots are reported to be in number thirteen and eleven respectively.

Now we find that there is another MS. (A. 2.) a duplicate of A. 1; and this, which the historians appear never to have inspected, is the deed actually executed by the royal and dignified personages whose names are subscribed to A. 1.

Here the signatures all appear to be in autograph; even the bold cross of the King and the more delicate one of the Queen seem to have been traced by the royal hands, the pen of Lanfranc being employed to verify them by the words "signum unilelmi regis," and "signum Mathildis regine," respectively.

The contracting parties and the subscribing witnesses, who in this case are only four in number, affixed their signatures in the following order:—

prior and his deputies, "alioquin omnia loca ipsa per que erecta cruce transitum fecerit, seu moram, supplicationis ecclesiastico interdicto. Inhibeatis et, seu inhiberi faciatis, omnibus subditis nostris, sub pena excommunicationis, ne se ad ejus benedictionem taliter incedentis inclinent, seu tali transitu vel mora campanas pulsare sustineant, aut ipsius presumptionibus faveant quovis modo, presumptores in contrarium per quasunque censuras ecclesiasticas compescendo. Ne saltem loca jurisdictionis vestre videatur in nostri prejudicium libere et pacifice transire, et nos per dissimulationem hujus videamur ipsius injurie consentire," &c.

Y. 57, 1109. A letter from Abp. Anselm to certain suffragans, warning them to take their cue from him in the matter of Thomas II. Abp. of York.

"Mando et precipio vobis, per sanctam obedientiam quam ecclesie Cant. et michi debetis, ut, secundum quod in subjectis litteris quas Thome Electo Ebor. destinavi scriptum est, vos erga ipsum Thomam omnimodo teneatis.

"Anselmus Arch. Cant. et totius Britannie primas loquor loquens . . . tibi interdico atque precipio ne te de aliqua cura pastoralis ullo modo presumas intermittere, donec a rebellionem quam contra ecclesiam Cant. incepisti recedas, et subjectionem quam antecessores tui, Tomas videlicet et Gerardus . . . antiqua consuetudine professi sunt," &c.

R. 47, circ. 1180. "Transcriptum privilegii Alex. (III.) "Pape de subjectione Roffensis ecclesie." The Pope, addressing Prior Alan, confirms the authority which Canterbury always exercised over the daughter church of Rochester. "Sed omnem subjectionem et reverentiam vobis et Archiepiscopo vestro, tam in dispositione rerum ipsius ecclesie, quam in substitutione Episcopi, et in aliis incensus futuris decernimus temporibus conservandas," &c.

A. 41. Professions of obedience made by abbots. Eleven small slips of parchment, containing professions of obedience to the Abp. made in the 12th century by various Kentish abbots at the time of their consecration. "Ego frater Henricus Sancte Radegundis Abbas electus profiteor sancte Cantuar. ecclesie ejusque vicariis canonicam obedientiam" is an example.

Of two endorsements on the profession of an Abbot of Boxley, one reads, "Hoc in Anno (1150) venit Henricus Comes Andagavensium et Dux Northmannorum in Angliam"; and the other gives an account of the consecration as Abp. of York of Roger Archdeacon of Canterbury, by Abp. Theobald; the Abp. Elect having been preferred to priest's orders a few days before in the infirm chapel at Canterbury.

AND CHAPTER OF CANTER-BURY.

AN AND LATER
REV.

C. 118 and C. 119. Original professions of obedience made by suffragan bishops to the Archbishop at the time of their consecration.

The series of these professions begins in the days of Lanfranc, and extends to those of Abp. Peckham at the end of the 13th century.

There are 160 slips of parchment, representing as many consecrations, upon each of which a suffragan promises canonical obedience to the primate.

In early days these compositions were diffuse in style, the phraseology varying with the taste of the writer, but as time went on, a short, business-like formula was adopted excluding all irrelevant matter.

The consecration of Ralph of Chichester, which took place in 1091, after the death of Lanfranc and before the consecration of Anselm, was performed by Thomas I., Abp. of York, as is shown by the profession made at the time.

"Ego Radulfus Sce. Cicestrensis Ecclesie nunc ordinandus Episcopus, subjectionem, et reverentiam, et obedientiam a sanctis patribus constitutam, secundum precepta canonum, Sancte Cantuar. ecclesie et ejus rectoribus, in presentia Domini Archiepiscopi Thome, perpetuo exhibitorum promitto, et super sanctum altare propria manu firmo."

The early Welsh bishops accepted Anselm's supremacy without scruple, and styled him "totius Britannie primas." The profession of Urban of Llandaff is an example of this.

On the back of the profession made by Robt. (de Chesney) of Lincoln is a memorandum relating the particulars of Abp. Theobald's return from St. Audoen to England, at a time when he thought that his presence might mitigate the troubles of church and people.

During the primacy of Boniface the reservation "salvo ordine meo" is constantly inserted, and at the same period the date of the consecration is usually written on the back of the profession, with a memorandum of the day on which the profession was made. In consequence of the Abp.'s long absence from England, consecration and profession were often separated by some distance of time.

In one case there is a note explaining the absence of some suffragans from the ceremony of a consecration, "quatuor vero Episcopi Walenses non potuerunt venire nec mittere propter guerram."

Endorsed on the profession of John Bp. of Winton (1282), a foreigner, is this note, "Iste non fuit electus sed a sede apostolica datus et in curia Romana consecratus."

C. 117. A long roll of contemporary copies of professions of obedience made to Abps. of Canterbury, from the time of Lanfranc to that of Theobald.

The originals of many of these copies are still in the Chartæ Antiquæ.

On the back of this roll are several paragraphs reporting the consecrations of Welsh and Irish bishops by early Abps. of Canterbury.

One example will show the style of the memoranda and the animus which prompted the writers:—

"Anno DCCCCLXIII^e electione facta regum Morgannuc Owain, videlicet, et Idwathlaun Cadel Chenevin, filiorum Morgan Hen, Roderi et Grifud filiorum Ellis-see, et totius cleri, et populi Morgannuc, infra ostium Tarader in Gui, et ostium Tewi, et dati sibi baculo in regali curia a summo rege Anglorum Æthelredo, et a Metropolitano Cantuariensis ecclesie, Ælurico Archiepiscopo, Blederi Episcopo Llandavii consecratus est. Et ab eodem Archiepiscopo, Tamerin Episcopus Sci. Davit, et successor ejus Elnod nepos, Cantuarie consecrati sunt." The enumeration of Welsh bishops ends with Urban of "Clamorgan" or Llandaff, whose original profession is mentioned above, and is also copied on the face of this roll.

C. 120. A roll of eight membranes, which at one time was even longer than at present. It contains copies of a general charter of patronage given by Abp. Becket to the monastery of his church, with a confirmation of the same by Gregory VIII., and lastly, copies of a number of cautionary letters, guarantees from suffragan bishops consecrated out of Canterbury that such consecrations, being celebrated by the special licence of the convent of Ch. Ch., shall not at any time be quoted as precedents to the injury of the convent.

C. 105 to 114, and C. 125 to 143. These are the original "cautiones," copies of which fill the last-mentioned roll.

Mixed with these are a few "littere excusatorie," apologies sent by suffragans who, having been summoned to assist at consecrations, were unable to attend.

D. 108. Bernard of St. David's, a Norman by birth (1115 to 1147), after taking the oath of canonical obedience to the Abp. of Canterbury, and after receiving consecration from his hand, began to claim for his church metropolitical jurisdiction in Wales.

The MS. D. 108, 1145-7, is a long report sent by Nigel of Ely to Eugenius III., formally charging the Bishop of St. David's with an intention of withdrawing from his subjection to Canterbury.

C. 134, C. 136, and C. 137. The same form, word for word, as the last, and addressed to the Pope by Rob. Bathon, R. Exon, and R. Hereford respectively.

D. 107. A letter to the same Pope on the same subject, written by Henry of Blois, Bp. of Winchester. The form in this case varies from the others which precede it.

Priors, Election of.

C. 1,300, 1339. Abp. Stratford's declaration and confirmation of the election of Robert Hathbrand to be prior of Ch. Ch.

C. 1,302, 1390. Abp. Courtney's declaration and confirmation of the election of Prior Thomas Chillenden.

Procurations, Papal.

In 1374 Gregory the XI., with the approbation of the Kings of England and France, sent commissioners to Bruges with authority to act as mediators between the monarchs. The Nuntii were three in number, to each of whom a daily stipend of florins of gold was assigned, and at the end of the mission they made a demand upon the clergy of England for the amount which had become due.

On August 19 the Nuntii sent a notice (P. 51) to the Prior of Canterbury demanding of him as vicegerent of the Archbishop, sede vacante, a sum of 4,416 florins, being the total amount earned by a hundred and twenty days of official duty.

The Prior in a very submissive letter (Ch. Ch. letters 21) protested that the money could not be collected within the allotted time of thirty days. The letter appears to have procured a respite, and active measures were taken by the Prior to satisfy the demand by a rate of an obolus in the mark on all ecclesiastical incomes. Among the Chartæ Antiquæ are returns made by the responsible officers of the dioceses of London, Salisbury, Worcester, and St. David's, giving a list of the benefices, and the sum at which each was assessed.

Ch. Ch. letters 22. A letter of remonstrance sent by Simon Sudbury, then Bp. of London, to Ralph Kesteven, the collector of the procurations.

An exactly similar demand was again made upon the Prior, during the same vacancy of the see, by Pileus Abp. of Ravenna, who by virtue of apostolic letters from the same Pope, dated September 1373, demanded 1,200 florins as payment for a hundred days of services in some way rendered to the English Church.

Again a prolongation of the days of payment was asked for, and apparently obtained, for in January and February of the next year the returns were still coming in from Salisbury, Worcester, and Rochester.

An income tax of a farthing in the pound was levied to satisfy this demand.

The MSS. bearing upon this subject will be found in the catalogue by the references P. 50 to 70.

C. 1,273, 1373. The Cardinal of Cluny, having been deputed to mediate between John de Montfort and Charles of Blois, in order to bring about a satisfactory settlement of the affairs of Brittany, came over to England and charged the expenses of his journey upon the clergy of England. In this MS. Edward III. warns Abp. William that he is not to submit to the extortion, and he promises that he will back the clergy if they resist the claims of the Nuntio, whose ecclesiastical censures must necessarily be harmless where the cause is so unjust.

The people of England, as the King justly writes, were not in any way concerned in the war of the Breton succession.

Proctors.

There are here large numbers of powers of attorney by which ecclesiastical corporations and individuals appointed proctors to represent them. The affairs entrusted to these proctors are usually matters of small importance, but in a few cases they conducted greater concerns.

C. 180. A person is deputed to sit and vote in the Council of Vienne as the representative of the convent of Canterbury.

During the panic which followed the great pestilence of 1348 the clergy of a number of Kentish rural deaneries appointed in each deanery a proctor to take

R. 38. Three membranes stitched together, entitled, "Ces sont les usages usez en la vill de Romene de temps dount memoire ne court."

This MS., which is written in a character belonging to the latter part of the 14th cent., appears to be identical with one in the library of St. Cath. Coll., Cambridge, which is described by Mr. Riley in the Fourth Report of the Hist. MSS. Commission.

The Cambridge MS., containing other matter in addition to the "customs of the town of Romney," is longer than the present document, which ends with the paragraph marked 11a. in Mr. Riley's report.

B. 381 1435. A half share in a boat bestowed in pious uses.

"Thom. Flory capellanus qui scripsit testamentum cujusdam Thome Perys affirmavit in verbo sacerdotis coram majore et alteris, quod medietas cujusdam batelli, vocati 'Seynte Mary Boot,' que nuper fuit W. Lyon, in custodia dicti Thomas Perys ut unius executorum testamenti dicti Willelmi, deliberaretur Johanni Crouher alio executori, et ut dictus Johannes disponeret dictam medietatem batelli supradicti in pios usus pro anima dicti Willelmi, secundum discretionem suam."

The half share was sold for forty shillings, from which six and eightpence were given to the vicar, the balance being expended on the fabric of the church.

E. 1,246, 1401. A writ of Henry IV., directing his justices, &c., to protect the Cinque Ports in the exercise of those rights which they enjoyed in the days of Henry II., "tempore Regis Henrici proavi Regis Edwardi filii regis Henrici."

Especially the King requires that the inland manor of Bekebourne shall be reckoned a member of the capital port of Hastings, and that John Cobham, Chivaler, and John Doget, shall be entitled to privileges as barons of the Cinque Ports.

Among the privileges specified is one which John Doget, who was a citizen of London, would especially prize, "de propriis vinis suis de quibus negociantur, quieti sint de recta prisca nostra, videlicet de uno dolio vini ante malum, et alio post malum."

The writ also concedes "quod habeant infangenethef, et quod sint wrecfry, et wittefry, et lestagefry, et lonecopfry, et quod habeant utfangenethef in terris suis . . . eodem modo quo Archiepiscopi, Episcopi, Abbates, Comites, et Barones habent in maneriis suis in Comitatu Kancie."

Roman Court, Suits in.

The "Index of Subjects" which is kept in the drawers with the Chart. Ant., contains under the head "Roman Court" references to a large number of documents referring to suits in and appeals to the Curia.

The matters treated of have no material or historical importance, but the series shows the method of procedure, and the costly difficulties which obstructed the suitors.

It is evident that the convent of Ch. Ch. retained a watchful advocate on the spot, who whenever apostolic letters were granted took care to get letters of warranty and indemnity for Ch. Ch., if there were the remotest chance that the interests of the convent would be affected.

M. 342. A form of oath, written upon parchment, in a hand of the 15th cent. "Ye shall no thing sue or procure to be sued in the Court of Rome, nor in noon other place beyond the see, any thing that may be hurting or prejudicial to the King oure sovereigne, or his corowne, nor to any of his subgettis; nor anything doo or attempt, that is or may be contrarie to the lawes of his lande. Ye shall stedfastly and faithfully abyde his trew liegeman," &c.

C. 187, 1486. A petition on paper, presented to Innocent VIII. by Prior William Sellyng in person.

It appears that the prior was employed by the new King to transact some business with the Pope, possibly to obtain an expression of his approbation of the revolutionary changes which had just been made in the English state. He describes himself in this autograph petition as, "Ad serenitatem vestram, per devotissimum ejusdem et Sancte Romane ecclesie filium Henricum septimum, Anglie regem illustrem, pro praestanda serenitati vestre et sede apostolica debita obedientia, orator destinatus."

After this introduction he asks two favours, to each of which the Pope expresses his assent by writing, apparently with his own hand, his "Fiat" opposite to the petition.

In the same hand is added a date "Dat. Rome ap. Stmpetrum Pridie Jd. Junii Anno Tercio."

In different parts of the sheet are scrawled a number of signatures in the form of monograms, which doubtless express the concurrence of as many Papal officials.

Rebellions and Civil Commotions.

C. 245, 1213. A narrow slip of parchment, containing a guarantee that King John shall be compelled to adhere to a "pactum" by which he has undertaken to restore the ancient privileges of the church.

This instrument was executed by twelve of the great barons of the realm, and it still bears their seals in a more or less mutilated state.

The "pactum" alluded to is evidently that which the King signed at Dover, 3 May 1213, whereby he undertook to satisfy the prelates "de restitutione ablatorum," under the penalty of losing his patronage of vacant churches, a penalty especially insisted on in this guarantee (Wendover, Ed. Coxe iii. 248). "Viris venerabilibus et amicis in Xpos sic dilectis, Priori et Monachis ecclesie Sce. Trinitatis Cantuar. G. fil. Petri Comes Essex Justiciarius, R. Comes Bolon., R. Comes Cestrie, W. Comes Warrenne, W. Marescallus Comes Pembrochie, W. Comes Arundell, W. Comes de Ferrariis, Will. Briwer, Rob. de Ros, Gillebertus filius R. ejusdem, Rogerus de Mortuo Mari, et Petrus filius Herberti, salutem, et debitam reverentiam. Sciatis quod bona fide studebimus quod Dns. noster Johannes rex Anglie pactum et securitatem vobis et aliis, tam clericis quam laicis, negotium quod inter ecclesiam Anglicanam et ipsum regem versatum est contingentibus, firmiter observabit, secundum formam pacis ei a domino Papa transmissam, et ab eo acceptam. Et si forte, quod Deus avertat, rex ipse, vel aliquis alius ex parte sua, contraverit, nos pro ecclesia contra violatores securitatis et pacis mandatis apostolicis inherebimus, et ipse perpetuo vacantium ecclesiarum custodiam amittet. Preterea promittimus quod si quid omisum est, vel minus plene factum, circa hoc negotium in hoc scripto, propter accelerationem adventus vestri in Anglia, id cum noveritis secundum predictam formam perficietur. Et in hujus rei testimonium has litteras nostras patentes vobis transmittimus. Valete in Domino. Hec autem omnia, sicut supradicta sunt, firmiter nos observaturos noveritis, nos de mandato domini regis, tactis sacrosanctis Evangeliiis, spontanea voluntate, corporali juramento firmasse. Iterum bene valete."

This MS. is endorsed by the hand of Prior Henry of Estry:—"Promissio Comitum et Baronum multorum sub sigillis suis, quod facient regem Johannem firmiter tenere pactum quod fecit de pace et securitate nobis et nostris."

M. 247, 1216. A notice addressed by Peter, Bp. of Winchester, the Abbot of Reading, and Pandulph the legate to the Abp. of Cant. and all his suffragans, announcing that they have received apostolical letters commanding them to proceed by way of ecclesiastical censure against the barons who are in arms against the King. The Abp. and the Bps. are required to publish the sentence against the barons on all Sundays and festivals, the penalties of suspension, deposition, and excommunication being threatened against any who are disobedient.

With a few verbal variations this document is given in Wendover, Ed. Coxe iii. 336.

K. 2, 1262, 3, and 4. This MS., consisting of a larger and a smaller piece of parchment, contains contemporary copies of six documents which narrate the history of the dispute between Henry III. and his barons up to the 12th May 1264, two days before the battle of Lewes.

1. The award of Louis IX., acting as arbitrator between the parties, 22nd Jan. 1263.

2. The letter of Urban IV. absolving the King from the oath by which he had sworn to observe the provisions of Oxford. The Pope, employing a bold metaphor, asserts that "Egressus Sathanas a facie Domini, et mitens ventum validum a regione de Styge, regnum Anglie concussit acriter, ollamque indignationis in ipso succendit." 1st Sept. 1262.

At the foot of this are written the names of several royalist partisans:—W. de Breuse, J. de Baylol, H. de Perci, R. le fil. Petri, Jacobus de Aldithele, H. de la Fuche, W. de Clifford, and Rob. de Nevile.

The remaining three documents, written upon the smaller piece of parchment which is sewn to the larger, are to be found under the date in the "Eulogium

"Temporum."

They are:—

1. The barons' address to the King. This was sent by Earl Simón and G. de Clare on behalf of the confederates.

2. The King's answer of defiance to the barons. Lewes, 12th May.

3. The King of the Romans and Prince Edward to the Barons, and especially to S. de Montfort and G. de Clare, whom they charge with aggravated treason. Even in this last challenge an offer of a safe-conduct is made to the leaders if they will submit their grievances to the decision of the courts. Lewes, 12th (possibly 13th) May.

Probably an agent on the spot sent these copies to the convent at Canterbury in order to keep the brethren well informed of the course of contemporary politics. On a vacant space some scribe of the period has written, "Beatus es Symon Barjona," an indication of the tendency of the writer's opinions.

K. 11, 1311. A roll of four membranes, entitled, "Ceux sunt les noveles ordenances faites a Lundres, lan du Regne nostre seigneur le rei Edward filz le rei Edward quynt, et par mesme le rei confimes, et de sa graunt seal ensealles. Et, desouz mesme le seal, les dites ordenances et le conferement sunt en la tresorie de ceste eglise en garde."

This is a contemporary copy of all the documents relating to the reforms imposed upon Edward II. by the clergy and the adherents of the Earl of Lancaster. The whole series is included, beginning with the King's consent to the appointment of ordainers in 1309, and ending with the forty-two ordinances which, it is here stated, were proclaimed in the churchyard of St. Paul's, London, on the 27th Sept. 1311, by Simon, Bishop of Salisbury.

Two forms are given for the coronation oath: one, which is in Latin, is to be used if the King be "literate"; the other, in French, to be taken by an "illiterate" King.

If the clause in the title, which declares that the original instrument under the King's seal is "in the treasury of this church," refer to Canterbury, it is at the present time no longer true.

S. B. c. 72. A copy of a grant of manorial rights made by Henry V. to Sir John Phelip. The manors in question are stated to have been the property "Henrici Lescrop Chivaler domini de Masham," upon whose attainder they fell to the Crown.

The grant was dated "Southampton, 6th August," no year being mentioned, but as it is well known that the King was at Southampton in Aug. 1415, when Lord Scrope's conspiracy was detected, it is to be inferred that the grant was made to Phelip immediately after the manors were forfeited by Scrope.

By this grant reversions of other manors were given to Phelip after the death of Sir Thomas Erpingham, and again of others upon the death of Joanna the Queen Dowager, whom the King styles his "mater karissima."

M. 239, 1448. Confession of a felon lying in the gaol of the Prior of Canterbury, taken by Roger Twishden the prior's bailiff.

This so-called confession consists of evidence volunteered by the felon, charging a neighbour of his in the Isle of Thanet with having used treasonable language.

The substance of this paper goes to prove that at this time the people, becoming unsettled by the childlessness of the Queen and exasperated by the disasters in France, were beginning to speak disparagingly of the government and of the King himself.

The inculpated man is reported to have said that "the Kyng is none abyll to bere the flouridleys nor the schyp in his nobyl.—Oure Quene was none abyll to be Quene of Inglond, but and he were a pere of or a lord of this ream (he really was a farm-labourer) he woulde be on of thaym that shuld helpe to putte her a doun, for because that sche bereth no child, and because that we have no prynces in this land."

Behind this silly accusation there lay two others of a more tangible kind.

The witness deposes concerning his neighbour that whenever he got "a brode peny he paryd it wyth his knyfe, and putt it into a cuppe," and that he on several occasions had taken sacks of wool by night and carried them to a creek in the marsh where he sold them to the "Frensshmen of Depe."

M. 309, 7th July 1450. The King's proclamation of pardon, offered to John Mortymer and all his followers without exception.

Special letters of personal pardon are offered, without fine or fee, to all who shall apply for them. The proclamation states that the possession of one of these letters by a pardoned rebel would save him from future persecution.

M. 295, July 1450. Proclamation for the apprehension of John Cade, "callyng himself Captain of Kent." The lower corner of this MS. is torn off, and with it the day of the date, which, however, it is clear was later than the 7th of July, when the foregoing pardon was offered.

Cade is accused of having used magical books; of having "rered upp the Divell in the semblaunce of a blak dogge in his chaumbre where he was loggyd at Derteford"; of having, whilst living with one Thomas Dagre in Sussex, killed a woman who was with child.

Politically, he is charged with having been "yeres afore sworne to the Frensh partie"; with being now a "tale-teller," falsely saying that the King's late pardon was a snare; with desiring to enrich himself and bring himself to high estate; but there is no hint that he was a Yorkist partisan.

Finally, again a pardon is offered to those who have followed Cade, calling him Mortimer. These pardons, like the first, are to be granted to each person severally, and no one is to be allowed to plead the amnesty unless he have a written letter of forgiveness in his possession.

S. B. a. 90, 1483. Richard Knechebole of Mersham, in the first year of Richard III., informs the Prior of Ch. Ch. that Will. Lambarde and Stephen Harry have for some time, "ben sculkyng in wodes by day, and lying in wayte to robbe the Kynges lyege people"; that John Edwards having been robbed, the posse of the district assembled in Bokhangher wood and captured the robbers, who were thrown into prison to await orders from the prior.

The thieves at the time of their arrest were armed with "a payre of Brecontyns, a swerde, and a staufe of heasel," and these weapons offensive and defensive remained in Knatchbull's hands.

C. 242, circ. 1536. These are two precepts issued by the Prior of Canterbury, who calls upon his tenants at Hollingbourne and Chartham to serve the King in arms.

The formula is the same in both cases, the names only being charged. "The Kyngs grace, for the repression of his rebellion in Yorkshire (Lincolnshire), hath dyrected hys letters, dated Wyndsores the 28th of the month of September, to the Pryour of Christchurch in Canterbury, that he shall furnysh lx able persones to be at Northampton . . . Wherefore the seide pryour according to his allegiaunce . . . dothe send this berar to you, being substancyall tenants, . . . soo that ye fayle nott to be at Christchurch at Canterbury on Friday nexte comyng at ix. of the clock before noone, as ye will answer at your peril &c."

"To the tenaunts and fermours of the manere of Chartham (Hollingbourne)." Signed in autograph, "Be Thomas Por. of Crystes Churche att Cantbury."

This levy appears to have been made for the suppression of the "Pilgrimage of Grace."

Rochester.

R. 70 a., circ. 1200. The case submitted to certain arbitrators by the monks of Rochester appealing against the acts of their Bishop, Gilbert Glanvil.

In this statement of grievances the monks begin with a history of their church, extending from the time of Lanfranc and Gundulph to the date of this petition; especially they record of each successive Bishop whether he were a friend of the monks or a despoiler—in their own words, "custos, vel predo."

Bp. Gilbert had intruded clerks into the benefices of the monastery, and had appropriated their revenues for the purpose of endowing a hospital at Strood.

This MS. is one of the curiosities of the Canterbury Collection, being the subject of an interesting story. Many years ago a minor canon, walking in his garden, heard a great clamour in the air; looking up he saw some jackdaws disputing for a piece of something which seemed to them fit for nest-building. In the heat of their quarrel they dropped the object for which they contended, and the minor canon picked up, not as the story goes ("Edinburgh Review," xcvi, 195) a Saxon charter, but this very MS., which he kept safely as long as he lived. At his death the parchment passed into the hands of the Rev. Fredk. Rouch, who retained it until this present year, when, seeing that the Dean and Chapter preserved their MSS. with reverent care, he returned it to their custody.

The incident is thus explained. When the muniments were catalogued in 1806 small store was set by those which possessed only a literary value, and these were put aside in some tower chamber, to which the jackdaws obtained access through a window. It is unnecessary to say that no MSS. now remain in half-forgotten chambers, or that jackdaws do not now build with "Saxon charters."

R. 70, circ. 1200. A memorandum in which the convent of Rochester continue the complaints begun in R. 70 a., this MS. having reference chiefly to the building and endowing of the hospital.

R. 47, circ. 1179. "Transcriptum privilegii Alex- andri Papæ" III.

A copy of a letter from Alexander III. to Prior Alan of Ch. Ch., confirming in very vague terms the supremacy which Canterbury had exercised over Rochester from the time of Lanfranc.

R. 48, 1243. A composition made between the Prior of Canterbury and the monks of Rochester. This is a preliminary agreement, by which the Prior of Ch. Ch. binds himself to produce the charters upon which he founds his claims to exercise jurisdiction over the Rochester convent.

R. 50, 1276. Insuperimus by the Prior of Canterbury of a charter of Abp. Theobald, dated 1155, which corroborates an earlier charter of Bp. Gundulph, given to the monks of Rochester.

Gundulph's charter, which is recited in full, was dated 1091, and in it the Bishop enumerated and confirmed all the acquisitions of the church of Rochester, commemorating at the same time the names of those by whose munificence the church had been enriched.

Subsidies and Taxes.

Taxes, tenths, fifteenths, duties on wool, subsidies in aid of the Holy Land, are indicated in the Chart. Ant. by many documents ranging from the 13th to the 15th centuries. These are chiefly demands for or acknowledgments of payments, made by the collectors, and they may be found by the references in the Index of Subjects under the head "Subsidies and Taxes."

One, more important than the rest, is:—

A. 120, 1534. Taxation of the diocese of Canterbury on account of a tenth, granted to the King by Convocation in 1529, and payable within five years.

This is a paper book in a parchment cover, authenticated by the seal of Abp. Carnmer. Twelve pages are occupied by the Act of Convocation, the remainder of the book being filled by the details of the taxation as it was levied upon the religious houses and ecclesiastical benefices of the diocese.

Saxon charters.

In the library of the Dean and Chapter is a volume which from the time of Mr. Kemble, who superintended its arrangement, has been known as the "Book of 'Saxon Charters,' or more shortly, 'The Charter 'Book.'" In this are contained twenty-two MSS. of pre-Norman date, nearly all of which are original grants from Kings and other great men of their day.

The Chart. Ant. also comprise a few similar MSS. which for some reason Mr. Kemble rejected from the Charter Book. It is to be noticed that at the time of the arrangement of the muniments in 1806 these Saxon charters had not been selected from the Chart. Ant., and that, therefore, each one bears a letter and number corresponding to its place in the catalogue made at that time.

The MSS. contained in the Charter Book are,—

M. 363, A.D. 742, Codex diplomat. 88. This is endorsed in a 10th century character "Libertates ecclesie 'Xpi Ethelbaldi regis Merciorum et Cuthberti archie- piscopi."

M. 340, A.D. 788, Cod. dip. 153.

"Privilegium Offæ regis Merciorum."

C. 69, A.D. 790, Cod. dip. 159.

Endorsed, "Offa rex Merciorum dedit Athelardo ' Archiepo. et ecclesie X' xc tributaria terre, lx vero ad ' emendationem ecclesie, xxx autem ad indumentum ' fratrum." The charter in the Cod. dip. is copied, not from this original, but from a register and a Lambeth MS.

C. 1, A.D. 803. Declaratio Atheheardi Dorobernensis Archiepiscopi de privilegiis ecclesie.

This MS. is not noticed in the Cod. dip., but it is given by Thorpe and Wilkins, and the publication of the Palæographical Society contains a photograph of it.

C. 2, A.D. 803. A copy of the last.

Contemporary endorsement, "Actum est in celebri ' loco qui vocatur Cloveshof anno ab incarnatione Xpi, ' dccciii, indictione x, die iii Id. Octobris."

C. 1,278, A.D. 812, Cod. dip. 199.

12th century endorsement, "Commutatio terrarum ' inter Kennulf regis et Wulfred Archiepiscopum."

14th century endorsement, "Carta Ceonulphi regis de ' Suordlinge quam dedit Vulfrede Archiepiscopo."

Published by the Palæographical Society.

C. 1,279, A.D. 845, Cod. dip. 224.

12th century endorsement, "Rex Egbertus dedit ' Werehorne Edrico."

M. 369, circ. 860, Cod. dip. 293.

"Privilegium Ealheri."

C. 1,280, A.D. 840, Cod. dip. 243.

"Privilegium Berchtwulfi regis Merciorum—An- ' glice."

M. 14, A.D. 863, Cod. dip. 288.

"Privilegium Ethelbearhti regis West Saxonum et ' Cantuariorum." Endorsed, "Merse ham."

12th century endorsement, "Rex Ethelberhtus dedit ' Merseham Ethelredo ministro suo."

F. 150, A.D. 898, Cod. dip. 324.

12th century endorsement, "Ælfredus rex dedit Si- ' gilmo terram in Farnlege—Latine."

C. 1,282, A.D. 900, Cod. dip. 328.

Title on fly-leaf, "Petitio cujusdam ad Edwardum ' regem West Saxonum—Anglo-Saxonice."

A title-deed composed in a narrative form; it begins, "Leof is the cythe hu hit was ymb that lond at Funtial ' tha fif hida," &c.

E. 206, A.D. 937, Cod. dip. 369.

"Privilegium Æthelstani regis Anglie."

This is a grant conferring land at Topsham, near Exeter.

Contemporary endorsement, "Toppeshammes boc."

T. 37, A.D. 670 (erroneous), Cod. dip. 370.

A grant from the same of the same land. Mr. Kemble, who obtained his copy from a modern transcript in the Lansdowne MSS., not having seen this original, describes this as a faulty copy of the last.

S. 261, A.D. 1023, Cod. dip. 737.

12th century endorsement, "Privilegium Cnuti regis ' Anglorum de donacione Sandwici, et consuetudinum ' ejus, et corone capituli sui."

S. 260, A.D. 1203.

A contemporary translation of the last into English.

S. 259. A copy of Cnut's grant.

R. 14, A.D. 949, Cod. dip. 425.

Charter of Eadred giving Reculver to Ch. Ch., Cant.

A duplicate of this is in the MSS. Cott., both that and this being accepted, on the faith of the attestation clause, as in the hand writing of St. Dunstan.

B. 1, A.D. 972, Cod. dip. 704.

Contemporary endorsement, "Ethelred cing (ge)uthe ' Ædrices cuythe and his lafe in to Xps. circece that his ' Boccing tempore Ælrici Archiepiscopi—scriptum ' Anglice."

C. 1,281, A.D. 1049, Cod. dip. 787.

Privilegium Eadwardi regis et Confessoris.

B. 2, A.D. 997, Cod. dip. 699.

"Testamentum Ætherici—Anglo-Saxonice."

This is the will confirmed by Ethelred in B. 1.

A. 207, Cod. dip. 790. Title on fly-leaf.

"Cyrographum Godwini Comitiss Anglice." A dispute between St. Augustine's and Leofwine, priest of St. Mildred's. This deed is almost defaced by ancient mildew. Thorpe, Dipl. Ang. 349.

C. 70, 12th century endorsement, "Thurstan dedit ' familie ecclesie Xi. Wimbisc. Anglice." Thorpe. Dipl. Ang. 577.

R. 17, 12th century endorsement, "Egelnothus Cant. ' Archiepiscopus tradidit L acras de terra Raculfensis ' ecclesie duobus hominibus suis ex consensu Decani ' ejusdem ecclesie." Cod. dip. 754.

The following MSS. are not in the Charter Book:—

R. 51, Charter 1059, Inspex. 1227. Inspeximus by the Bp. of Evreux and the Abbot of St. Andoen of a charter of Edward the Confessor, by which he gave Ottery to the church of Rouen. Cod. dip. 810.

The copy of Eadward's charter is as nearly a facsimile as the scribe of 1227 could make it.

H. 68, A.D. 1015, Cod. dip. 722. Will of Æthelstan, son of Ethelred II.

This Æthelstan gave Hollingbourne to Christ Church, which fact accounts for the finding of a contemporary copy of his will in the Chart. Ant.

C. 194, A.D. 1006. Cod. dip. 715.

Charter of Ethelred II. conferring privileges upon the church of Canterbury.

H. 130, A.D. 889. A conveyance by which Snithulf, Bp. of Rochester, demises half a plough-land at Haddun to Biorhtwulf. The deed in Latin, the boundaries in English.

DEAN
CHAPTER
BURY

After the proem, which is identical with that of Codex dip. 309, follows the grant,—“Ego Suithulf Epis. et tha higan æt Hrofes cestre dabunt Biorhtuulfo pres- byteri aliquem partem terræ in provincia [sic.] Cant. in regione que vocatur Haddun id est dimidiam aratri pro ejus placabili pecunia,” &c.

The deed is very coarsely written and bears the date 889, at which time Suithulf was Bp. of Rochester; but on the back is a very beautifully engrossed endorsement, which professes to be a confirmation of the demise by King Eadgar and Abp. Dunstan, who lived a hundred years after Suithulf.

It is difficult to imagine any circumstances which could require a simple purchase of a small plot of land to be confirmed by all the magnates of the realm after the lapse of a whole century.

The endorsement is in these words:—“+Eadgar cynning of his agenre handa sealde thas boc leofrice on thara gewitnesse the her benithan standath, Dunstan Arepis. Athelwold Epis. Oswald Epis. Ælfhere dux. Ælfwine presbyter ejus. Wulfstan Min(ister), Osgar Abbas, Ealdred Min., Eadelm Min., Wulfheh Min., Leofstan Min., Ælfheh Min., Wulfsige Min., Byrhtrie Min., Wulfsige Min., Leofric Min.”

Endorsement contemporary with the deed, “Haddun boc.”

C. 3. A charter of Edward the Confessor, written in English, and granting sac and soc, toll and team, &c. to Ch. Ch., Cant.

C. 4. A similar charter, also in English, given by William I.

In the invocation at the foot of the charter the King alludes to his predecessor. “For than thingan the ic habbe thas gerihta Xpe. for givene minre saule to ecere alyssednesse, eal swa Eadward King mi mai ær dyde,” &c.

C. 48. A similar charter of Will. II. written first in Latin and then in English. This parchment is much defaced, and the name of the King is lost, but the clause—“forgiven minre sawle to alyssednesse ealswa Eadward King, and min fæder (dyden)” —in the English portion, and a corresponding form in the Latin half, show to whom the charter is to be attributed.

C. 9. A similar charter granted by Henry I., “H. thurgh godes gefu . . . kining gret ealle . . . the Baulf. Archebishop and se hyred æt Xpescircean on Cant- wareberig habbath land inne freondlice, and ie kythe eow thæt ic habbe heom geunnon, thæt hi byon ælc thare lande wurthe, the hi hæfdon on Eadwardes Kynges dæge mines mæges, and on Willelmes Kynges dæge mines fæder . . .,” &c.

C. 41. An inspeimus of a charter of Stephen, written in English; he refers to the days of Edward his kinsman, of William his grandfather, and “Henrices Kynges dæge mines eames.”

C. 20, C. 14. Similar charters of Henry II.

Sandwich.

S. 262. A copy of Cnut's charter, by which he granted the town of Sandwich to the table of the monks of Ch. Ch., offering at the same time the golden crown from his head at the altar of the church. The original charter is in the Charter Book, and is 737 of the Codex dip.

S. 246. “Odo gratia Dei Baiocensis Epis. Lanfranco Archiepo et Hamoni Vicecomiti &c. Sciatis omnes quia Ego Odo Baioc. Epis. et Cancie Comes, omnes domos quas in villa de Sandwich habeo et omnes consuetudines mei juris ad ipsam villam pertinentes, pro anima mea et pro anima dni. mei Willelmi regis Anglorum ecclesie Xpi. Cantuar. in perpetuum possidendas concedo.”

S. 264. Henry II. grants to the monks of Holy Trinity, Cant., all the rights in Sandwich which they had in the reign of his grandfather, as ascertained by an inquest of twelve men of Dover and twelve of Sandwich.

The privileges conferred by Henry I. are to be seen in the copy S. 274.—2.

S. 274. 15th cent. copies of two documents referring to Sandwich.

1, 1282. H. Prior of Ch. Ch. grants to A(ileanora), consort of King E., all the rights, with certain specified exceptions, which the convent possesses in Sandwich.

2, 1127. Record of an inquisition taken at Sandwich, by the oaths of “xxix maturi, sapientes, senes,” to ascertain the rights possessed in Sandwich by the convent of Cant.

S. 269, 13th cent. A composition made between the Prior of Ch. Ch., and the men of Sandwich, before S. de Pencestre, Warden of the Cinque Ports.

S. 281, 13th cent. A deed of gift by which David del Kai and Agnes his wife convey to the convent of Ch. Ch., in pure and perpetual alms, all their land at the quay in Sandwich “præter furnum nostrum, quem contulimus conventui de Einesham.”

S. 269, circ. 1200. A letter from H. de Castello, Archdeacon of Cant., to Abp. Hubert, concerning the patronage of St. Peter's, Sandwich, and other matters in that town.

The Abbot of St. Augustine's had in Abp. Richard's time made a corrupt bargain with the vicar of St. Peter's; to whom he gave a pension “unius Bisancii,” in consideration of which he was allowed to intrude some of his monks into the church. It is mentioned that Herbert Pauper, a former archdeacon, had conferred (contulit) the church upon the “Provost of Sandwich,” but that he, preferring a secular life, derived no advantage from the gift.

S. 263, 1240. A letter to Henry III. from the barons of Sandwich.

The writers say that they could not give the King an earlier answer. “Cum pares et combarones nostri in Nor-mannie, Pictavie, Gasconie, Ybernæ, et Scotie partibus, et alibi, pro suis mercandiis promovendis, fuerunt absentes,” but now having consulted “significamus quod nos sumus fideles homines vestri, et de vobis terras et libertates nostras tenemus per servitium quinque navium, quos vobis invenire debemus semel in anno, ad summonitionem vestram, per quindecim dies continuos cum sumptibus nostris. Ita tamen in qualibet nave sint viginti homines, more maritimo armati, et unus rector. Si vero dicte quinque naves et homines, ut dictum est, in vestro servitio persteterint ultra quindecim dies, vos eosdam homines cum denariis vestris sustentabitis quamdiu vobis placuerit eorundem servitium quod. . .” &c.

S. 268 and S. 278 are parchment rolls recording business done in the Hundred Court of Sandwich, in the years 1281 and 1284 respectively.

S. 266, S. 267, and S. 279.—1286, 7, 8, and 9. These are annual statements of account rendered by the collector of Sandwich, acting on behalf of the convent of Ch. Ch. The receipts are given in a gross sum without details; the expenses consist of small amounts laid out in building materials and labour. A few entries show that the connexion of the town with the Cinque Ports involved the payment of small fees to officers and messengers despatched to the central port of the confederation. Among the items belonging to this class is one which hints at a tragedy with a thread of interwoven comedy. “In nuncio portando ad Ballivum apud Romanæ de Barbitonsore occiso.”

S. 282, 1276, S. 277, 1278, and S. 266, 1289, are accounts similar to the above.

S. 280. The report of the collector of the King's customs at Sandwich.

The dues recorded were levied upon wool fells and woollen cloth, both imports and exports; also there were collected “subsidiū iiii. de dolio vini, et xii. de libra.”

The MS. is not dated, but the King's 7th year is mentioned, and the writing belongs to the reign of Henry IV.

S. 275. Recepta quarundam navium de Baiona in portu de Sandwyco Anno Dni. MCCLXXI.

After the title follow eight paragraphs, each of which is occupied by a statement of the duties collected from some ship trading from Bayonne, with the names of the adventurers whose ventures were the subjects of taxation.

At the foot are eight entries of one line each, under the title:—

“Recepta Navium applicantium in portu de Sandwyco cum vinis cartatis tempore vendangii anno supradicto videlicet:—

“De Willo. de Gomband de Oleron mercatore xxxis. de vinis.

“It. de Johe de Fereres et Petro de Lyges mercatoribus xxix. iiii. de vinis.

S. 266, S. 283, S. 284. The quay at Sandwich, which belonged to the monks of Canterbury, was therefore known as "Monken Key," sometimes as the "Manor of "Monkynkey"; the officer who presided over its affairs was called the Custos, and he was bound to render an annual account of all money which he received and expended in the exercise of his office.

The references above given indicate three of these yearly statements, and record the financial condition of the quay for the years between 1385 and 1392. From these papers it appears that the chief part of the revenue was derived from fees paid for the use of the crane on the wharf; thus 2*d.* was charged for lifting a cask of wine, a millstone cost 6*d.*, a pipe of wine 1*d.*, whilst for 21 barrels of salmon 14*d.* was paid, "videlicet pro tribus "barrellis 2*d.*"

Cellars and warehouses were attached to the quay, the rents of which, upon weekly hirings, were received and accounted for by the custos.

Thomas Elys, the munificent merchant of Sandwich, is here mentioned in connexion with dealings in wine. "Item computat solutos Johanni Cundy, pro "fyggis et reisenys emptis anno regni regis Ricardi "secundi xii^o, xs. S. 253, 1563. Chirograph by which the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury convey a house in Sandwich, called St. Thomas House, to Roger Manwood, who cove- nants to found a grammar school upon the premises.

Songs.

S. B. b. 34 and b. 185. These are two MS. songs, believed to be unedited, and, from the place in which they are found, to be the composition of monks of Ch. Ch. They are written by different hands, and appear to belong to the 15th cent. :—

"I pray you come kyss me
My lytle prety mopse
I pray come kyss me.

Alas good man most now be kyst
Ye shall not now ye may me trust
Wherefore go where as ye best lust
For I wys ye shalnoȝ kyss me.

I wys swete hart yff that ye
Had askyd a greter thyng of mee
So onkynd to you I wolde not have be Where(fore) I pray you come kyss me."

Eight more stanzas follow, perhaps even less rhyth- mical than those given. The last verse brings the dis- pute to a comfortable conclusion, as has been usual in amorous songs from the time of "Donec gratus eram "tibi" to the present day.

"I now se well that ye are kynd
Wherefore ye shall now know my mynde
And as you owne ye shall me fynde
At all times redy to kyss thee.

Finis. J. Wolstan."

The second song has more merit, and scans fairly :—

"I will not flee
To love that hart that lovyth me.

That hart my hart hath in suche grace
Y^t of too harts one hart make wee
Y^t hart hath brought my hart in case
To love y^t hart y^t lovyth me.

For one that lyke unto y^t hart
Nev' was nor ys nor nev' shall be,
Nor nev' lyk cause set ys apart,
To love y^t hart y^t lovyth me.

Whych cause gyvyth cause to me and myne
To serve y^t hart of suserente,
And styll to syng y^t later lyne,
To (p) love y^t hart y^t lovyth mee.

What ev' I say, what ev' I syng,
What ev' I do, y^t hart shall se,
Y^t I shall serve with hart lovyng,
Y^t lovyng hart y^t lovyth me.
Thys knot thus knyht who shall untwyne,
Since we 'kynyt it do agre,
To lose nor tye but both enclyne,
To love y^t hart y^t lovyth me.

Farwell of harts y^t hart most fyne,
Farwell dere hart hartly to the,
And kepe yis hart of meyne for thyne,
As hart for hart for lovyng me."

Tonbridge.

A. 28, 1258. A composition between Abp. Boniface and Richard de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, settling the terms upon which the Earl should hold the manors of Tonbridge, Hadlow, &c., under the Abp.

Some reservations are introduced establishing the rights of the convent of Ch. Ch., sede vacante.

This, the prior's part of a tripartite indenture, occu- pies a whole skin of parchment, and presents an inter- esting picture of the Abp.'s installation banquet, with the great feudal lord acting as honorary servitor and accepting perquisites instead of wages.

F. 32, 1280. "Perambulatio leucate de Thonebregg "facta coram Dno. Stepho. de Pencestre, Dno. Johe. de "Cobeham, et Dno. A parchment record of the boundaries, knights' fees, and tenants.

Vernacular Tongue, MSS. in the.

A series—unfortunately not without large gaps—of specimens of our vernacular tongue, from the 8th cen- tury to the 16th, may be collected from the Chart. Ant.

The earliest examples are to be found in the Charter Book, and as most of the documents therein contained are reproduced in the Codex Dip., it is not necessary to do more than to indicate the references under the head- ing Saxon Charters in this report by which their place in Mr. Kemble's work can be found.

S. 260. The translation of Cnut's Latin grant is not in the Cod. Dip., but it may be as well to say that the

Latin original and the literal English translation, which are side by side in the Charter Book, afford a good opportunity for comparing the construction of the two languages.

H. 68, Cod. Dip. 722. The will of Æthelstan, the son of Ethelred II., is in its portfolio among the Chart. Ant. and not in the Charter Book. Mr. Kemble obtained a copy from some other source, and as this MS. is not referred to in his index, it is liable to be overlooked. This will is made interesting by the familiar style of the language, and the homely character of the Ætheling's bequests; he died young, and distributed his not very magnificent personal possessions among his friends.

C. 3, C. 4, C. 48, C. 9, C. 41, C. 20, and C. 14, all of which are English charters granted by successive Kings from Eadward to Henry II., are not known to have been printed.

M. 251. A burlesque conveyance in English rhyme, dated in the reign of an Edward, but furnishing no indication as to which King of the name is meant.

There are three endorsements:—

1. "A Saxon deed," 16th cent.
2. "The straungest deed that I ever sawe, 5 Oct. 1620."
3. "Given me by Mr. Vincent Denne, 1656." This is in Somner's handwriting.

The deed itself is written in an affected hand, as follows:—

"That wyte alle that nowthe beth
That this writ yhureth and yseth
That ich William the clockere Roberdes sone
That was wyle Muleward yne Duntone
Habbe ygive and ygranted
By thisse chartre confermed
Symon the mareschal and Crystine his wyve
The wyle that eny man is alive
That thridde dol of a burgage
That me well by heritage
In the burth of Duntone
Alrenuxt the vorsede Symone
Habbe and halde wythhute doute
The wyle the sonne geth aboute

Thys writ was ygive at Candelmasse
In the suxe and twentythe more ne lassse
The date of Edward houre Kynge
God him gyve god endingge."

Deeds such as this have before now been included among "Saxon" charters, and the 16th cent. endorser thought that this was a Saxon deed; at all events it is plain that it is an English one, even if it be Saxon, and it affords a good argument for those who believe that Alfred wrote advisedly when he used the name English and not Saxon to designate his own tongue.

M. 309 and M. 295. Two proclamations dated 1450 which refer to Cade's rebellion; they afford good examples of courtly English of their date.

I. 205. Depositions of witnesses, not dated, but belonging to the middle of the 15th century. The witnesses were Kentishmen.

"It ys to undyrstande that Jon Dounholm, a man of lxx wyntryn of age and more, seyt ther to that on hys holydom . . . ne ther was nevyr yssue out of that dych to that othyr syde . . . but when an ootyr made an yssue goyng yn and out by twyxt the two waterys, but for eny such yssue that same Jon Dounholm at alle tyme knew verryli of trowthe that thylke ooterys way was on the priory's grund," &c.

M. 347, 1475. A contract to supply cloth by a Salisbury clothier.

S. 297, 1481. Evidence of old men living near Whitstable.

C. 1,235, 1500. Pleadings and depositions, 15 feet in length, relating to a riot in Canterbury. The mayor, who led the riotous citizens, was indicted at the instance of the prior, who was aggrieved. Depositions, pleas, and rejoinders are all in the English of the time.

T. 31, 16th century. A bill by which it was proposed to sanction or compel the building of a permanent bridge between the Isle of Thanet and the mainland. This specimen is later than the last, but still the English has a construction not now in ordinary use. "The fery is so swared up with wose, &c., that now no fery . . . may be there, but only at high spring floods," &c.

M. 352. A fair copy, in the author's own handwriting, of a draft preface in English to Somner's A. S. Dictionary. Somner often consulted the Chart. Ant., and it is very probable that whilst so occupied he dropped this fair copy among the ancient documents. It is written with laborious neatness, but in the published book is superseded by a Latin preface of greater length.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER OF CANTER-
BURY.

Visitations.

A. 9, 1284. A letter sent by Abp. Peckham to the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury, which the writer desires them to preserve among their archives, to be used as evidence if it should ever be required.

The Abp. had been making a tour of visitations through the dioceses of Wales, where he had been dutifully received until he came to St. David's. At that place the Bishop at first refused to submit to his authority; claiming for himself a modified metropolitan jurisdiction, he consented to accept the writer as Archbishop, but rejected him in the character of Primate.

The Abp. appealed to ancient precedent, refused to entertain the subtle distinction between an archbishop and a primate, and finally, recalling the circumstances of the Bishop's own consecration, when he professed obedience to the Abp. of Canterbury as his metropolitan, he induced him to withdraw his opposition.

Foreseeing that this victory in a fairly-fought field would settle the question of supremacy for ever, the Abp. caused this letter to be written with scrupulous formality, so that it might be available as evidence if ever, in days to come, a Welsh bishop should refuse allegiance to the Canterbury church.

M. 390, 1293. Two parchments which relate the process of an abortive attempt made by the commissary of the convent of Canterbury to visit the parish church of Maidstone, sede vacante.

F. 29, 1294. Memorandum of a visitation made at the church of Feyrfield by the commissary of the convent of Canterbury, sede vacante.

The visitation revealed a lamentable state of affairs:—"Ibi unus Antiphonarius nullius usus nec alicujus valoris, et una legenda nullius valoris. Deficit ibi Psalterium, et manuale, et processionale, et ordinale, et collectarium, et martilogium. Parietes cancelli debiles sunt, quia pleni sunt foraminum. Cimiterium est dedicatum et non ecclesia, eo quod est de ligno et plastrum terræ. Rector nullum bonum facit in parochia, et vendidit isto anno omnes fructus. Capellanus habet porcionem suam ita exilem, quod non potest vivere, nec se honeste sustinere ibidem. Simon Capellanus notatur de quadam Natekina, et constat melius quod sit verum quam falsum. Clericus ecclesie uxoratus est."

This MS. rightly reports that the see was vacant on Trinity Sunday 1294, for although Abp. Winchelsey had been elected, he was detained in Rome, awaiting confirmation, until the autumn of that year.

A. 197, 1334. A parchment endorsed, "Instrumentum non abbreviatum super processu visitacionis Dni. J. Archiepiscopi, in quo instrumentum continetur modus perfectionis Dni. R(icardi Oxenden) per dictum Archiepiscopum judicialiter approbatum." Abp. Stratford made this visitation of the chapter for the purpose of keeping his right alive, and the pretended scrutiny into the legality of the prior's right to hold his office was a mere formal act.

W. 170, 1498. Roger Church, "decretorum doctor" and commissary of Canterbury, notifies to the Prior and convent of Worcester that, by authority of Abp. Morton, he intends to visit their church, the See of Worcester being vacant.

A. 21, 1534. The King directs all dukes, earls, . . . and constables to protect and assist the Abp. and his commissary during a visitation which he intends to make throughout his province.

H. 118, 1598. The Dean and Chapter of Hereford protest against their Bishop's claim of a right to visit them.

Wills.

B. 2, A.D. 997. "Testamentum Ætherici," who gave Bocking to Ch. Ch. Cod. dip. 699.

C. 70. "Testamentum Thurstani."

H. 68, 1015. Will of Æthelstan Ætheling. He gave Hollingbourne to Ch. Ch.

His swords, drinchorn, and silver-plated trumpet are bequeathed to his friends, and certain parcels of land which he formerly (wrongfully?) took are restored to the original owners.

W. 223, 1494. Contemporary copy of a mandate from Alexander VI. to the Abbots of St. Augustine, of Westminster, and of St. Albans, requiring them to promote the provisions of a Bull of which he subjoins a copy.

DRAWN AND CHAPTER OF CANTER-
BURY.

By this latter instrument the jurisdiction of the Abp. of Cant., and during the vacancy of the see, of the Prior of Ch. Ch., in matters touching the probate of wills is settled and confirmed.

W. 209, 1294. Probate copy of the will of Richard de Suthchurch (Essex) Militis. He directs that seven quarters of wheat shall be distributed to the poor on the day of his funeral, on the eighth day after, and at his month's mind. For the space of a month five poor women, in commemoration of the five joys of the Virgin, are to receive a white loaf with appropriate drink (compagnium). He gives liberal legacies to his workmen and friends, to one of whom he bequeaths "viginti marcas cum palfredo bayo."

W. 218, 1313. Copy and probate of the will of Abp. Winchelsey.

His books and many rich vestments were given to his cathedral church, and each of his servants, down to his barber who had followed him to Bordeaux during his persecution, was rewarded by a legacy.

A. 14, 1327. Original will of Abp. Walter Raynold.

He bequeaths to his church vestments and hangings embroidered with raised figures representing the martyrdom of St. Thomas of Canterbury; also a precious pontifical ring, set with a sapphire surrounded by emeralds, which once belonged to St. Wulstan. To the shrine of St. Thomas he leaves a ring set with a sapphire engraved with the figure of a lion. He leaves to the shrine of St. Edmund at Pontigny a ruby ring; this he directs shall be suspended to the feretory by a silken lace. To the churches of Worcester, New Windsor, St. Thomas de Acon in London, Wimbledon, Sawbridgeworth, St. Katherine by the Tower, and Walsingham, he bequeaths ornaments and altar furniture. His books are to be distributed among his clerks, but a Bible in three volumes is left to the Prior and convent of Canterbury. To John of Eltham, the King's brother, he gives "unum gladium de guerra cum apparatu de argento deaurato cum zona & coopertura de serico rubeo"; to the Queen Dowager a gold clasp; and to the Bishop of Ely, the superintendent of his executors, a ring with a fine square sapphire.

W. 234, 1337. The will of W. de Turvill, Canon of Lichfield.

He leaves 300 marks to the fabric of his church, namely, for the new work in the choir, and for the lengthening of the Lady Chapel. A hundred pounds are assigned to the succentor and vicars of the cathedral for their encouragement in divine offices, a cup to the dean, and a sum of money to each of the testator's "con-canon."

Many churches and two orders of friars are among the legatees, and a hundred pounds are directed to be expended in masses.

W. 219, 1348. Copy of the will of Abp. John Stratford.

The bequests are such as are usually found in the wills of churchmen of exalted rank: pennies to the poor, fifty masses by fifty priests, relics, and vestments to his cathedral, legacies to his relations, and in addition many sums of money were assigned to the repairs of specified bridges, the testator's birthplace and his former diocese of Winchester not being forgotten in this particular.

The Abp.'s best new mitre was left to the convent of Ch. Ch., upon condition that it should never be alienated. It might be lent to succeeding archbishops, providing that the borrower deposited sufficient security; or even it might be broken up, if out of the materials some good and enduring thing were made for the use of the monastery.

S. B. c. 24, 1366. Copy of the will of W. Edyndon, Bp. of Winchester.

This MS. is much torn, the bottom of the sheet being entirely lost, but the part which remains is fairly legible.

W. 210, 1377. The will of Alice, widow of Alan de Thorlethorp, citizen of York. The property specified consists of veils, hooded tunics, and other trifling articles of dress. The testatrix ordains that her body shall be buried in the minster church of York, "et non aliter, videlicet, coram ymagine crucifixi, ubi filius meus Dns. Henricus divina celebrare consuevit."

W. 220, 1398. Copy of the will of John Bukyngham, Bp. of Lincoln.

His chief bequest concerns the foundation of Bukyngham's Chantry.

The will was executed at Canterbury "in quodam manso vulgariter Meistr Omers nuncupato." [As to this name, see Willis in Archaeol. Cant. vii. 96-9.]

W. 221, 1421. Probate and copy of the will of John Kent, of the parish of St. Werburg in Hoo. The testator was a yeoman, who left to 40 priests, to be nominated by his exors., ten shillings (or threepence to each) for celebrating three masses, "unam de Trinitate, aliam de Sca Maria, et terciam de requiem."

He left also ten marks "ad le gyffhale (gift-ale) See. Werburge sustentand."

W. 212, 1428. The will of Robert Clifford Armiger of Welle and Garrington (in Littlebourne). This instrument is drawn in the shape of a bipartite indenture, one part remaining in the custody of the Prior and convent of Ch. Ch., so that the will was irrevocable. The provisions of the deed are so favourable to the monastery that it is probable that this was given as security for performance of a contract, or for payment of a debt.

W. 213, 1437. The will of Hen. Gerard, chaplain.

The whole of the small personal estate is directed to be expended in pious works for the benefit of the testator's soul. He directs that his missal shall be given to some priest, who at his death shall bequeath it to another with the same condition, "ut sic vicissim, succedente tempore, ab unoquoque sacerdotum, pro tempore suo, predictum missale habente, pro anima mea specialius exoretur."

W. 222, 1348. One of Abp. Stratford's exors. renounces his office, and by this deed, executed by the Prior and convent of Ch. Ch., is totally exonerated.

W. 214, 1453. The will of Dame Joan Brenchley.

The property, one manor excepted, is assigned to pious uses, especially to the endowment of a chantry in the church of Bixley, but the residual estate is to be employed in almsdeeds.

W. 215, 1456. The will of Thomas Doncastre, citizen of York.

W. 216, 1459. The will of Anne "sometyme the wif of John Martyn Justice, late the wif of Thomas Burges, made at Gravene the viii day of Aprill the xxxvi yer of the reigne of Kyng Harry the VIth."

The property, consisting of estates lying in the neighbourhood of Faversham, is left to the sons of the deceased as tenants in tail. She directs that the rents of one estate shall be allowed to accumulate for three years, and that the total sum thus obtained shall be employed for the benefit of her soul.

W. 217, 1655. Will of Mrs. Margaret Bargrave of Canterbury. W. Somner was appointed sole executor, and it is probable that this document strayed from among his private papers into the Chart. Ant.

Wine given by the Kings of France.

F. 90, 1179. The original grant by Louis VII.

Louis VII. in 1179 gave to the convent of Ch. Ch. an annual allowance of a hundred modii of wine as a propitiatory offering to St. Thomas, at whose shrine he had just offered his devotions for the purpose of obtaining the saint's interposition in favour of his son, who was dangerously ill. That the gift was made in anticipation of, and not in gratitude for, his son's recovery is proved by the date—"Que omnia, ut perpetuum stabiliatem obtineant, sigilli nostri auctoritate, ac regi nominis karactere subtus annotato, presentem cartam precepimus communiri. Actum Cantuarie Anno ab incarnatione Domini MCLXXIX. Astantibus," &c.

The great seal of the King, the "character" of his name, and the autograph signature of Hugo the Chancellor, give authority to this instrument.

F. 91. A duplicate of the above.

F. 92, 1180. Philippe II. in the first year of his reign granted to the convent of Ch. Ch. this confirmation of his father's gift of wine. Neither this confirmation nor Louis VII.'s charter makes any mention of the illness from which Philippe was suffering when his father made his pilgrimage. By the terms of these charters the monks were allowed to claim the hundred muids of wine, at the time of the vintage, in the castle of Poissy, and free passage clear of all toll and custom was granted as far as it lay in the King's power.

To this document are attached the great seal, the royal monogram, and the signature of the same Hugo the Chancellor.

F. 94, 1189. A short additional charter of Philip Augustus.

He prescribes that the wine shall be measured by the standard of Paris, and that the vineyards of Triel shall supply it. Alluding to the part he was about to take in the third crusade, the King commands the Provost of Poissy to deliver the wine to the Canterbury monks even if after three years he shall not have returned from an expedition which he is about to undertake.

F. 99, 1235. Charter of Louis IX. (executed vacante cancellaria, but bearing the king's seal and monogram) by which the grant of wine is confirmed in the terms of the original gift.

F. 100 and F. 101, 1244 and 1263. Two deeds of inspeximus certifying to the existence and authenticity of the last charter.

F. 146, 1478. Charter of confirmation given by Louis XI.

F. 145, 1478-80. Another confirmation by Louis XI. Beside renewing the gift, this king consents that the wine shall be delivered in Gascony and the Bordelais; the reason assigned for this concession being that the country round Poissy was ruined and the vines destroyed.

The mui had apparently ceased to be a standard measure, and it is therefore, to avoid ambiguity, declared that three muis make two pipes, and that these two pipes are one tonneau. We learn elsewhere in these MSS. that the mui contained 16 gallons.

The convent at one time possessed three other original charters referring to this subject, namely, a second of Saint Louis, one of Philippe IV., and one of Charles IV. These have disappeared, recitals only remaining preserved in certificates of inspeximus, whilst the duplicate of the charter of Philip Augustus, seal and all, was sold not long ago in a London auction-room, and is probably at present in some private collection.

Affixed to F. 145 by a parchment lace, the point of junction being rendered inviolable by the impression of the King's secretum, are four documents signed by great officers of state, whose concurrence seems to have been required to make the King's grant operative. It would appear that in the time of Louis XI. many intermediate officials interposed themselves between the royal donor and the distant receiver of a favour.

F. 125, F. 126, F. 157, 1479. Three instruments signed by Johan le Grant, Lieutenant-General of the Seneschal of the Boulonnais. These documents recite the charter of Louis XI., and promise the co-operation of the Seneschal, whose seal in fine red wax is attached.

F. 138. Permission, under the seal of Henry II., to import the French wine.

F. 93. A similar grant of Richard I.

F. 95. A similar grant of John.

F. 148. A similar grant of Edward IV.

F. 149, 1514. Copies of all the charters relating to the wine which the convent possessed in 1514, certified by Nicholas Lytlington, official of the Archdeacon of Canterbury.

F. 100, F. 108, F. 110, F. 112, F. 113, F. 147. Copies of some of the above-mentioned charters, and of three others now lost.

F. 114. A humble petition from Prior Goldstone, addressed to the King of France.

The prior writes that the delivery of the wine has been discontinued for many years owing to the long wars of the time; peace being re-established, he asks that the wine may be sent as it formerly was.

F. 128. A similar petition written on fine parchment.

In the book of Ch. Ch. letters there is a draft of a petition to the French King in the handwriting of Prior Sellyng, Goldstone's successor, wherein the anxiety of the writer is plainly expressed in the erasures and interlineations by which he elaborated the style of his composition. The same volume (No. 11), contains a letter which alludes to the King's goodwill in the matter of the wine, and reports that in a conversation on the subject he asked if the messenger "had any tokyn of "Saint Thomas . . . made as he mygth wer hit on "hys hatt in worshipping of St Thomas, the whiche "wer to him a gret p. . . (hiatus)."

F. 134. Free pass for the wine through the manor of Andeley, given under the seal of Walter Abp. of Rouen.

F. 122. A duplicate of the last.

A great number of free passes similar to these are among the MSS. of this group. These were given by French lords whose lands lay upon the roads leading from the vineyards to the coast, at the time when, according to the original arrangement, the wine was received at Poissy and embarked at Rouen or Witsand.

F. 104 to F. 107, 1288 to 1300. Reckonings, made by the resident agent of the convent, of the several parcels of wine received from the different growers at Triel. From these it appears that at the time of the vintage each tenant belonging to the district contributed a quantity of wine or grape juice, small or large in proportion to his holding. We learn, from allusions in these papers, that the sum of these contributions seldom amounted to a hundred muids; in this case the prior appears to have been a loser, unless the King by special grace furnished the quantity which was lacking from his own stores. One item will show the manner of keeping these accounts:—"It. Annete le Plaiter iii "sest. de sa vingne de la Fosse."

F. 59, circ. 1300. Letters written from Triel to the prior at Canterbury. From these we gather that at the date Rob. de Lonjumeau (de Longojumello), a native of the district, was the prior's resident agent; that inspectors from Canterbury were sometimes sent over to check his proceedings; and that he was considered to be on the staff of the priory, receiving with the other bearded servitors his periodical gifts of livery cloth, the quantity of which it may be seen did not always give him satisfaction.

In addition to the wine derived from the King's gift, the convent produced some on a small estate of their own at St. Brice; the agent who superintended the collection of the wine at Triel also managed the cultivation of the vineyard at St. Brice.

F. 96 and F. 97. Two certificates in which Peter Bishop of Paris testifies that Richolda, widow of Guido Groolai, has given to the convent of Canterbury five quarterii of vineyard at St. Brice.

York.

The portfolio lettered Y. contains some parchments of the 14th cent. relating to disputes between the canons of York and the college of vicars choral (College of St. William) in the cathedral church; also some legal instruments connected with the endowments of this corporation.

Among the Chart Ant. are many MSS. which cannot be collected into groups, the subjects of which they treat being mentioned only in one or two places; but since many of these are illustrative of social and ecclesiastical life in the Middle Ages, they demand just so much notice as will make known the fact of their existence. Some examples of these miscellaneous MSS. will bring to a close this report of the examination of the Canterbury Chartæ Antiquæ: the registers, the volumes of Ch. Ch. letters, and to a great extent the three volumes known as the Scrap Books, being still undescribed, will follow in another report.

Miscellaneous.

A. 149, 1307. A notarial act certifying to the restoration of Abp. Winchelsey after his suspension by Clement V.

A. 10, 1285. Rob. de Stangrave, having been convicted of breaking into the Abp's park at Malling, called Le Plessit, binds himself with three sureties to make atonement.

X. 6, 1338. The Prior of Ch. Ch. declines to take part in a provincial chapter of English Benedictines; pleading that he, with his horses, his familia, and all his posse, have been summoned by the King to repair to one of the sea-side manors belonging to the convent, there to assist in repelling a foreign enemy, who has already carried fire and slaughter to several places where he has landed. The MS. is nevertheless dated from Canterbury.

S. 395, 1366. The prior, summoned to a Benedictine chapter at Northampton, refuses, for various reasons, to be present.

H. 122, H. 123. Two instruments, by the first of which Abp. Theobald gives a life interest in the tithes of Hellege [Eleigh] to Peter Scriptor his secretary, and by the second the prior and convent confirm the gift.

K. 12, 1329. A copy in Somner's hand of the patent of Edw. III. creating the eldest son of the King, qui pro tempore fuerit, Duke of Cornwall.

C. 279, 1223. The convent of Canterbury agree that, in consideration of a payment of forty marks, the body of W. de Clifford may be buried within the monastery of Cliffe.

C. 40, C. 85, C. 104. Short documents which refer to a custom of presenting a palfrey to each newly elected Prior of Ch. Ch.

B. 255. R^d fitz Symon gives to the convent two deer annually, which are to be delivered at Bocking.

D. 20. An expiatory offering made by W. de Tracy, one of the murderers of Abp. Becket.

DEAN AND
CHAPTER OF CANTER-
BURY.

This is the original instrument, fortified by the seal of the donor, who by it conveyed to the convent of Ch. Ch. the manor of Doccombe in Devonshire, "pro amore Dei, et salute anime mee et predecessorum meorum, et amore beati Thome Archiepiscopi et martiris, memorie venerande."

A. 42. A roll of six membranes, containing short lives of Popes and Archbishops of Canterbury.

The series of Popes extends from St. Peter, "princeps Apostolorum anno incarnationis dominice, secundum ewangelium xl^o, secundum vero Dyonisium xvii^o," to John XII. in 955.

Of the Abps., St. Augustine is the first, and St. Dunstan the last.

Occasional notices of remarkable phenomena and political occurrences are inserted among the biographies.

The original work seems to have been written by a contemporary admirer of St. Dunstan, concerning whom many marvellous stories are here recorded; the present copy, judging from the character in which it is written, was probably made in the latter half of the 13th cent. The reverse of the parchment, which the historian left blank, has been used for recording memoranda.

1. A long catalogue of privileges granted to Ch. Ch. by many Popes and a few Abps.

2. A fragment of early British history, beginning:—"Post Belinum Trojanum Silvius genuit Brutum," &c.

3. A 13th cent. record of the great folk-mote held upon Pennenden Heath in 1072, under the presidency of Abp. Lanfranc.

The history of this meeting is well known, so that it will only be necessary to say that this memorandum relates how "ex precepto regis ad instanciam Archiepiscopi, jussum est totum comitatum absque mora considerare, et omnes Francigenas, et precipue Anglos in antiquis legibus et consuetudinibus peritos, convenire ad diracionandas libertates et consuetudines quas ecclesia Xpi in terras et privilegiis habeat, atque in regias terras habere debeat."

Backed by public opinion, as expressed at this gathering, Lanfranc recovered for his church all the lands which Bp. Odo and other "proceres regni" had taken from it, and all the privileges which had been suppressed during the time of confusion following the Conquest. The memorandum ends abruptly, leaving the story half told.

Title-deeds.—A very large proportion of the Chart. Ant. are title-deeds, gifts of land or rents, and conveyances of purchased property.

The Great Catalogue, having been compiled with an eye to this class of documents only, gives all possible information about any particular deed which may be sought for.

M. 344, late 13th cent. A MS. of three membranes, partly written on both sides, containing a list of the knights' fees in Kent, with the names of the tenants and overlords.

C. 168, 1279. A bond, under the seal of the Abbot of Arbroath (Abirbroth), securing the payment of 100 shillings on condition that the Prior and convent of Canterbury should feed "in perpetuum, qualibet die" Martis, tres-decem pauperes, competentes, ex parte Dni. Alexandri Dei gratia regis Scottorum illustris, "in honorem Dei, et beate Virginis et Sci. Thome Martyris."

Printed in facsimile in vol. ii. of the National MSS. of Scotland.

C. 246. A long roll of many membranes, undated, but probably belonging to the 14th cent., containing a detailed description of the pictures which embellish the windows of the aisles of the choir of Canterbury Cathedral. To the description of each subject is added a verse illustrating the symbolism.

Example:—

"In medio. Tres reges equitantes—Balaam. Orietur stella ex Jacob et exsurget homo de Israel. Ysaïas, et Jerusalem.

Ambulabunt gentes in lumine tuo, &c.

In medio. Herodes et Magi—Christus et Gentes. Qui sequuntur me non ambulant in tenebras. Stella Magos duxit, et eos ab Herode reduxit. Sic Sathanam gentes fugiunt te Xpe. sequentes. Pharao, et Moyses cum populo exiens ab Egypto. Exit ab erumpna populus ducente columpna."

This MS. is printed in Somner's "Antiquities of Canterbury," and also in "Gostling's Canterbury Walk."

C. 1,303, 1445. The prior's certificate of a miracle performed at the shrine of St. Thomas.

This certificate tells the story of a congenital cripple who, coming from Aberdeen, visited various shrines without obtaining relief, but to whom an offering at the feretory of St. Thomas brought a complete cure; so complete was it that after a space of time, during which he visited the "Holy Blood of Wylsnack," he returned to Canterbury rejoicing, and on foot, (prosperare et pedester). Printed in Vol. II. of "Materials for the History of Abp. Becket."

S.B. a. 93. Six inquisitions, taken before the coroner for Essex, on view of the bodies of as many persons who met with violent deaths. They belong to the reign of Edw. III., and include cases of wilful murder, accidental drowning, and manslaughter in an affray. The custom at the time, as here demonstrated, was to compel the finder of the bodies to procure three sureties, and the four nearest neighbours of the deceased to find sureties also, assuming that these, or some of them, must know more about the death than anyone else. In two cases of murder, one victim was shot to death with arrows, and the other knocked down with a gisarme.

C. 167, 13th cent. H. Fitz Winoth gives land to the convent of Ch. Ch., directing that the income shall be spent in mending the books of the library.

H. 88, H. 91, H. 94. Three deeds by which Abp. Theobald gives, and Stephen and Boniface confirm, the church of Halstow to Ch. Ch., Cant. The two latter Abps. recite and approve a limitation of the gift by Abp. Hubert, who assigned the profits of the benefice to the purchasing of books for the library.

S. B. a. 226. Cruce signati. "Hec sunt nomina cruce signatorum in Archidiaconatu Cornubie." This is the title of a small piece of parchment, upon which is written a list of the recruits furnished to the third crusade by the several deaneries of the Archdeaconry of Cornwall. The volunteers were 43 in number, and their ranks included a tailor, a smith, a shoemaker, two chaplains, a gamekeeper (Gualterus de foresta), a merchant, a miller, two tanners, and two women, uxor Portejoie and Hawis de Trevisac.

Presentations to benefices, institutions, and inquisitions to ascertain the status of vacant benefices are here in great number.

Acts, inhibitions, and other proceedings in ecclesiastical courts occur in every division of the Chartæ Antiquæ.

C. 71. A bundle of nine writs, each bearing the seal of Henry II., and many of them tested by "Tom. Canc."

These are short grants to Ch. Ch. of free warren and other privileges.

C. 92, &c. MS. relating to fairs and markets which were granted as valuable concessions to the convent of Canterbury. The first charter is one by which Richard II., moved by respect for the church in which the body of his father was buried, granted four fairs in every year to the prior and convent. These were held within the cemetery gate, and the practice has only been discontinued in our own day. In addition to the fairs held within the precincts of the convent, others were granted, by royal charter, for the convenience of manors at a distance from Canterbury. A copy of the charter by which the city of Rouen held a weekly market is among these papers. Leases of standing-ground for booths, some not very ancient, are abundantly found in the collection.

S. B. b. 232. A printed pamphlet, 1642, "The King's Majesties Charge to all the Judges of England."

J. B. SHEPPARD.

THE CATHOLIC CHAPTER OF LONDON, SPANISH PLACE, MANCHESTER SQUARE.

The papers of which a catalogue is here given form a portion of the collections belonging to the Catholic Chapter of the London district, and are now in the custody of the Very Rev. Provost Hunt, Spanish Place. In addition to these here specified, a very large number of documents not here enumerated are to be found in the same depository, having reference, however, to matters of a private nature; in compliance with the terms of the Commission, of these no notice has been taken in the following pages. The papers are carefully preserved, and are for the most part bound in volumes. The whole series of original letters is well worthy of a more detailed description.

I have to express my grateful thanks to Provost Hunt for the facilities offered me in my examination of these papers.

A volume in folio, of 210 pages, consisting of original letters and papers:—

1. Letters of Mr. Cortess, of the Roman College, to Mr. More, agent in Rome, chiefly on the affairs of the college, A.D. 1623, 1624, pp. 1-68.
2. Records about the Archpriest Birket, A.D. 1612-1614, pp. 69-83.
3. Treatise on the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of Richard Smith, Bishop of Chalcedon, A.D. 1624, pp. 86-121.
4. Original letters and papers concerning the proceedings of the said bishop, A.D. 1624, pp. 122-210.

A volume in folio of 302 pages:—

1. Original bulls and other papers on the jurisdiction, &c. of the Bishop of Chalcedon, with answers to various objections concerning the same. They extend from 1611 to 1636.
2. Original letters and papers by Robert Pett, George Salvin, Thomas Polton, Anthony Champney, George Lea, R. Varnam, E. Bennett, Fr. More, Thomas More, R. Orontes, Thomas Broome, Edw. Kennion, Tho. Worthington, W. Casse, John Aynsworth, Rob. Clerc, William Rayner, William Stanley, and Fr. August. de S. Juan.

A volume in folio, paged from p. 211 to p. 761:—

1. Papers respecting the obligations and privileges of Regular orders, together with answers to objections concerning the same. Imperfect at end.
2. Various letters, papers, &c., in Latin, English, French, and Italian, by and concerning Mary Percy, daughter of the Earl of Northumberland, abbess of the convent of the Benedictine Nuns at Brussels, and the nuns of the same convent. To two of them are appended 27 signatures of nuns.

A volume in folio, of 495 pages. The more important documents are the following:—

- Printed address to the Catholics of England, 6 Oct. 1636.
- Papers connected with the proceedings of Sir Richard Aston at the Court of Spain, 1624.
- Letter of R. Orontes to Tho. More, 5 Jan. 1612.
- Letters and papers respecting the Spanish match.
- Letters of T. Swinnerton, 6 Sept. 1608, Tho. Worthington, 1 March 1613, and Benjamin Carrier to Card. Bellarmine, 10 Jan. 1614.
- Attestations given to pilgrims.
- List of the names of the more eminent English priests in and out of England.
- Extracts from the rental of the English College at Rome, A.D. 1575.
- Letter from Mr. Ratcliffe, of Yorkshire, to the Pope, 4 Sept. 1612.
- Letter from Dr. Matthew Kellison, 19 Oct. 1632.
- Lists of names of Catholic doctors and priests.
- Lists of secular and regular priests in Essex and Hampshire, in 1633.
- List of divines, metaphysicians, philosophers, and convicts in one of the English colleges on the Continent.
- Orders issued by Cardinal Morone for the English College at Rome, with several others issued by the Congregation de Propaganda Fide.
- Letters by Tho. Martin, Lond., 10 June 1611, and by F. More, Florence, 4 Sept. 1610.
- Epitaphs upon Cardinal Alan, Owen Lewis, and Rob. Persons.
- Notice of Edw. Latham, S. J. and Ch. Elmer, with various letters and papers of Edw. Latham, T. Fitzherbert, and Tho. Dingley.

List of English students who passed from the College of S. Omer to that of Valladolid, A.D. 1616-21.

Petition to the Pope by Ralph Jackson, Master of the Savoy.

Various papers connected with and transmitted to the Congregation de Propaganda Fide concerning the Bishop of Chalcedon, in 1631. Many have original signatures appended.

A volume in folio of 353 pages:—

A history of the visitation of Douai College in 1612, in which is given an account of the buildings of the same, its constitutions and rules, of the duties of the president and other officers, of the scholars and convicts, and of its receipts and expenses. It consists of seven chapters.

Visitation of the same, 4 Dec. 1626, with various papers connected therewith in 1626 and 1627.

A volume in folio, paged from 463 to 765. It consists of a collection of various letters and papers relating to Dr. Ric. Smith, Bishop of Chalcedon, in 1626 and the following years.

A volume in folio of 329 pages. The more important of its contents are the following papers:—

Regulations by the Cardinals Borghese and Farnese respecting the students of the English College at Rome, A.D. 1600.

Letter from Dr. Bishop to Pope Paul V.

Letter from George Conyers, 24 Sept. 1624.

Letter of Stephen Barnes, 30 Sept. 1629.

Bulls, briefs, and other instruments connected with the Legatine mission of Cardinal Pole into England.

Catalogue of the vicars general, and archdeacons appointed by the Bishop of Chalcedon, in 1625.

Lists (in several forms) of controversial writers on matters of faith in England from 1560 to 1593, with historical and critical remarks.

Extracts from Stowe's Chronicle, translated into Latin.

Compendium Studiorum Thomæ Stapletoni ad an. 1598.

A volume in folio of 287 pages containing miscellaneous papers, of which the following are the more important:—

Letters written by Gio. Bapt. Vives, Wm. Stanney, Cuthbert Crawford, F. Bonaventura (Anglus), Edmund Thornell, the Poor Clares of S. Omer, Tho. More, John Bosseville, Peter Fitton, Wm. Isham, Lewis Vaughan, Matthew Kellison, Card. Blanchetti, Anthony Champney, James Bennett, Wm. Ward, Cuthbert Trollope, and R. Bluett.

Interspersed with the above are various documents of a miscellaneous nature respecting Catholic affairs, chiefly between 1600 and 1630.

A volume in folio, paged from 536 to 759. The more important of its contents are the following:—

Letters written by Geo. Salvin, Geo. Bircked, Rob. Dormer, Edw. Farington, Tho. Brome, Fr. Augustinus de S. Joanne, [Father White], R. Orontes, Rob. Pett, Laurence Kellam, Anthony Champney, Wm. Bishope, W. Little, Anthony Dormer, Wm. Rayner, Francis More, Valentine Lane, Ro. Clapham, Jo. Ratcliffe, and Jo. Bapt. Fabiano.

Various papers, many of which relate to the affairs of the Bishop of Chalcedon, are interspersed throughout this volume.

A thin folio volume marked Lib. A., consisting of the following papers, irregularly numbered:—

1. De beatis tribus juvenibus Anglo-Saxonibus in diocesi Constantiensi.

2. A genealogical table of the English royal families, illustrative of Dolman's treatise upon that subject, A.D. 1593.

3. Chronological lists of English saints.

4. Translations into Latin of various letters and papers of the time of King Henry VIII.

A volume in folio, paged 158-462. It consists for the most part of papers connected with Dr. Ric. Smith, Bishop of Chalcedon, the more valuable of which are:—

Letters of Richard Blount, Rudisend Barlow, Gregory Muskett, W. East, Ch. Lovel, Lord Ward, Geo. Woolley, Jehn Hall, Charles Scott, Geo. Fortiscue, Tho. Arundel, Letters and papers connected with the history of the Bishop of Chalcedon.

Discourse by F. Thomas Courtney upon the affairs of England about 1650, during the exile of Charles II.

A folio containing 575 pages, in which, among many papers of a private nature, occur:—

Documents on the foundation and history of the English College at Rome.

On the affairs of the Bishop of Chalcedon.

On the state of the English College at Madrid.

On the state of the English College at Douay.

Letters to and from the Court of King James II. at S. Germain.

Among the writers are Lord Melfort, the Duke of Tyrnoll, J. Caryll, and J. Betham.

Descriptive list of the Catholic clergy in various parts of England in 1692.

Papers on the foundation and history of the English College at Lisbon.

A thick volume in folio containing a history of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, civil and religious, by Anthony Champney. It is entirely in the handwriting of the author, and is corrected throughout by him. As far as I am aware, this volume has never been used for historical purposes by any recent writer, and appears to be worthy of a careful examination.

A large bundle of miscellaneous papers, of which the following are the most worthy of notice:—

1. "The brief of certain examinations taken before the Lord Bishop of London and some other of H.M. Commissioners Ecclesiastical, in the presence of Tho. Mottreshed, notary public," 22 March 1613, to 29 March 1614, as to having heard Maas at the Spanish Ambassador's house. 3 pp.

2. The first and second "examination of Peter Wilkinson, servant to John Morrell, linendraper, taken by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury," 1 Dec. 1606. 2 pp.

3. "The examination of Tho. Morrow, taken 2 June 1603, before the Bishop of London." 1 p.

4. "The examination of Francis Richardson, taken 2 June, before the Bishop of London." 1 p.

5. . . . to Dr. Carier, at Liege, dated at Colloin, 5 Feb. 1614.

6. "Articles against John Clark, recusant," signed by Francis Palmer. 2 pp.

7. "The examination of John Roberts, of Cransvenight, co. Merioneth," taken before the Bishop of London and others, 2 Dec. 1607. 3 pp.

8. "The examination of Tho. Garnet, a prisoner in the Gatehouse," before the Bishop of London, 17 Nov. 1607. 3 pp.

9. Further examination of the same, 7 and 8 April 1608. 4 pp.

10. "The examination of John Kitchyn, of the age of 20 years," examined by the Bishop of London, 21 June 1603. 3 pp.

11. "The examination of Geo. Blackwell, archpriest, taken before the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Dean of Westminster," 1 and 2 July 1607. 4 pp.

Chronological account of the establishment of the Benedictine Nuns at Brussels, from 1598 to 1718.

Abbess Mary Knatchbull's account of the establishment of the Benedictine Dames at Ghent.

A volume in large folio, consisting of 492 pages closely written in a minute hand by the author, the Rev. Hugh Tootle, alias Dodd, to which he has prefixed the following title:—

"An historical and critical dictionary, comprising the lives of the most eminent Catholics from the year 1500 to 1688; being a complete history of the clergy, regulars, and laymen of that persuasion, who for the two last centuries have distinguished themselves at home or abroad by their piety, learning, or military ability; particularly of their writers, with a distinct account of their works and those of their adversaries, and explanatory notes, clearing many obscure parts of the English Church history; the lives of the bishops and clergy deprived upon the Reformation; those that deserted the Church of Rome; those that were temporisers during the struggle of the two parties; with an account of those that suffered on the score of religion, or for attempts against the Government, affording many particulars relating to their lives, trials, and execution. Together with the foundation of all the colleges and monasteries abroad, the date of their establishment, and founders' lives, of both sexes; besides a full and distinct account of the breach with Rome, the divorce, supremacy, dissolution of monasteries, and seeds of the Reformation under Henry VIII., its confused state under Edward VI., opposition it met with under Queen Mary, and last hand put to it by Queen Elizabeth; the various fortunes of the Catholic cause during the reigns of King James I., King Charles I. and II., and King James II., supported by a curious collection of original papers and letters never before made publick, and carried on with due regard to the parties and passions which divide mankind."

As might be expected, this work has much in common with Dodd's Church History, published in three volumes folio in 1737. His name nowhere appears in the present compilation. Prefixed are "The author's apologetic preface," "A catalogue of the books, &c. made use of by the author," and six commendatory letters addressed to the author by foreign ecclesiastics in the years 1718 and 1719. The present volume extends no further than the end of the biographies beginning with the letter L.

The following are the more important of the original authorities referred to above and quoted in the present volume. Their value is considerably enhanced by the fact that since these transcripts were made by Dodd several of the originals, then at Douai in the English College, have perished in the first French Revolution:—

1. A proclamation for banishing the English out of the town of Douai, 1578.
2. A petition of the English College at Douai to the magistrates . . . upon the above order, 1578.
3. The Bishop of Chalcedon's approbation of the regulars' faculties, 1627.
4. Mr. Smith's account of Lord Castlehaven.

RIGHT
REV. DR.
MANNING.

PAPERS in the CUSTODY of the RIGHT REV. DR.
MANNING, ARCHBISHOP of WESTMINSTER.

The papers described in the following Catalogue form a portion of the extensive series of documents connected with the Catholic affairs of England, which are at this time in the custody of His Grace the Archbishop of Westminster. Although coming from various sources, a large proportion of them naturally has reference to the ecclesiastical affairs of the London District. The portion here catalogued forms about one-half of the entire collection, exclusive of such documents as, from their subject matter, are of a private character.

I have to acknowledge with gratitude my thanks to His Grace for the liberal access which he afforded me to his valuable collection.

A volume in folio, marked E.F. containing original letters and papers, of which the more important are the following:—

1. Extracts from the letters of the Archpriest and others relating to the English persecution, 30 May, 8 June, 1 June, 1611, and from memorials of 4 June and 20 Sept. 1612, p. 1.

JOSEPH STEVENSON.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, OXFORD.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE,
OXFORD.

The various ancient documents, now in the possession of this College, are mentioned in the order in which they were brought to my notice by Mr. E. J. Payne.—

The oldest Computi, or Bursars' Accounts, of the College, that are now known to exist, are the following:—

"Computus Magistri Roberti Bower, Socii ac Procuratoris Collegii Magistri Willelmi de Dunelmo, Mickel Universite Hall vulgariter nuncupati, a Festo Sancti Michaelis Archangel, anno regni Regis Ricardi, Secundi post Conquestum, quinto, usque ad idem Festum anno revoluto." We here see it styled "The College of William de Durham, commonly called Mickel (Great) University Hall" (A.D. 1382, 3).

The following places in Oxford are named in this Account-roll as paying rents to the College, the Latin notes against them, as to the locality, being in a hand of the 17th century:—Maydenhall (in St. Peter's in the East); Olyfaunthalle, or Elephant Hall (in St. Mildred's Parish); Shield Hall (St. Mildred's); St. Thomas' Hall (St. Mildred's); University Hall (or the Lesser University Hall) in Schools Street (St. Mary's Parish); Brasenose Hall (St. Mary's); Hamptone Hall (St. Mildred's); St. Edward's Hall (St. Mary's); Stanton Hall (St. Mary's); Crowdale Hall (St. Peter's in the East); Lodelow Hall (St. Peter's in the East); Holwey's House and garden (opposite All Saints); John Baret's House (St. Mary's); tenement of John Brasier (St. Peter's in the East); the garden beyond the Castle (St. Thomas' Parish); Canterbury College (St. Edward the King); tenement of Richard Merser (St. George's); the shop of Pyry; tenement of William Sanders; tenement of Robert Westby (All Saints); tenement of John Wyndesore; tenement of John Shether—Waginarii—(St. Martin's Parish); tenement of Richard Cornewayle (All Saints' Parish); added to which are, rents from Holdernesse, (in the county of York). Against the "shop of Pyry" is a Latin note to this effect—"Perhaps at the corner of Carfax—but query." In another hand, "A false conjecture." (Who shall decide?) The mention of Brasenose Hall, at this early date, will not escape the reader's notice.

Among the chambers which then paid rent are,—“The principal Chamber. The chamber next to it. The chamber under it. The chamber above, the kitchen-garden (erbarium), near the hall. The chamber above the kitchen garden, in the other pleasure garden (disporto). The chamber with the hall. The chamber opposite the well. The chamber next to it.” Payments are made,—“To the Canon of St. Frideswyde, the proctor of the Abbey of Abyndone, the proctor of Osney, the proctor of St. Peter's in the East.” Then follow payments for commons and battels of the Fellows. Among these payments also are those,—“For the paving of Stanton Hall.” “For the paving of the Hostel (Hospitii);” in the latter being the items, “To ten boys working the sand for two days 5s. 2d.” “Ale for the workmen 12d.”

The following are the “foreign,” or outdoor, “expenses” for the year,—“Expenses of Master John Midylton and Master Robert Gower, going to London, and while there, on the Octaves of St. Hillary, with their servant M.J., and Robert Westby with his servant. First at Tettisworthe, drink 1½d., horse-bread 1½d. At Wycumbe, staying there the night, for bread 1d., ale 2d., eggs 2d., wine 5d., fire 2d., candles ½d., bed 1d., hay for three horses 3d., oats 6d., shoeing ½d. On the morrow, at Woxebrigge [Uxbridge], for bread 1d., ale 1d., wine 2½d., meat 4d., horse-bread 3d. At London, the same day, before supper, for drink 2d., for supper 11d., hay for three horses 3d., oats 6d. The second day at London, for breakfast 4d., supper 11d., oats for three horses 3d., straw 1d. The third day at London, for dinner 5d., supper 7d., oats 3d., horse-bread 1½d. The fourth day at London, for breakfast 2d., drink 1½d., supper 9d., oats 3d. The fifth day at London, for breakfast, in bread 1d., drink 2d., meat 3d., fire 1d.; for supper, in bread 1d., drink 3d., meat 2d., fire 2d., beds 2d., candle ½d., oats 3d. The sixth day at London, for dinner 14d. At night, for beds 1d., fire 1d., candle ½d., oats 3d. The seventh day at London, for dinner 12d., beds 2d., drink 2d., fire 1d., candle 1½d., oats 3d. The eighth day at London, at dinner, for bread 1½d., meat 4d., fire 2d. At night, bread 1½d., drink 2d., meat 2d., beds 2d., fire 2d., candle ½d., oats 3d. The ninth day at London, for bread 1½d., drink 2d., meat 4d., fire 1d. At supper, bread 1½d., drink 2d., fire 1d., beds 2d., candle ½d., horse-bread 2d. The tenth day at London, at dinner, bread 1½d., drink 2d., meat 3d., fire 1d. At supper, bread 1d., drink 2d., meat 3d., fire 1d., bed 2d., candle ½d., oats 3d. The eleventh day at London, for breakfast 4½d. At dinner, for bread 1d., drink 2d., meat 5d., fire 2d., horse-bread ½d., pay for three horses nine days and nights 5s. On the same day, after breakfast, the expenses of Master Robert Gower from London to Oxford.—At Woxebrigge [Uxbridge] staying the night, bread ½d., drink 1d., meat 3d., fire ½d., bed 1d., hay 1d., oats 1½d., horse-bread ½d. At Wycumbe, for dinner, drink 1d., meat 2d., horse-bread 1d. At Tettisworthe, drink ½d., horse-bread ½d. I also paid to our attorney in the Common Bench [Pleas] 6s. 8d. For wine given to Ed. Gifford and Alan Couper 10d. For a copy of the plea 13d. For wine given to David Hanmer 11d. For hire of one horse 20d.” On the above journey the servants, if they accompanied the Fellows on the road, must have walked, if they did not ride behind their masters. In the year 1383, David Hanmer, a Serjeant-at-law, (who was treated with drink, as stated in the Account) became a Justiciar of the King's Bench. His daughter, Margaret, was the wife of Owen Glyndowr.

The next Computus is for the 6th and 7th year of the same reign, (A.D. 1383, 4,) being the Account of Master John Taylor, Fellow and Proctor. In it repairs of the “White Hall” within the College, are mentioned. The “women who drew out the straw” (for the thatch) were paid 5d. “Red lead (cerussa) for the tilers 1d.” Moss 6½d. (for binding the clay walls). Red earth 4d. Mending the lock of the hall door 2d.; that of the buttery 1d. Under the repairs of Stanton Hall, the “stable” is mentioned. “For ale for the cleansers of the latrine (cloacarii) 1d.”

The next Computus is for the 7th and 8th year of the same reign (A.D. 1384, 5); being the Account of Master Richard Gysborn. Among the Expenses are,—“For gifts for having counsel, in wine and breakfast, and one writ and other matters 32s. 11½d.” “For wine given to the men of Abyndone, in the chamber of Gower 12d.” “To a kinsman of Belknap, (probably Robert Belknap, the then Chief Justice of the Common Pleas) 8d.” The manciple and cook, the barber, and the laundress, receive pay. The rent received for the “White Hall” (within the College) this year, is 12s.

The next Computus is for the 8th year of the same reign (A.D. 1385, 6); being the Account of Master John Pokelyngton (who was afterwards Master of the College). Among the sums expended are,—“For Taylor and Gower going to the last Parliament, at London 30s.” “For wine for Charlton and his wife 2s. 4d. For spices (dessert) 11d. For wine for Burley, and other necessaries 19d.” (not improbably, Sir Simon Burley, who was afterwards beheaded). “For mending a chalice 4d. For parchment for the register 4d. For parchment for the roll 4d.” As in the preceding year, the repairs of the Halls belonging to the College were carried on upon a large scale, those of Shield Hall more particularly. The walls of the College itself were repaired with straw; used, no doubt, for mixing with the clay.

The next is the Computus for the 9th year of Richard the Second (A.D. 1386, 7), but it is much mutilated at the beginning. From the accounts for their commons, it would seem that the Fellows were then but three in number. Among the “Expenses,” are,—“For wine given to the Chancellor [of the University] at the time of the Account 8d. For pears 2d. For moss (moss) and stones 12d. Paid John Leper 3s. 4d. Paid Edmund Keenyan 3s. 4d. For wine given to Charlton and his kinsman 3s. 8d. For spices given to the same 7d. For moss, and mending a roller (tribula) 5½d. For lattes [laths] and pyrnys 3s. 6d. To John Glasyer, for making windows for our Chapel, and other work, 6s. 5d.” (This is the earliest mention of the College Chapel in these accounts). “For a mortar, and the pestle thereof 4s. 4d.” Under the repairs of Drowdal Hall, a “board for the well” (tabula gurgitis) is mentioned, price 2½d. “For soudyr (solder), and the making thereof 20d.” “Red earth,” as being used for buildings, repeatedly occurs. The students in the College who paid rent for their rooms, were William Multone and Richard Pester.

The next Account now existing, is the Computus of Master Robert Gower, for the 11th year of Richard the Second (A.D. 1388, 9). Wyntyrtone has a room this year, in succession, apparently, to Multone; while persons named “Plymtone” and “Stapyltone” also pay for rooms. Four Fellows are now receiving commons and battels. Among the “Expenses” are “Wine and pears for the Chancellor 7d. To a writer (scriptori) 2s. For binding the quires (ligatura quaternorum) 5d. For one rake for the garden 6d. For a wheel of the
